Congress Probers Reveal Vast Hoarding Of Foreign Aid Cash

Pressure Put On Frondizi To Step Out

Observers Claim Argentina Crisis Still Not Settled

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Former President Pedro E. Aramburu conferred with President Arturo Frondizi Saturday night on Argentina's political crisis amid reports he would suggest that Frondizi resign.

Aramburu, called out of retirement Friday by Frondizi to help in solving the crisis touched off by Sunday's Peronist election victories, spent an hour with the President at his home.

NO CONFIRMATION

Some members of Aramburu's personal secretariat said he had gone to see Frondizi to suggest that he resign.

But there was no confirmation for the report, and neither Aramburu nor Frondizi made any statement at the end of their one-hour conference. Frondizi left to attend a state banquet for Britain's Duke of Edinburgh.

Aramburu, a former general, took over the government when Dictator Juan Person was ousted in 1955. Frondizi was reported to have offered him the post of foreign minister Friday, and Aramburu was reported to have declined.

Reliable sources said six top army officers have been arrested or dismissed, apparently because of the political situation.

The crisis appeared far from settled. Observers said the showdown might come after Prince Philip leaves Sunday to tour the provinces.

Observers said there appeared to be a tacit agreement among the armed forces to mark time until the husband of Queen Elizabeth of Britain ended his visit to Buenos Aires.

Despite denials by Navy Secretary Gaston Clement, reports persisted that Navy leaders wanted Frondizi to resign. And political observers interpreted a statement issued by Army generals Friday night declaring that "all sacrifices are necessary, even personal ones" as a possible suggestion to Frondizi to step down.

The conservatives and other opposition parties also were reported pressing for a quick showdown.

Frondizi called on ex-President Gen. Pedro Aramburu Friday night for help in winding up the crisis. But observers said Aramburu's mission appeared to be less one of meditation that of finding a way for Frondizi to step down without plunging Argentina into complete chaos.

Aramburu, who was provisional President after the ouster of ex-dictator Juan D. Peron, was said to be trying to convince the military-civilian cabinet.

Mother Faces Sentence For Child's Death

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UPI)—Circuit Judge Dave Archer has set Tuesday as the day of formal sentencing of a mother of four convicted of second degree manslaughter in the death of her daughter.

Mrs. Nora Bliley was convicted late Friday night and punishment was set at one year in jail. She was accused of beating and starving to death her 5 - year - old daughter.

The jury reduced a second degree murder charge to second degree manslaughter.

The woman's husband, M-Sgt. Henry Bliley, also was charged in connection with the death of their daughter, Teresa, but a trial date was not set.

A state witness testified she had seen the girl, who weighed slightly more than 16 pounds at the time of her death, eat from a garbage can. Another witness who baby sat for the Bliley's, said she saw bruises on the girl.

State medical authorities said the death was caused by a brain injury resulting from a blow by Mrs. Bliley "when the girl got into some corn flakes."

The authorities said an autopsy showed the girl had not eaten for 18 hours prior to her death.

The blonde, 26-year-old housewife remained calm through the entire five-day trial and showed little emotion when the verdict was announced.

DAMAGE IS HEAVY

Tornado Hits In East Texas

By United Press International

A major spring storm cut the nations midlands Saturday to spawn destructive tornadoes and rains in Texas and snow and floods across the northern plains.

At least two tornadoes splintered buildings in Texas, causing an estimated $500,000 damage, and slightly injuring two persons.

Mineola, a town of 3,800 in east Texas, counted tornado damage at $400,000. Officials said at least 30 commercial buildings and 25 to 30 homes were damaged by the twister. Two persons suffered minor cuts and bruises from flying debris.

OTHER DAMAGE

High winds caused an estimated $100,000 at Swan, Tex., just south of Mineola, and another small tornado hit a section of Tyler, Tex. unroofing a cotton gin and the glass-topped Garden Center building.

Tornado warnings were out for parts of Arkansas and Oklahoma as well as Texas. There were heavy snow warnings for South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa. The weather bureau said the storm would reach blizzard proportions in parts of the area, Kansas and Texas.

A blizzard combination of blowing and drifting snow moved from the Clayton-Dalhart area of Texas toward New Mexico. A. D. Norrid, 79, Carlsbad, N. M., died Saturday of injuries suffered Friday when the pickup truck in which he was riding was blown off the road.

At Raton, in norther New Mexico, a huge neon sign was uprooted from a concrete-steel base and part of the roof was blown off the high school. The heavy, dust - laden winds closed some roads briefly.

AMNESIA VICTIM

Vincent Marsala Found In Nevada

Vincent Marsala has been found in Reno, Nev. The 50-year-old Monroe businessman, missing for the past 12 weeks, is suffering from amnesia according to Father Dave Dabria, pastor of the Church of Jesus the Good Shepherd here.

Father Dabria told the Morning World and Monroe Police Chief James C. Kelly by telephone early Saturday that Marsala had been in Reno about six weeks.

Marsala, the object of an intensive search by law agencies throughout the country, had contacted a Catholic priest, Father Benedict Williams of St. Thomas Cathedral, in Reno seeking the priest's help in learning his identity. He was using the alias John Aaron and had been working as a dishwasher in a place in Reno.

TWO MEN

Aaron (Marsala) could remember back as far as Dec. 27, 1961, while in Dallas, Tex., accompanied by two men, according to information given to police. Father Dabria, who is pastor to Marsala in Monroe, said the last thing Marsala remembers was arriving on a bus in Dallas from New Orleans.

Marsala was first reported missing to police by his wife on the afternoon of Dec. 26, 1961 when she failed to locate him at his general contracting office at Selman Field. Police found the office showed signs of a struggle and his glasses and wallet were found on the floor.

Father Dabria said that the Reno priest gathered up Louisiana papers on the strength of his having remembered being in New Orleans and finally found an Alexandria paper with Marsala's picture in it.

Police reports stated Marsala told the Reno priest that while in

Ft. Polk Conditions Given By General

By JIM COTTON
World Staff Writer

Maj. Gen Harley B. West, commanding general at Ft. Polk, in explaining the condition there to national guardsmen at their annual state convention held in Monroe Saturday said, "The basic problem with those fellows is that they did not want to be recalled to service!!

Gen. West's 49th Armored Division was activated last fall and told to be combat ready and deployable in approximately 13 weeks.

Gen. West, along with Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, State Adjutant General, held a brief press conference prior to addressing the assembly Saturday night in the Crystal Ballroom of the Virginia Hotel.

Gen. Fleming recalled his post as chief of the National Guard in the pentagon, and stated, "I have visited in all the camps throughout the United States, and in my opinion, Ft. Polk is equal to any."

When asked if any other court martial action was expected, Gen West replied that court martials were something that were not foreseen, but something that just happened.

"However," he added, "there is a trial coming up Monday for a young man who showed disrespect."

West said that this soldier took a call from a newspaper reporter and was quoted as saying, "The situation is hilarious. It climaxes a long series of injustices."

Because of these statements, West said the man would be tried for disrespect because he put himself above the command.

Soviets Hike Demands On West Berlin

Russia Requests Withdrawal Of All Allied Forces

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviets have increased their demands on Berlin to include the complete withdrawal of American, British and French forces from the city, Communist sources said Saturday.

It was a hardening of the previous stand by which the Russians agreed to "token" contingents of Western allied troops remain in Berlin. Now they say they will permit only a token contingent of neutral troops there.

TOUGH STAND

American sources said the tough Soviet stand now ruled out the prospect of an early spring summit conference. But other delegations said deepening of the cold war could force a meeting between President Kennedy and Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Hopes for any agreement here were dim but Secretary of State Dean Rusk planned one or two more meetings on Berlin and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko before leaving here early next week.

The hardened Soviet position was outlined by Gromyko in one of the fruitless private meetings he and Rusk have conducted on the outskirts of the 17-nation disarmament conference here in the last fortnight. The Soviet position was described in greater detail in a speech by East German Chief of State Walter Ulbricht published in Berlin Saturday.

This was a day of diplomatic inactivity. Foreign ministers rested from the two weeks of intensive discussions that served only to confirm long-standing disagreements on Berlin, nuclear testing and general disarmament.

But Rusk plans one or two more meetings with Gromyko before leaving here perhaps Monday.

Army Deserter Steals Plane, Flies To Cuba

HAVANA (UPI) — A U.S. Army deserter from Amarillo, Tex., stole a light plane in New Mexico and hedgehopped across the United States on a solo flight to Havana where he asked "political asylum," it was disclosed Saturday.

An official Cuban government communique identified the man as Sgt. Bobby J. Keesee, 23.

The Pentagon in Washington said Keesee, a flight simulator trainer operator, has been absent from his post at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., since Jan. 30. A statement said Keesee went on leave Jan. 15, indicating his destination was Guaymas, Sonora, Mexico. He failed to report for duty as scheduled on Jan. 30 and was carried as AWOL until Feb. 28 when he was listed as a deserter.

"Keesee is also under investigation by the Army for passing bogus checks and for forgery," the Pentagon said. It emphasized that Keesee had not been cleared to receive classified material and "did not have access to classified material at his duty station."

The official Cuban communique said Keesee landed at the Ciudad Libertad (Liberty City) airport in the Havana suburbs Friday in a Piper Comanche plane and asked for asylum.

"Sgt. Keesee admitted he was a deserter from the U.S. Army and asked for refuge in our country," the communique said. It added that the American was being questioned by Cuban authorities.

Cooling Trend Expected Today

Afternoon showers brought a slight cooling trend to the Twin City area Saturday that is expected to stay through today.

The outlook shows fair and a little cooler today with the high temperature expected to reach 68 degrees and the low forecast to fall to about 43 tonight.

The high temperature Saturday was recorded at 75 degrees and the low at 47 degrees. Skies were partly cloudy as .22 inches of rain fell.

Early Break Is Unsighted In Talkathon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate held its first Saturday session of the year just for the purpose of hearing Southerners denounce efforts to outlaw the poll tax as a voting requirement.

It was the ninth day of the "friendly filibuster."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield called the session to help "drain off" some of the speeches. He hopes for a break in the stalemate and some action next week.

SENATORS TALK

The Senate met at 9 a.m. EST. Sens. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., and Lister Hill, D-Ala., talked throughout the morning.

At 1:45 p.m., the session adjourned until 9 a.m. EST Monday.

Eastland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee in which many civil rights bills are stalled, said federal control of voter qualifications is "contrary to our entire system of government."

Hill declared that powers reserved to the states by the Constitution, including the right to determine voter qualifications, are "a shield for protecting the liberties of the people and the rights of the states."

Eastland talked for an hour and 38 minutes and Hill for an hour and three minutes.

Mansfield won agreement for the Senate to meet again at 9 a.m. EST Monday in hopes of clearing away the remaining speeches allowed under Senate rules.

Some opponents of the Southern bloc have branded the talkathon a "filibuster." But acting Republican leader Thomas H. Kuchel, Calif., said it was "what is known as a friendly filibuster."

Only five states still retain the poll tax — Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas and Virginia.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., said in a televised interview for New Jersey stations that "it looks as though it will be another week before we'll get down to business."

FIGHT NEW BATTLE

French Encircle Algerian Rebels

ALGIERS (AP) — The European Secret Army spurned appeals to surrender Saturday and fought a two-hour battle with French troops surrounding the rightist suburban stronghold of Bab El Oued.

Ordered by President Charles de Gaulle to smash the secret army revolt, 10,000 soldiers encircled Bab El Oued, swept it with machine-gun fire, and reinforced their ring with tanks.

It was the second day of battle in the suburb, where many rightists are holed up and determined to fight to the last in their campaign to keep Algeria a part of France.

OFFICIAL ARRIVES

De Gaulle also sent his new commissioner for Algeria, Christian Fouchet, to Algiers. Fouchet went to barricaded administrative headquarters at Rocher Noir, 30 miles east of Algiers.

Fouchet will rule Algeria with the help of a European-Moselm committee of 12 until independence under terms of the accord worked out with the Algerian nationalist rebels last week. But first the power of the secret army must be broken.

French officials said their heavy guns command every street in Bab El Oued. But they conceded that total occupation of that European workingman's quarter would not bring down the underground revolt against independence for Algeria.

For one thing, the secret army's general staff was believed to have posed as wounded and escaped in ambulances from the suburb Friday night even though

Eggs Splatter Prince Philip In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Ultra - nationalist teen - agers splattered the light gray suit of Prince Philip of England with two eggs and several tomatoes Saturday as he neared the closing stages of an otherwise serene South American good will tour.

"What a disgrace," exclaimed one policeman, caught by surprise by the barrage.

Philip, also caught by surprise, said nothing that was recorded. But he seemed unperturbed outwardly.

Police immediately ringed the husband of Queen Elizabeth II and arrested five youths. They were identified as teen-age members of an ultra - nationalist youth club called Tacaura which has been causing trouble recently. Their names were not given out.

Sir George Middleton, the British ambassador, and Philip's air force aide quickly brushed the eggs off the prince's back and he went on into the Argentine - British Cultural Institute for a royal inspection.

Amid a crowd of several hundred he calmly went on with his greetings.

Later he changed to a tan suit and went to the swank Jockey Club, where he lunched with Argentina's top 67 businessmen.

IN SOUTH AMERICA

Senator Says U.S. Has Lost Respect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, said Saturday the United States has lost the respect and support of most Latin Americans by what she called its failure "to slap down" the Communist control of Cuba by Fidel Castro.

In a Senate speech, Mrs. Smith forecast a possible spread of communism throughout Latin America, "with Castro as the dictator" in that part of the hemisphere.

She also predicted the multi-billion dollar Alliance for Progress program for South America, urged by President Kennedy, will fail unless it is drastically reshaped.

Most of her comments, she said, were based upon personal conversations with Latin American leaders and people during a visit to six countries there last year with five other members of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Those with whom she talked, she said, agreed there would have been some criticism of any U.S. intervention against Castro but noted that Castro had won wide following and support "because he would stand up and fight and we would not."

U.S. aid to last April's invasion of Cuba was "a dismal failure," she said, and was regarded by other Latin Americans as half-hearted and timid.

"Friendship follows respect," she commented.

She said many Latin Americans regarded the Alliance for Progress proposals as a shallow attempt to buy their friendship. She added:

"Such aid will only bring contempt."

Report Huge Reserves Of Funds Found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congessional investigators say they have uncovered a multimillion-dollar hoard of foreign aid funds.

A report issued Saturday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee said there were "hidden reserves" of $17 million in Korea alone. Aid officials have repeatedly reported these funds "obligated," but they have not been committed at all, much less spent, the report said.

SPOT CHECKS

Based on spot checks in only three countries, Korea, South Viet Nam and Turkey, committee investigators suggested the existence of "substantial hidden reserves available in all countries" receiving American aid.

The committee said this "hoard" could well run much higher because bookkeeping entries made toward the end of each government fiscal year show vastly larger amounts committed than are actually obligated or made available to finance economic imports.

In Korea alone, the investigators found more than $82 million had been so designated when actually most of the money was not really doled out until months later.

There was no immediate comment from the Agency for International Development, which administers the foreign aid program.

The report gave some examples of how aid funds have been salted

Ired Judge Raps U.S. On Cases

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI)—U. S. District Judge Harold Cox accused the Justice Department on Saturday of failing to cooperate with the court on civil rights cases.

"I'm going to push these civil rights cases aside and try others if I cannot get any cooperation out of the Department of Justice," Cox told a U. S. attorney during a hearing on a Clarke County voting case.

He instructed the attorney, Gerald Stern of Washington, to convey his feelings to the Justice Department. Cox has jurisdiction of a number of civil rights cases filed by the government, including voting cases in four Mississippi counties.

Cox spoke out at the opening of a hearing by the state for a more definite statement in the government's complaint. Assistant State Atty. Gen. Ed Cates asked Robert Hauberg, U. S. attorney for the Southern District of Mississippi, what procedure the government would follow in trial of the case.

Hauberg said he could not answer that question because civil rights suits were handled by attorneys from Washington and pointed to Stern, making his first appearance in Cox's court. The cases have been handled by a series of attorneys, most of them young.

Cox then said he would not grant the government any concessions because of its practice of "changing horses."

"If they file one of these lawsuits they better stay with it," Cox said. "I have been trying honestly to give them a trial but apparently they don't want a trial. I'm getting tired of this messing around."

A statement said Keesee went on leave Jan. 15, indicating his destination was Guaymas, Sonora, Mexico. He failed to report for duty as scheduled on Jan. 30 and was carried as AWOL until Feb. 28 when he was listed as a deserter.

"Keesee is also under investigation by the Army for passing bogus checks and for forgery," the Pentagon said. It emphasized that Keesee had not been cleared to receive classified material and "did not have access to classified material at his duty station."

The official Cuban communique said Keesee landed at the Ciudad Libertad (Liberty City) airport in the Havana suburbs Friday in a Piper Comanche plane and asked for asylum.

"Sgt. Keesee admitted he was a deserter from the U.S. Army and asked for refuge in our country," the communique said. It added that the American was being questioned by Cuban authorities.

Cooling Trend Expected Today

Afternoon showers brought a slight cooling trend to the Twin City area Saturday that is expected to stay through today.

The outlook shows fair and a little cooler today with the high temperature expected to reach 68 degrees and the low forecast to fall to about 43 tonight.

The high temperature Saturday was recorded at 75 degrees and the low at 47 degrees. Skies were partly cloudy as .22 inches of rain fell.

Early Break Is Unsighted In Talkathon

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate held its first Saturday session of the year just for the purpose of hearing Southerners denounce efforts to outlaw the poll tax as as voting requirement.

It was the ninth day of the "friendly filibuster."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield called the session to help "drain off" some of the speeches. He hopes for a break in the stalemate and some action next week.

SENATORS TALK

The Senate met at 9 a.m. EST. Sens. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., and Lister Hill, D-Ala., talked throughout the morning.

At 1:45 p.m., the session adjourned until 9 a. m. EST Monday.

Eastland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee in which many civil rights bills are stalled, said federal control of voter qualifications is "contrary to our entire system of government."

Hill declared that powers reserved to the states by the Constitution, including the right to determine voter qualifications, are "a shield for protecting the liberties of the people and the rights of the states."

Eastland talked for an hour and 38 minutes and Hill for an hour and three minutes.

Mansfield won agreement for the Senate to meet again at 9 a.m. EST Monday in hopes of clearing away the remaining speeches allowed under Senate rules.

Some opponents of the Southern bloc have branded the talkathon a "filibuster." But acting Republican leader Thomas H. Kuchel, Calif., said it was "what is known as a friendly filibuster."

Only five states still retain the poll tax — Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas and Virginia.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., said in a televised interview for New Jersey stations that "it looks as though it will be another week before we'll get down to business."

FIGHT NEW BATTLE

French Encircle Algerian Rebels

ALGIERS (AP)— The European Secret Army spurned appeals to surrender Saturday and fought a two-hour battle with French troops surrouding the rightist suburban stronghold of Bab El Oued.

Ordered by President Charles de Gaulle to smash the secret army revolt, 10,000 soldiers encircled Bab El Oued, swept it with machine-gun fire, and reinforced their ring with tanks.

It was the second day of battle in the suburb, where many rightists are holed up and determined to fight to the last in their campaign to keep Algeria a part of France.

OFFICIAL ARRIVES

De Gaulle also sent his new commissioner for Algeria, Christian Fouchet, to Algiers. Fouchet went to barricaded administrative headquarters at Rocher Noir, 30 miles east of Algiers.

Fouchet will rule Algeria with the help of a European-Moselm committee of 12 until indepenence under terms of the accord worked out with the Algerian nationalist rebels last week. But first the power of the secret army must be broken.

French officials said their heavy guns command every street in Bab El Oued. But they conceded that total occupation of that European workingman's quarter would not bring down the underground revolt against independence for Algeria.

For one thing, the secret army's general staff was believed to have posed as wounded and escaped in ambulances from the suburb Friday night even though

Eggs Splatter Prince Philip In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Ultra - nationalist teen - agers splattered the light gray suit of Prince Philip of England with two eggs and several tomatoes Saturday as he neared the closing stages of an otherwise serene South American good will tour.

"What a disgrace," exclaimed one policeman, caught by surprise by the barrage.

Philip, also caught by surprise, said nothing that was recorded. But he seemed unperturbed outwardly.

Police immediately ringed the husband of Queen Elizabeth II and arrested five youths. They were identified as teen-age members of an ultra - nationalist youth club called Tacaura which has been causing trouble recently. Their names were not given out.

Sir George Middleton, the British ambassador, and Philip's air force aide quickly brushed the eggs off the prince's back and he went on into the Argentine - British Cultural Institute for a royal inspection.

Amid a crowd of several hundred he calmly went on with his greetings.

Later he changed to a tan suit and went to the swank Jockey Club, where he lunched with Argentina's top 67 businessmen.

IN SOUTH AMERICA

Senator Says U.S. Has Lost Respect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, said Saturday the United States has lost the respect and support of most Latin Americans by what she called its failure "to slap down" the Communist control of Cuba by Fidel Castro.

In a Senate speech, Mrs. Smith forecast a possible spread of communism throughout Latin America, "with Castro as the dictator" in that part of the hemisphere.

She also predicted the multi-billion dollar Alliance for Progress program for South America, urged by President Kennedy, will fail unless it is drastically reshaped.

Most of her comments, she said, were based upon personal conversations with Latin American leaders and people during a visit to six countries there last year with five other members of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Those with whom she talked, she said, agreed there would have been some criticism of any U.S. intervention against Castro but noted that Castro had won wide following and support "because he would stand up and fight and we would not."

U.S. aid to last April's invasion of Cuba was "a dismal failure," she said, and was regarded by other Latin Americans as half-hearted and timid.

"Friendship follows respect," she commented.

She said many Latin Americans regarded the Alliance for Progress proposals as a shallow attempt to buy their friendship. She added:

"Such aid will only bring contempt."

Report Huge Reserves Of Funds Found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congessional investigators say they have uncovered a multimillion-dollar hoard of foreign aid funds.

A report issued Saturday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee said there were "hidden reserves" of $17 million in Korea alone. Aid officials have repeatedly reported these funds "obligated," but they have not been committed at all, much less spent, the report said.

SPOT CHECKS

Based on spot checks in only three countries, Korea, South Viet Nam and Turkey, committee investigators suggested the existence of "substantial hidden reserves available in all countries" receiving American aid.

The committee said this "hoard" could well run much higher because bookkeeping entries made toward the end of each government fiscal year show vastly larger amounts committed than are actually obligated or made available to finance economic imports.

In Korea alone, the investigators found more than $82 million had been so designated when actually most of the money was not really doled out until months later.

There was no immediate comment from the Agency for International Development, which administers the foreign aid program.

The report gave some examples of how aid funds have been salted

Ired Judge Raps U.S. On Cases

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI)—U. S. District Judge Harold Cox accused the Justice Department on Saturday of failing to cooperate with the court on civil rights cases.

"I'm going to push these civil rights cases aside and try others if I cannot get any cooperation out of the Department of Justice," Cox told a U. S. attorney during a hearing on a Clarke County voting case.

He instructed the attorney, Gerald Stern of Washington, to convey his feelings to the Justice Department. Cox has jurisdiction of a number of civil rights cases filed by the government, including voting cases in four Mississippi counties.

Cox spoke out at the opening of a hearing by the state for a more definite statement in the government's complaint. Assistant State Atty. Gen. Ed Cates asked Robert Hauberg, U. S. attorney for the Southern District of Mississippi, what procedure the government would follow in trial of the case.

Hauberg said he could not answer that question because civil rights suits were handled by attorneys from Washington and pointed to Stern, making his first appearance in Cox's court. The cases have been handled by a series of attorneys, most of them young.

Cox then said he would not grant the government any concessions because of its practice of "changing horses."

"If they file one of these lawsuits they better stay with it," Cox said. "I have been trying honestly to give them a trial but apparently they don't want a trial. I'm getting tired of this messing around."

The secret army launched its attacks on the French army after a French-Moslem cease - fire went into effect last Monday ending the 7½-year Algerian nationalist rebellion. This is a prelude to a referendum that is expected to see the Moslem majority of 10 million vote for independence.

In the opening of the battle for Bab El Oued Friday, at least 15 French soldiers were killed and 74 wounded. Officials put the losses of the European army and its backers at 20 killed and 80 wounded.

There was no estimate of losses in the second day of battle.

Saturday began with French tanks and armed cars training their cannon on the suburb. Loudspeakers blared appeals to the defenders to down arms.

The sound of sporadic firing came from the suburb throughout the day. Then two hours before sundown, Europeans in a block of unfinished buildings sent plunging machine-gun fire on the deployed French troops.

The French answered with machine guns and recoiless artillery, heaping fresh damage on the area. American-made medium tanks of the French army moved into the eastern end of Bab El Oued and lined the waterfront boulevard.

Hundreds of Algerian men—many of them Moslems--set up machine guns in the streets littered with uncollected garbage.

Knots of tense European settlers gathered in the doorways of their houses.

The heart of Bab El Oued was still in the hands of the secret army.

Residents of Bab El Oued were ordered to remain in their homes under a strict curfew until further orders.

Elsewhere, all stores shut in Algiers in midafternoon and bus traffic came to a halt.

Two grenades were hurled at a truck load of soldiers near the Aletti Hotel in the heart of Algiers but there were no casualties.

Sporadic terrorist attacks harassed the city during the day. A total of 12 pistol attacks were reported by police, most aimed against Moslems. But two European women also were slain, reportedly by Moslem gunmen.

Moslem masses in the squalid Casbah and the teeming settlements on the outskirts of Algiers remained calm.

There were outbursts of rightist violence elsewhere. In Oran, three banks were robbed of a total of $7,000 and four tons of food stocks were stolen from the port. This was where the secret army commandos scored their massive coup Friday by robbing the Bank of Algeria of the franc equivalent of $4,250,000.

A secret army squad attacked a police station at Sidi Bel Abbes, major base of the Foreign Legion, and seized 23 automatic pistols and rifles.

Vietnamese Flush Reds In Villages

By FRED WATERS

TAM AN, South Viet Nam (AP)—Three Vietnamese government companies flushed six known Communist-occupied villages 15 miles east of Saigon Saturday but the Viet Cong stayed one jump ahead of them all the way.

The government forces engaged the fleeing Communists in several fights but succeeded in capturing only two Viet Cong prisoners.

The foray was typical of government efforts to stamp out guerrilla forces who overrun much of the countryside in South Viet Nam.

The terrain was typical—thick bamboo jungle and swampland, the jungle paths strewn with mines and booby traps of barbed steel spikes thinly camouflaged by jungle foliage.

Despite the firefights and the booby traps the only injuries suffered by government troops were blisters and swollen feet. This unit was lucky.

American military experts estimate casualties now run 1,000 a week on both sides in the bitter Viet Nam civil war.

Saturday's chase started at dawn at Long Khan a few miles north of Saigon, the South Viet Nam capital.

Two regular Vietnamese army companies made up the main force with elements of a civil guard company on its flanks.

Less than one mile out, the government force ran into antigovernment propaganda posters denouncing President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Viet Nam and President Kennedy and urging the government forces to oin the Viet Cong cause.

Every village the government forces entered was deserted except for women and children. At each point they were told Viet Cong forces had fled 15 or 20 minutes earlier.

The first contact with the enemy was established at 8 a.m. After a short fight two Viet Cong were captured. They had been left behind to detonate 60mm mortar mines.

The government forces had to advance at half-crouch through the thick bamboo jungle. At several points they sighted elements of the fleeing Viet Cong. They shot 30 rounds of 4.2 mortar fire but could not determine the extent of Viet Cong casualties.

At one point the Viet Cong made a stand. As the main element of government forces moved across an open field the Viet Cong fired at the rear element.

Bullets whizzed through the bamboo thickets but no one was hit.

The advancing force relieved the government fortress of Tam An by midafternoon. Tam An has been surrounded by Communist guerrillas, pinning down the small government unit here.

MAJ. GEN. HARLEY B. West, commanding general of the 49th Armored Division at Ft. Polk, and Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, Adjutant General of Louisiana, were in attendance at the annual conference of the National Guard Association of Louisiana. The conference started Saturday at the Virginia Hotel in Monroe.

Ft. Polk Conditions Given By General

sial situation at Ft. Polk by stating, "The reactivated men, of which the post is comprised, heard that they may be turned out before the year that they were originally called for ends.

"This brought the question to their minds of an exact date they would be released.

"The rest of it," West stated, "you can get from your own newspaper."

West was refering to recent meetings, at which "there have off active service or trying to find out when they would be released.

In a letter read to all troops on Ft. Polk last Monday, West said, "As of this date, no more gathe either in civilian clothes or uniferings nor meetings will be held form."

He said that continuation of the meetings, at which "there have been contemptuous words and remarks against the President of the United States and against the Congress" might "possibly incite riots or breach of the peace."

West said Saturday that most of the reactivated servicemen are young and "do not understand the reason for being recalled."

He stated, "I do not know when they will be released and I do not believe the President of the United States knows when they will be released. The man on the other side of the wall probably knows better than we when the cold war will halt."

West added that he did not know when he would be released.

Gen. West, a Dallas insurance executive, was recalled on the same program as the other servicemen which is supposedly to run one year.

Gen. Fleming pointed out here that he and Gen West had both gone into the service as "buck privates," and had worked their way up. As he stated, "We have not always been generals."

The first incident which made news at Ft. Polk under Gen. West's command was a soldier writing his senator that the post was not sufficiently supplied.

Gen. West said that some of the men complained because they did not have a canteen. To this he said, "What did they need a canteen for, it rained for 14 days in a row."

He stated that no disciplinary action has been taken and none is contemplated.

Stating his philsophy he said, "The trouble with us (United States) is the fact that we are impatient. We don't seem to care what happens as long as we get it over with fast."

He said, "The people do not realize what the situation is in Germany and other trouble spots of the world because we are too far away to realize it."

That is why the servicemen at Ft. Polk and others who were reactivated, can not understand the reason for it," he added.

The General said that recently seven of his men were chosen to accompany the "looksee" group on their trip through Germany. He said they saw the Berlin wall and the situation in the country and returned to the post, as he said, "soldiers."

When he stood before the group of guardsmen, he told them "at the moment, I happen to be the world's greatest authority on the cold war mobilization." This got a laugh and a hand from the attending part of the 500 guardsmen who registered for the convention.

West told the group that Ft. Polk was deserted and then suddenly 21,500 men were there in 30 days.

The activities, which started Friday, were held at the Virginia hotel.

Dallas he had bruises about his head and the two men with him told him that he had been involved in a fight in New Orleans. He said they told him his name was John Aaron.

Police believe he apparently accompanied the two men from Dallas to Las Vegas, Nev., Los Angeles, Calif., and Tiajuana, Mexico, but later left them, going on to Reno where he was employed as a dishwasher and worked for several weeks.

The picture of him that appeared in the Alexandria paper and obtained by the Reno priest wasn't clear enough for identification according to the priest and Marsala had also lost weight.

The Reno priest contacted Father Dabria Thursday afternoon for information and Father Dabria said he became convinced that it was actually Marsala in Reno. He asked Mrs. Marsala to call Reno and talk to him. She was convinced by his voice that it was Marsala and left with Father Dabria Friday for Reno to positively identify him.

Father Dabria said Saturday that Marsala had also suffered a heart attack during his absence and has been placed under a doctor's care in Reno who verified the cardiac condition.

"I am thoroughly convinced" of his story of arriving on a bus in Dallas badly beaten, Father Dabria said, adding that he is in "poor physical condition." The priest said that Marsala's testimony now is "consistent."

Marsala recognized his wife and son who accompanied Father Dabria to Reno, and was beginning to remember things about Monroe. However, he still was unable to tell just what happened in Monroe on the date of his disappearance.

Father Dabria said Saturday morning that he did not know when Marsala and his wife would return to Monroe but that it would be a few days at the soonest.

Officials of the police department have not talked to Marsala yet, and said yesterday they had no comment to make concerning his statements.

However, they stated that upon his return to Monroe, the police will further investigate the case, pending on his condition.

Soviets Hike Demands On West Berlin

night, American officials said. The first meeting was likely to be Sunday afternoon. Both primarily will concern Berlin which Rusk has warned repeatedly casts a dark shadow over all other East-West talks here.

The American will ask if Gromyko has anything more to say about security of West Berlin's lifelines across Communist territory to the Western world.

Gromyko has been unwilling to even discuss this question in the months of lower level discussion that led to this meeting.

When he did agree to mention it, he took one step forward only to step back several steps, Western observers said.

The Ulbright version, which American sources confirm was also Gromyko's, was that East Germany would consider the establishment of some kind of international "arbitration board" to hear disputes about the manner in which East Germany controlled traffic to and from West Berlin.

That was new, and it apparently was designed to appear to match President Kennedy's recent offer to consider turning control of West Berlin's access highways, railways, canals and airlines over to an independent international authority.

Admirals Hint Red Subs Probe U.S. Coastline

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—The chiefs of antisubmarine warfare for the Pacific and Atlantic indicated Saturday that Soviet submarines are probing the United States coastline.

In a copyright interview in the San Diego Union, Vice Adm. John Thach, Pacific, and Vice Adm. Edmund Taylor, Atlantic, said Red submarines are exploring in increasingly greater distances from their home bases.

There are indications that Soviet submarines are investigating the ocean bottom, the currents and undersea contours off the Pacific and Atlantic coasts, the two admirals said.

The two admirals said they are convinced the Russians are using their submarines as watchdogs and conceded that the United States is doing the same.

"We have our 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean, we have others forces deployed in various places in the South Atlantic, and we have our 7th Fleet deployed, off, you might say, Communist shores in the Western Pacific," Thach said.

away, despite regulations and policies to the contrary.

In Korea, since 1958, $500,000 has been reported obligated for services connected with a fertilizer plant when in fact no such services have been rendered or paid for.

For several years, the auditors in Korea have carried as obligated $470,000 for soybean imports that have not been sent to that country.

The investigators found that the Korean army had been asked to take up the soybean import authority but had replied that its warehouses were full of the beans.

The only explanation the investigators could get out of American officials on the spot was that "eventually someone would want to bring in soybeans."

The report found that nearly $6 million had been tied up as obligated for nearly five years to rebuild a dam in Korea when actually no contract has been signed to do anything about it.

Another $9.7 million has been similarly hoarded for several years to pay for a power plant, but no one seems to know when or even where it will be built.

In Viet Nam, the investigators found nearly $11 million tied up for highway construction plans that "apparently have gone awry" because of the danger from Communist guerrillas.

In Turkey, the investigators reported no indication of "deliberate hoarding," but they did turn up nearly $2 million in funds that were "erroneously certified as valid obligations."

The investigators have pinned most of the blame for these situations on top aid officials. The survey team said that underlings serving abroad appeared to have called the attention of their superiors to many cases in which regulations were not being observed and that they had reported other shortcomings.

The report said these lesser officials "apparently were either over-ruled or disregarded by their superiors who are able to justify almost any deviation from the rules on the grounds of political expediency."

In a letter read to all troops on Ft. Polk last Monday, West said, "As of this date, no more gatheither in civilian clothes or unierings nor meetings will be held form."

He said that continuation of the meetings, at which "there have been contemptuous words and remarks against the President of the United States and against the Congress" might "possibly incite riots or breach of the peace."

West said Saturday that most of the reactivated servicemen are young and "do not understand the reason for being recalled."

He stated, "I do not know when they will be released and I do not believe the President of the United States knows when they will be released. The man on the other side of the wall probably knows better than we when the cold war will halt."

West added that he did not know when he would be released.

Gen. West, a Dallas insurance executive, was recalled on the same program as the other servicemen which is supposedly to run one year.

Gen. Fleming pointed out here that he and Gen. West had both gone into the service as "buck privates," and had worked their way up. As he stated, "We have not always been generals."

The first incident which made news at Ft. Polk under Gen. West's command was a soldier writing his senator that the post was not sufficiently supplied.

Gen. West said that some of the men complained because they did not have a canteen. To this he said, "What did they need a canteen for, it rained for 14 days in a row."

He stated that no disciplinary action has been taken and none is contemplated.

Stating his philsophy he said, "The trouble with us (United States) is the fact that we are impatient. We don't seem to care what happens as long as we get it over with fast."

He said, "The people do not realize what the situation is in Germany and other trouble spots of the world because we are too far away to realize it."

That is why the servicemen at Ft. Polk and others who were reactivated, can not understand the reason for it," he added.

The General said that recently seven of his men were chosen to accompany the "looksee" group on their trip through Germany. He said they saw the Berlin wall and the situation in the country and returned to the post, as he said, "soldiers."

When he stood before the group of guardsmen, he told them "at the moment, I happen to be the world's greatest authority on the cold war mobilization." This got a laugh and a hand from the attending part of the 500 guardsmen who registered for the convention.

West told the group that Ft. Polk was deserted and then suddenly 21,500 men were there in 30 days.

The activities, which started Friday, were held at the Virginia hotel.

Dallas he had bruises about his head and the two men with him told him that he had been involved in a fight in New Orleans. He said they told him his name was John Aaron.

Police believe he apparently accompanied the two men from Dallas to Las Vegas, Nev., Los Angeles, Calif., and Tiajuana, Mexico, but later left them, going on to Reno where he was employed as a dishwasher and worked for several weeks.

The picture of him that appeared in the Alexandria paper and obtained by the Reno priest wasn't clear enough for identification according to the priest and Marsala had also lost weight.

The Reno priest contacted Father Dabria Thursday afternoon for information and Father Dabria said he became convinced that it was actually Marsala in Reno. He asked Mrs. Marsala to call Reno and talk to him. She was convinced by his voice that it was Marsala and left with Father Dabria Friday for Reno to positively identify him.

Father Dabria said Saturday that Marsala had also suffered a heart attack during his absence and has been placed under a doctor's care in Reno who verified the cardiac condition.

"I am thoroughly convinced" of his story of arriving on a bus in Dallas badly beaten, Father Dabria said, adding that he is in "poor physical condition." The priest said that Marsala's testimony now is "consistent."

Marsala recognized his wife and son who accompanied Father Dabria to Reno, and was beginning to remember things about Monroe. However, he still was unable to tell just what happened in Monroe on the date of his disappearance.

Father Dabria said Saturday morning that he did not know when Marsala and his wife would return to Monroe but that it would be a few days at the soonest.

Officials of the police department have not talked to Marsala yet, and said yesterday they had no comment to make concerning his statements.

However, they stated that upon his return to Monroe, the police will further investigate the case, pending on his condition.

Soviets Hike Demands On West Berlin

night, American officials said. The first meeting was likely to be Sunday afternoon. Both primarily will concern Berlin which Rusk has warned repeatedly casts a dark shadow over all other East-West talks here.

The American will ask if Gromyko has anything more to say about security of West Berlin's lifelines across Communist territory to the Western world.

Gromyko has been unwilling to even discuss this question in the months of lower level discussion that led to this meeting.

When he did agree to mention it, he took one step forward only to step back several steps. Western observers said.

The Ulbright version, which American sources confirm was also Gromyko's, was that East Germany would consider the establishment of some kind of international "arbitration board" to hear disputes about the manner in which East Germany controlled traffic to and from West Berlin.

That was new, and it apparently was designed to appear to match President Kennedy's recent offer to consider turning control of West Berlin's access highways, railways, canals and airlines over to an independent international authority.

Admirals Hint Red Subs Probe U.S. Coastline

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—The chiefs of antisubmarine warfare for the Pacific and Atlantic indicated Saturday that Soviet submarines are probing the United States coastline.

In a copyright interview in the San Diego Union, Vice Adm. John Thach, Pacific, and Vice Adm. Edmund Taylor, Atlantic, said Red submarines are exploring in increasingly greater distances from their home bases.

There are indications that Soviet submarines are investigating the ocean bottom, the currents and undersea contours off the Pacific and Atlantic coasts, the two admirals said.

The two admirals said they are convinced the Russians are using their submarines as watchdogs and conceded that the United States is doing the same.

"We have our 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean, we have other forces deployed in various places in the South Atlantic, and we have our 7th Fleet deployed, off, you might say, Communist shores in the Western Pacific," Thach said.

Report Huge Reserves Of Funds Found

away, despite regulations and policies to the contrary.

In Korea, since 1958, $500,000 has been reported obligated for services connected with a fertilizer plant when in fact no such services have been rendered or paid for.

For several years, the air books in Korea have carried as obligated $470,000 for soybean imports that have not been sent to that country.

The investigators found that the Korean army had been asked to take up the soybean import authority but had replied that its warehouses were full of the beans.

The only explanation the investigators could get out of American officials on the spot was that "eventually someone would want to bring in soybeans."

The report found that nearly $6 million had been tied up as obligated for nearly five years to rebuild a dam in Korea when actually no contract has been signed to do anything about it.

Another $9.7 million has been similarly hoarded for several years to pay for a power plant, but no one seems to know when or even where it will be built.

In Viet Nam, the investigators found nearly $11 million tied up for highway construction plans that "apparently have gone awry" because of the danger from Communist guerrillas.

In Turkey, the investigators reported no indication of "deliberate hoarding," but they did turn up nearly $2 million in funds that were "erroneously certified as valid obligations."

The investigators have pinned most of the blame for these situations on top aid officials. The survey team said that underlings serving abroad appeared to have called the attention of their superiors to many cases in which regulations were not being observed and that they had reported other shortcomings.

The report said these lesser officials "apparently were either over-ruled or disregarded by their superiors who are able to justify almost any deviation from the rules on the grounds of political expediency."

MEMPHIS TO APPEAL

Pupil Placement Law Ruled Out

MEMPHIS (AP)—The president of the Memphis School Board said it will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court an appeals court decision Friday that knocked out the board's plan for public school desegregation.

William D. Galbreath said he was "completely astonished" by the ruling of the U.S. Sixth Circuit Appeals Court that the 1957 Tennessee pupil placement law was no good as a school desegregation plan.

"Number one, we're going to appeal," Galbreath said. "Of course I haven't had time to talk to the board, but I feel sure that's what we'll do.

"Number two, we'll have to start all over again. We don't have any plan. We thought we had a well worked out plan that was acceptable."

Without advance fanfare and under heavy police guards Memphis began token desegregation at four of its 100 public schools last fall.

There were no incidents and President Kennedy said the carefully handled transition reflected "credit on the United States throughout the world."

The appeals court threw out a decision by U.S. Dist. Judge Marion S. Boyd of Memphis and ordered him to restrain the board from operating separate schools for Negroes and whites.

The decision also instructed Boyd to "retain jurisdiction of the case during the period of transition."

The court urged the Memphis board to draw up a "realistic plan for organizing their schools on a non-racial basis in full compliance with the mandate of the Supreme Court, and to do so with all deliberate speed."

School board attorney Jack Petree said he felt the decision does not entirely void the present integration plan but that it would have to be corrected and complemented to meet the court's objections. He did not say how.

Petree said the board had 45 days to file an appeal.

The board ended a century of racial segregation in public schools here when it admitted 13 Negro first graders to the previously all-white schools. They were selected from 38 Negro pupils who applied for transfer to white schools.

All applications were processed under the pupil assignment law which sets forth 22 factors for assigning pupils to schools, but does not mention race.

The appeals court decision ruled that "Negro children cannot be required to apply for that to which they are entitled as a matter of right."

U.S. To Study Exhaust Fumes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Appropriations Committee told the U. S. Public Health Service Friday to find out if automobile exhaust fumes are as harmful as they are offensive.

The committee added $1 million to the health service request for a $10 million air pollution control appropriation and said the "major portion" should be spent on automotive exhaust research.

The funds were included in a $5.1 billion money bill to operate the health, education and welfare and labor departments in the year starting next July 1.

The committee commended the health service for its work on smog and other types of air pollution in recent years, but called for a bigger effort in the auto exhaust field.

Construction Of Underwater Oil Line Sought

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Army Engineers have been asked to authorize construction of a huge underwater oil pipeline off the Mississippi coast.

Standard Oil Co. of Kentucky announced plans earlier this month for the 100-mile pipeline, one of the longest underwater lines in the United States.

The 20-inch diameter pipeline will extend from Ostrica, La., to Bayou Casotte, near Pascagoula, Miss. It will serve Standard of Kentucky's proposed new refinery at Pascagoula. Construction of the $125 million refiner is under way.

The pipeline will have a daily capacity of 100,000 gallons of oil. It will be operated by California-Kentucky Pipeline Co. of New Orleans, a subsidiary of Standard.

Contract for the work has been awarded to J. Ray McDermott & Co., of New Orleans. The amount was not disclosed.

TEXAS CAMPAIGN

Daniel, Connally Draw Most Fire

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Six weeks before the first ballots drop into the box Texas voters find the candidates in the biennial election whipping themselves into a name-calling frenzy.

The prestige of the Kennedy administration will be pegged to the outcome in many Texas minds, although no national figure yet has thrown his weight publicly to any candidate.

Texas faces the first of its three scheduled elections May 5 when Democrats and Republicans hold their first primaries.

Run-offs follow where necessary June 2, with the general election Nov. 6.

The name-calling centers in the Democratic race for governor and is pinpointed against two men.

These men are Gov. Price Daniel, seeking a fourth term, and John Connally, who resigned as secretary of the Navy to run.

Daniel's opponents declare two terms are enough.

The governor claims that he needs eight years of service to complete his program—and that most states provide a four-year term for their chief administrators.

The Kennedy administration is attacked by attacks on Connally. He is a personal friend of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas. President Kennedy appointed him secretary.

Connally's critics say he is the administration's candidate—particularly Johnson's—and the administration should keep its nose out of Texas politics.

"Hogwash" says Connally. He declares the decision to run for governor was his alone.

The other four Democratic candidates carry obvious political punch, but how much cannot be determined before the election.

They are:

Marshall Formby, radio station owner, a former Texas Highway Commission chairman and former state senator with considerable strength particularly in West Texas.

Edwin A. Walker, the former Army general ousted from command of the 24th Division because of the nature of his indoctrination of troops against communism. The darling of the John Birch Society and ultra-rightists. But neither the Birch society nor such groups as the rightist National Indignation Convention Organization have publicly backed him. Walker is campaigning largely on the issue of international communism rather than specific state issues.

Will Wilson, the present Texas attorney general, resigned as a state supreme justice to run for attorney general.

Don Yarborough, no kin to U. S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex. He is backed by many elements generally considered liberal.

Past elections show the liberal block cannot alone elect, although it can have a strong influence on the eventual result. Yarborough contends the state administration is stagnant and needs an injection of youth and vigor. He is 36.

The Republican contest in the primary—the first since 1934—is producing no fireworks.

Roy Whittenburg, publisher of the Borger News-Herald and member of a Panhandle publishing family, even praises his opponent as a good candidate.

Whittenburg has campaigned at a steady pace. He received 23 per cent of the general election votes for senator in 1958 against Yarborough.

Cox, a businessman, is a former conservative Democrat who switched to the Republican party last year. He ran as a Democrat against Daniel in the 1960 primary and lost 908,992 to 619,834.

He formerly was secretary of the Freedom in Action organization of militant conservatives.

Almost lost in the shouting of the governor's race are contests for lieutenant governor, attorney general, one representative-at-large and 16 other U.S. House seats.

Also not a part of the campaign noises are a number of referendums which are little more than opinion polls since they are not binding on the legislature.

The main referendums are to permit horse-race betting, to discard the poll tax and to make the governor's term four years instead of two.

What success the Republicans might have in seeking major offices in the general election again is a matter for speculation.

The state slipped into the Republican column nationally twice for Dwight D. Eisenhower but reverted to its normal Democratic preponderance to vote for President Kennedy.

It elected Republican John Tower as senator in 1961 in an upset.

The conservative stronghold of Dallas repeatedly has elected Republican Bruce Alger to the House.

Otherwise, Democrats have continued their domination in recent years.

This will be the first Republican primary since 1958.

Soviet Stall Not To Delay U.S. Testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy and his top aides were described Saturday as determined not to let any Soviet stalling at Geneva delay a series of U. S. nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

They expect no agreement to emerge from the East-West conference which would cause Kennedy to call off the A-tests scheduled to start about a month from now.

The President has said he would do this if the Reds sign the West's proposed nuclear test ban treaty.

To the contrary, many persons here think the Russians want to go ahead with more tests of their own.

This word on the administration attitude was given to newsmen by a qualified official who asked that he not be named. While he did not say so, his intent may have been to reply to statements made on Thursday by Republican leaders in Congress.

At their joint news conference, House GOP Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana and his Senate counterpart, Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, said pressures are building up at Geneva to persuade Kennedy to abandon his announced plans for resumption of atmospheric tests.

The authoritative source said the Kenedy administration is optimistic on chances of agreement with the Soviets for at least some cooperation in outer space. U. S.-Soviet technical talks start in New York Tuesday.

The optimism is fostered by reasoning that: (1) the Soviets have shown interest in space competition, (2) Premier Khrushchev's letter on space proposals covered much of the same ground as Kennedy's, (3) the Kennedy proposals are designed to produce benefit to both Soviets and Americans, (4) the Communists have displayed before an ability to cooperate with the West in one field while the cold war rages unabated in others.

Administration sources said that in offering cooperation in weather and communications satellits, magnetic field mapping, space medicine and space shot tracking, the United States had selected projects in which the U. S. benefit from cooperation would be at least as great if not greater than the Russian benefit.

Haiti Clears Surgeon In Wife's Death

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) Dr. Manfred von Linde sailed from Haiti Saturday aboard the luxury liner Homeric bound for Nassau and New York.

The 38-year-old New York plastic surgeon boarded the ship shortly after midnight. The Home Lines vessel was due in New York in the middle of next week. Von Linde was accompanied by New York attorney Gerald Barandes.

Von Linde had been held five days without charge while Haitian authorities investigated the death of his wife, the former Lucille Rogers. She died on their honeymoon March 14 in their hotel room at Cap Haitien, 200 miles from here. She was a New York and Kansas City socialite.

Von Linde, born in Birmingham, Ala., as Robert Emory Dent, barely had time to shave a five-day beard before boarding the liner. He left behind his luggage and a French poodle he and his 32-year-old bride brought with them to Haiti March 11. They were married in Wilton, Conn., March 1.

Sources close to the surgeon said he planned to resume his practice in New York.

Von Linde's other attorney, Charles Emmett Jr., said the surgeon had been cleared completely in the investigation.

Von Linde's release came after a second autopsy of his bride's body showed no evidence of foul play. The autopsy, however, failed to substantiate a previous autopsy report listing the death as due to a heart attack.

But medical sources said this is a contradiction only insofar as the second autopsy failed to discover discernible lesions or other evidence of a heart attack. They added that some forms of heart attack do not leave visible evidence.

TEXAS CAMPAIGN

Daniel, Connally Draw Most Fire

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Six weeks before the first ballots drop into the box Texas voters find the candidates in the biennial election whipping themselves into a name-calling frenzy.

The prestige of the Kennedy administration will be pegged to the outcome in many Texas minds, although no national figure yet has thrown his weight publicly to any candidate.

Texas faces the first of its three scheduled elections May 5 when Democrats and Republicans hold their first primaries.

Run-offs follow where necessary June 2, with the general election Nov. 6.

The name-calling centers in the Democratic race for governor and is pinpointed against two men.

These men are Gov. Price Daniel, seeking a fourth term, and John Connally, who resigned as secretary of the Navy to run.

Daniel's opponents declare two terms are enough.

The governor claims that he needs eight years of service to complete his program—and that most states provide a four-year term for their chief administrators.

The Kennedy administration is attacked by attacks on Connally. He is a personal friend of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas. President Kennedy appointed him secretary.

Connally's critics say he is the administration's candidate—particularly Johnson's—and the administration should keep its nose out of Texas politics.

"Hogwash" says Connally. He declares the decision to run for governor was his alone.

The other four Democratic candidates carry obvious political punch, but how much cannot be determined before the election.

They are:

Marshall Formby, radio station owner, a former Texas Highway Commission chairman and former state senator with considerable strength particularly in West Texas.

Edwin A. Walker, the former Army general ousted from command of the 24th Division because of the nature of his indoctrination of troops against communism. The darling of the John Birch Society and ultra-rightists. But neither the Birch society nor such groups as the rightist National Indignation Convention Organization have publicly backed him. Walker is campaigning largely on the issue of international communism rather than specific state issues.

Will Wilson, the present Texas attorney general, resigned as a state supreme justice to run for attorney general.

Don Yarborough, no kin to U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex. He is backed by many elements generally considered liberal.

Past elections show the liberal block cannot alone elect, although it can have a strong influence on the eventual result. Yarborough contends the state administration is stagnant and needs an injection of youth and vigor. He is 36.

The Republican contest in the primary—the first since 1934—is producing no fireworks.

Roy Whittenburg, publisher of the Borger News-Herald and member of a Panhandle publishing family, even praises his opponent as a good candidate.

Whittenburg has campaigned at a steady pace. He received 23 per cent of the general election votes for senator in 1958 against Yarborough.

Cox, a businessman, is a former conservative Democrat who switched to the Republican party last year. He ran as a Democrat against Daniel in the 1960 primary and lost 908,992 to 619,834.

He formerly was secretary of the Freedom in Action organization of militant conservatives.

Almost lost in the shouting of the governor's race are contests for lieutenant governor, attorney general, one representative-at-large and 16 other U.S. House seats.

Also not a part of the campaign noises are a number of referendums which are little more than opinion polls since they are not binding on the legislature.

The main referendums are to permit horse-race betting, to discard the poll tax and to make the governor's term four years instead of two.

What success the Republicans might have in seeking major offices in the general election again is a matter for speculation.

The state slipped into the Republican column nationally twice for Dwight D. Eisenhower but reverted to its normal Democratic preponderance to vote for President Kennedy.

It elected Republican John Tower as senator in 1961 in an upset.

The conservative stronghold of Dallas repreated! has elected Republican Bruce Alger to the House.

Otherwise, Democrats have continued their domination in recent years.

This will be the first Republican primary since 1958.

ROTARIANS FROM El Dorado, Ark., and Monroe visited the West Monroe Rotary Club this week, then went for a tour on the campus of Northeast State. Soviet Stall Not To Delay U.S. Testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy and his top aides were described Saturday as determined not to let any Soviet stalling at Geneva delay a series of U. S. nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

They expect no agreement to emerge from the East-West conference which would cause Kennedy to call off the A-tests scheduled to start about a month from now.

The President has said he would do this if the Reds sign the West's proposed nuclear test ban treaty.

To the contrary, many persons here think the Russians want to go ahead with more tests of their own.

This word on the administration attitude was given to newsmen by a qualified official who asked that he not be named. While he did not say so, his intent may have been to reply to statements made on Thursday by Republican leaders in Congress.

At their joint news conference, House GOP Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana and his Senate counterpart, Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, said pressures are building up at Geneva to persuade Kennedy to abandon his announced plans for resumption of atmospheric tests.

The authoritative source said the Kenedy administration is optimistic on chances of agreement with the Soviets for at least some cooperation in outer space. U. S.-Soviet technical talks start in New York Tuesday.

WATERWAY TIE-IN

Red River Valley Is Nearing Goal

By WILLIAM G. ALLEN

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The Red River Valley will soon reach a long-sought goal—a tie-in with the inland waterway system of the United States.

A barge line owned by Heart of Texas Transportation Co. of Fort Worth, Tex., is scheduled to be in operation by this summer, offering common carrier service between New Orleans and Denison, Tex., on the Red River.

Businessmen in the main valley of the river, a vast area of about 68,000 square miles in Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas, feel that barge service will place them in a competitive position with areas now served by water by lowering transportation costs.

They have worked for years for a connection with the Mississippi River through either a lateral canal or the river itself.

Final Interstate Commerce Commission sanction of the barge line was granted Heart of Texas in January.

With headquarters in Shreveport, it will run from Denison to New Orleans via the Red and Mississippi rivers and over another route by way of the Red, the Atchafalaya River and the Intracoastal Canal.

The idea of navigating Red River in its present state was conceived by Texas oilman and Oklahoma rancher Barney Holland of Fort Worth, president of Heart of Texas.

Early in his efforts to prove that he could put commercial barges on the stream Holland heard the warnings of skeptics.

Starting out far inland, Red River expands into a red stream of terror that washed away barns and crops in four states before the government threw up protective reservoirs and started a bank stabilization program. Even now, the skeptics warned, the river can change the course of its channel overnight and is full of enough sandbars to frustrate the best of navigators.

Undaunted, the husky rancher set out to prove them wrong.

"This is important to the southwest," Holland once said. "The only thing cities in the Red River Basin can't offer industry is water transportation."

Holland reasoned that he would have to use equipment light enough to pass over the sandbars and yet have enough power to go against the swift current.

Jet propulsion proved to be the solution.

Holland first thought of using barges on Red River in 1958. His Oklahoma ranch near Idabel needs molasses and fertilizers, and they could be transported cheaply by water.

If he were going to come up the river with those products, he thought, why not carry other merchandise down river?

From that point, his plan developed into a full-scale commercial line that will offer transportation for general commodities.

In February, 1960, searching for a tug especially suited for Red River, he attended a boat show in Texas and saw a film on the principle of jet propulsion as adapted to boats.

West Monroe Negro Booked

A 48-year-old Negro was booked for aggravated battery in West Monroe yesterday and another Negro man hospitalized with a fractured leg.

West Monroe police booked Eddie Sampson Jr. of 1201 North Seventy St., West Monroe, for aggravated battery on John Hamburg.

Hamburg suffered a broken leg in a scuffle with Sampson at 421 Benson St. around 5:30 p.m. Hamburg was taken to E. A. Conway Memorial hospital for treatment.

Freak Accident Injures Woman

A West Monroe stopped her car yesterday morning to drop some money into the fund for Crippled Children and wound up crippling herself, temporarily.

Mrs. Bessie Braswell, 37, of 609 Pine St., West Monroe, had stopped her vehicle on the new traffic bridge to drop some money into the can for the Crippled Children's fund that was being shaken by a Monroe police officer. Several organizations also hook the can for the fund on downtown streets.

Suddenly the car jumped into the curb of the street, spinning the steering wheel in which her arm was caught, breaking the arm.

The policeman took her to a doctor who set the arm.

Farm Bill's Chances Not Too Bright

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has been weighing the Kennedy administration's take-it-or-leave-it farm program for nearly two months now and the reading on the scales offers sponsors little to boast about.

It is the consensus of many congressmen, farm leaders and other observers that the plan has virtually no chance of being enacted into law in its entirety. In fact, there is much to support the belief that little of it will hurdle a reluctant Congress.

The plan would seek to halt overproduction of wheat, feed grains and milk through production controls more rigid than any ever proposed by a president before. Such controls would require approval by at least two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum. If farmers said no, the government would withdraw price supports on the commodity involved and leave producers on their own.

Supplies of a number of other products would be controlled through self-help marketing order program, also requiring approval by producers.

President Kennedy has said present programs cannot be continued because of their increasing cost to taxpayers and also because they are not halting a pile-up of surpluses.

The administration plan ran into opposition of congressmen and farm leaders who demand less rather than more government in agriculture.

Cotton Futures Show Narrow Weekly Range

NEW YORK (AP)—Cotton futures wound up mixed on the New York Cotton Exchange this week after fluctuating within a narrow range. At the close, Friday prices were down 30 cents to up 65 cents a bale.

In the preceding week losses by some deliveries ranged to 30 cents, gains by others to 90 cents.

Heaviest activity continued to be in nearby contracts, especially in the May delivery which has moved up steadily over the past month. Most support came from chart buying, some short covering and speculation that the free supply might tighten in the weeks ahead.

The market showed little reaction to government reports early in the week on fall planting intentions and on cotton ginnings.

The exchange service bureau estimated February consumption at 750,000 bales for a daily rate of 35,900, up 3½ per cent from the 34,700 of January and up 6 per cent from the five-year average.

For the season through February, consumption was put at 3,378,000 bales against 4,786,000 in the like period a year ago. This level pointed to an indicated level of 9,100,000 for the entire season.

Exports for the week ended March 20 were about 102,000 bales, compared with 169,000 for the like 1960 week.

Head Of Rubber Company Plans To Wed Again

CAMDEN, S. C. (AP)—The engagement of Jane Allen Messler, of Pittsford, N. Y., and Raymond C. Firestone, Bath, Ohio, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., was announced Saturday.

Firestone is the fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone of Akron, Ohio. His father founded the Firestone company.

Mrs. Messler has a daughter, Eleanor Allen Messler, a senior at Vassar College. Firestone has two daughters, Mrs. Geoffrey A. Gordon-Creed of London, and Judith.

Tallulah Students Plan Exchange With Wisconsin

TALLULAH (Special) — One of the most exciting events of the year at Tallulah High School begins Sunday afternoon when thirty senior boys and girls and their sponsors arrive by chartered bus from Monroe, Wisconsin.

They will be welcomed at approximately 4:30 by Tallulah students in whose homes they will stay the week. A group of thirty students from Tallulah will complete the exchange in April when they visit Wisconsin.

For most of the Wisconsin boys and girls, this will be their first visit to Louisiana. They will no doubt find many things different, including our southern drawl and the weather.

Plans now being made for them include going to classes, visit to the Vicksburg National Military Park and the Engineer's Waterway Experimental Station, a tour of the state capitol in Baton Rouge, lunch as guest of the Standard Oil Company and a tour of the Standard Oil Refinery in Baton Rouge.

On Wednesday afternoon they will visit some of the old homes of Natchez, have dinner at the Carriage House and attend the Confederate Pageant in the evening.

On Friday they will be guests of the Tallulah Rotary Club for lunch. Other activities include two dances at the Tallulah Country Club, a visit to the Chicago Mill and Lumber Comany and on Saturday evening they will attend a showing of the melodrama "Gold in the Hills" on board the Steamer Sprague.

This will be the fourth exchange for Tallulah. The first was with Fort Myers, Florida in 1955, the second was with Plymouth, Wisconsin in 1958 and the third was with Spencer, Iowa in 1960.

WATERWAY TIE-IN

Red River Valley Is Nearing Goal

By WILLIAM G. ALLEN

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The Red River Valley will soon reach a long-sought goal—a tie-in with the inland waterway system of the United States.

A barge line owned by Heart of Texas Transportation Co. of Fort Worth, Tex., is scheduled to be in operation by this summer, offering common carrier service between New Orleans and Denison, Tex., on the Red River.

Businessmen in the main valley of the river, a vast area of about 68,000 square miles in Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas, feel that barge service will place them in a competitive position with areas now served by water by lowering transportation costs.

They have worked for years for a connection with the Mississippi River through either a lateral canal or the river itself.

Final Interstate Commerce Commission sanction of the barge line was granted Heart of Texas in January.

With headquarters in Shreveport, it will run from Denison to New Orleans via the Red and Mississippi rivers and over another route by way of the Red, the Atchafalaya River and the Intracoastal Canal.

The idea of navigating Red River in its present state was conceived by Texas oilman and Oklahoma rancher Barney Holland of Fort Worth, president of Heart of Texas.

Early in his efforts to prove that he could put commercial barges on the stream Holland heard the warnings of skeptics.

Starting out far inland, Red River expands into a red stream of terror that washed away barns and crops in four states before the government threw up protective reservoirs and started a bank stabilization program. Even now, the skeptics warned, the river can change the course of its channel overnight and is full of enough sandbars to frustrate the best of navigators.

Undaunted, the husky rancher set out to prove them wrong.

"This is important to the southwest," Holland once said. "The only thing cities in the Red River Basin can't offer industry is water transportation."

Holland reasoned that he would have to use equipment light enough to pass over the sandbars and yet have enough power to go against the swift current.

Jet propulsion proved to be the solution.

Holland first thought of using barges on Red River in 1958. His Oklahoma ranch near Idabel needs molasses and fertilizers, and they could be transported cheaply by water.

If he were going to come up the river with those products, he thought, why not carry other merchandise down river?

From that point, his plan developed into a full-scale commercial line that will offer transportation for general commodities.

In February, 1960, searching for a tug especially suited for Red River, he attended a boat show in Texas and saw a film on the principle of jet propulsion as adapted to boats.

West Monroe Negro Booked

A 48-year-old Negro was booked for aggravated battery in West Monroe yesterday and another Negro man hospitalized with a fractured leg.

West Monroe police booked Eddie Sampson Jr. of 1201 North Seventy St., West Monroe, for aggravated battery on John Hamburg.

Freak Accident Injures Woman

A West Monroe stopped her car yesterday morning to drop some money into the fund for Crippled Children and wound up crippling herself, temporarily.

Mrs. Bessie Braswell, 37, of 609 Pine St., West Monroe, had stopped her vehicle on the new traffic bridge to drop some money into the can for the Crippled Children's fund that was being shaken by a Monroe police officer. Several organizations also shook the can for the fund on downtown streets.

Suddenly the car jumped into the curb of the street, spinning the steering wheel in which her arm was caught, breaking the arm.

The policeman took her to a doctor who set the arm.

Farm Bill's Chances Not Too Bright

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has been weighing the Kennedy administration's take-it-or-leave-it farm program for nearly two months now and the reading on the scales offers sponsors little to boast about.

It is the consensus of many congressmen, farm leaders and other observers that the plan has virtually no chance of being enacted into law in its entirety. In fact, there is much to support the belief that little of it will hurdle a reluctant Congress.

The plan would seek to halt overproduction of wheat, feed grains and milk through production controls more rigid than any ever proposed by a president before. Such controls would require approval by at least two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum. If farmers said no, the government would withdraw price supports on the commodity involved and leave producers on their own.

Supplies of a number of other products would be controlled through self-help marketing order program, also requiring approval by producers.

President Kennedy has said present programs cannot be continued because of their increasing cost to taxpayers and also because they are not halting a pile-up of surpluses.

The administration plan ran into opposition of congressmen and farm leaders who demand less rather than more government in agriculture.

Cotton Futures Show Narrow Weekly Range

NEW YORK (AP)—Cotton futures wound up mixed on the New York Cotton Exchange this week after fluctuating within a narrow range. At the close, Friday prices were down 30 cents to up 65 cents a bale.

In the preceding week losses by some deliveries ranged to 30 cents, gains by others to 90 cents.

Heaviest activity continued to be in nearby contracts, especially in the May delivery which has moved up steadily over the past month. Most support came from chart buying, some short covering and speculation that the free supply might tighten in the weeks ahead.

The market showed little reaction to government reports early in the week on fall planting intentions and on cotton ginnings.

The exchange service bureau estimated February consumption at 750,000 bales for a daily rate of 35,900, up 3½ per cent from the 34,700 of January and up .6 per cent from the five-year average.

For the season through February, consumption was put at 5,378,000 bales against 4,786,000 in the like period a year ago. This level pointed to an indicated level of 9,100,000 for the entire season.

Exports for the week ended March 20 were about 102,000 bales, compared with 169,000 for the like 1960 week.

Head Of Rubber Company Plans To Wed Again

CAMDEN, S. C. (AP)—The engagement of Jane Allen Messler, of Pittsford, N. Y., and Raymond C. Firestone, Bath, Ohio, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., was announced Saturday.

The announcement was made at a dinner given by Firestone and his daughter, Judith, whose engagement to Dale Thiel, manager of the Camden Hunt, was revealed only last Saturday.

Mrs. Messler is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Clarke Allen, Rochester, N. Y. Her father was an official of the Eastman Kodak Co. Her great-grandfather, Freeman Clarke, served as comptroller of currency under President Abraham Lincoln.

Firestone is the fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone of Akron, Ohio. His father founded the Firestone company.

Mrs. Messler has a daughter, Eleanor Allen Messler, a senior at Vassar College. Firestone has two daughters, Mrs. Geoffrey A. Gordon-Creed of London, and Judith.

SCHOOL BUS TRAGEDY

Driver Acquitted In Death Of 20

GREELEY, Colo. (UPI)—A jury of Duane J. Harms' Weld County neighbors stayed up all night to find him innocent Saturday of manslaughter in the deaths of 20 children last Dec. 14 in the collision of his school bus with a train.

The jury deliberated 9 hours, deciding twice not to retire with the verdict unresolved, before it reported at 7:05 a.m. Harms was innocent of criminal negligence.

Harms, who saw one of the survivors of the crash, and the father of one of the victims, testify in his defense, went home for a long sleep, telling newsmen at the door of the court room he was too tired to talk.

Harms waited out the verdict with his wife, Judy, 23, his parents and his sister. He showed no reaction when it was announced.

The jury considered retiring twice during the night—at midnight and again at 1:30 a.m. Both times they decided to continue.

The jurors found, in effect, that Harms, 23, on a bitterly cold morning at a rural crossing near here, had fulfilled his duties by stopping his bus, looking and listening before he started across.

A speeding Union Pacific streamliner, the City of Denver, racing toward Denver far behind schedule because of the Christmas mail rush, sliced the bus in two and left the dead and dying spread up and down the tracks.

A key witness for Harms was a survivor, Jerry Hembry, 16, who was riding in the front of the bus. He testified Harms stopped before he started to cross the tracks.

Harms himself testified that he was sure he stopped because he always did, but that he did not remember actually stopping on that occasion.

The train crew said he did not—that he merely slowed down, then started across.

Arthur Larons, who lost a 9-year-old son in the tragedy, backed up young Hembry's testimony. Larson was driving near the crossing and could see the bus. He said he was sure it stopped.

Harms had been free on $1,000 bond during the trial.

Offshore Lease Sale May Cut Other Drilling

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—The $445.8 million offshore oil lease sale—biggest in history—will cause a drop in onshore drilling, the Oil and Gas Journal said Saturday.

The journal also said that new offshore drilling equipment would have to be developed to explore some of the tracts, which are in water 240 feet or more deep.

Oil companies spent $445.8 million on the 412 tracts off Louisiana and Texas in the sale at New Orleans last week, and will spend additional millions for drilling and development, the journal said. "The result can only be a cutback elsewhere," it added.

The journal said the sale was the largest in area, 1,912,928 acres, and in total price, $445,835,533, but the average per-acre price of $223.06 was the smallest ever for a government offshore lease sale. It attributed this to the large number of deep-water tracts.

Humble Oil & Refining Co. paid the most money, $63,167,035 for 41 tracts. Shell Oil Co. bought the most leases, 57 for $45,508,109.

The largest single bid was $15,405,000 for a 5,000-acre block, a combination bid by Ohio Oil Co. and Pure Oil Co. The highest per-acre value was $3,201 by Shell for a 594-acre tract.

The Journal said that in addition to the money to be committed to developing these leases, oil companies "can gird themselves for still two more offshore sales this year."

One is scheduled April 11, another in the summer or fall.

PAR Slates Meeting On School Views

Panelists representing three viewpoints will discuss the question of what should be expected from the high schools during the morning session of the Eighth Annual Conference on Louisiana Government in Baton Rouge on March 30.

Sponsoring the Conference is the Public Affairs Research Council (PAR). The discussion will begin at 10 a.m. in the Capitol House, and the public is invited. There is no registration fee.

Discussing the subject from the standpoint of industry will be Robert H. Evans of Monroe, vice president of the Olin Forest Products Division of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation.

Evans inaugurated the Frostkraft Grant for Scientific Education under which Olin Mathieson has sponsored advanced classes in chemistry and physics at high schools in the Monroe area for the past five years, and which has now been extended to other Olin plant locations.

In civic activities in Monroe, Evans has served as president of the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish and is currently chairman of the Ouachita Parish Civil Defense Committee. The Air Force Association awarded him a citation at the Aerospace Education Symposium at Louisiana Tech last November.

Discussing what institutions of higher education should expect from the high schools will be Lt. Genl. Troy H. Middleton who recently retired from the presidency of Louisiana State University and was named president emeritus.

Gen. Middleton has been associated with LSU since 1930, except for a term of service in World War II. During World War II he commanded the English Corps through France, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Germany.

Among the many citations given Gen. Middleton are those of "senior citizen for 1960" by the Rotary Club, and the 1958 citation by the Baton Rouge Chamber of Commerce.

Speaking from the standpoint of what labor expects from the high schools will be Gordon Flory of Baton Rouge, executive vice president of the Louisiana State Labor Council AFL-CIO.

Flory has been active in the work of organized labor since 1941 and has held a number of offices in the labor movement, including service on the merger committee which joined the AFL and CIO in Louisiana. He has headed the Department of Legislative Activities of the State Labor Council.

Presiding over the panel discussion will be William J. Dodd, president of the Louisiana State Board of Education.

A luncheon will conclude the Conference program when the feature address will be given by A. Boyd Campbell of Jackson, Miss., who is a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Commission on Goals for Higher Education in the South.

A PAR membership meeting will be held in the afternoon with a report by retiring President Vertrees Young, and election of officers and trustees.

GOP Advisory Group To Deal With Policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 50-member Republican Advisory Committee being set up by National Chairman William E. Miller apparently is going to deal with policy despite opposition of party congressional leaders.

Miller mailed out formal invitations last week to governors, national committee members, state chairmen and others to join the "All Republican Conference." He expects the group to play a part not only in his year's campaign but in the 1964 presidential election drive.

Miller said in an interview that all shades of opinion in the party will be represented. He said there will be a geographical distribution of members as well.

Former Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and Herbert Hoover and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon are being asked to participate. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., potential bidders for the party's top nomination in 1964, will be members.

Miller's obvious objective is to give Republicans who are not members of Congress a wider voice in party affairs.

Miller, a member of the House from New York State, wants men like Govs. John A. Volpe of Massachusetts and Norman A. Erbe of Iowa to have something to say about the direction in which the GOP is going.

BRAZIL TO GET SUBS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) The United States will deliver two submarines to Brazil in August, a Brazilian navy spokesman announced. The deal is part of a mutual assistance program.

DISCUSSING THE SUBJECT "What Should We Expect From Our High Schools?" at the PAR Conference on Louisiana Government, March 30 in Baton Rouge, will be Robert H. Evans of Monroe, vice president and general manager of the Olin Products Division; Gordon Flory of Baton Rouge, executive assistant to the president, Louisiana State Labor Council AFL-CIO; and Gen. Troy H. Middleton of Baton Rouge, President Emeritus of Louisiana State University. Chairman of the panel will be William J. Dodd, president of the State Board of Education.

Ex-Bandleader Jean Goldkette Dies At Age 69

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) Jean Goldkette, bandleader prominent in the 1920s and 30s, died early Saturday of a heart attack. He was 69.

The early-day radio star, who moved to Los Angeles not quite a year ago from Detroit, came to Santa Barbara Friday to prepare the formation of a chapter of the National Artists Foundation of Detroit. This nonprofit organization of which Goldkette was honorary president, aids promising young performers in various fields.

About 4:30 a.m., Goldkette complained to a hotel clerk of abdominal pains, then took a cab to Cottage Hospital, where an hour later he died.

Born in Valenciennes, France, Goldkette came to the United States in 1911 and became a professional pianist at 16.

In 1923, he opened the Graystone Ballroom in Detroit and organized what Metronome magazine eventually called "the band that rocked the nation."

Stars who once worked for Goldkette included Bix Beiderbecke, Glenn Miller, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Glen Gray, Joe Venuti, Eddie Lang, Jimmy McPartland, Frankie Trumbauer and Hoagy Carmichael.

Young N.O. Girl Fatally Shot

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A pretty 19-year-old blonde, former French Quarter night club employe, was shot to death Saturday and police arrested her boy friend a short time later.

Sarah Alberson was shot in the head with a .22 caliber pistol. She died 20 minutes after being taken to a hospital.

Officers picked up Jimmy Pitts, 27, in an adjoining Jefferson Parish motel. He was watching television. A young woman was in the room with him.

Police said the shooting in Miss Roberson's French Quarter apartment climaxed an argument between Pitts and another couple, Mary Glacona, 30, and Louis Cochran, 25. The four shares the same apartment.

Cochran and Miss Glacona at first told police the shooting was a suicide, but later said Pitts shot the girl.

Miss Roberson reportedly had worked in a night club until a week ago. Her body, fully clothed, was found on the bedroom floor.

Negro Woman Reports Theft

Monroe police reported that $17 was taken in the burglary of a Negro woman's house on Booth Street early Saturday morning.

The incident was reported to the police Saturday by the Negro woman, Dorothy Logwood, of 2903 Booth St.

She said that around 5:30 a.m., she was awakened by a noise of someone walking through the room in which she was sleeping. A to him but he ran out the kitchen door.

Investigation revealed that $17 had been taken from the woman's purse which was on the chest of drawers. Officers said apparently entrance was gained by raising a window near the door, reaching through and unlocking the door and screen so that the man could walk in.

Solons Blast Hoffa Union Corruption

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate rackets committee has accused Teamster Union president James R. Hoffa of complete disinterest in whether Teamster officials rob or steal union money.

In a still unpublished report prepared for the Senate, the investigators say they are convinced that Hoffa will use every means within his power to keep racketeers and criminals in his union. They add that Hoffa is motivated either by fear or corrupt elements or by a sense of obligation to them.

They say Hoffa exhibited an "unbelievable attitude of defiant arrogance" when confronted with overwhelming evidence that officials of Teamster local 239 in New York were in fact robbing, stealing and dealing under the table.

Moreover, they continue, Hoffa knowingly permitted Local 239 to remain part of a "racket empire" and failed to clean up other locals that had been infiltrated by convicts.

The accusations are contained in findings by the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee headed by Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark. McClellan's panel, known informally as the rackets subcommittee, investigated racketeer infiltration of the Teamsters Union last year.

The conclusion that Hoffa didn't care whether Teamster officials stole or robbed was based partly on an intercepted conversation among three officers of Local 239. One said:

"I'm saying his (Hoffa's) words: I don't care if you want to—you want to steal, you want to rob, go ahead, he says — don't get caught, don't get caught..."

Hoffa stoutly denied under oath that he ever made such a statement. The subcommittee said the evidence clearly showed that he was "completely uninterested" in ousting corrupt officials.

SCHOOL BUS TRAGEDY

Driver Acquitted In Death Of 20

GREELEY, Colo. (UPI)—A jury of Duane J. Harms' Weld County neighbors stayed up all night to find him innocent Saturday of manslaughter in the deaths of 20 children last Dec. 14 in the collision of his school bus with a train.

The jury deliberated 9 hours, deciding twice not to retire with the verdict unresolved, before it reported at 7:05 a.m. Harms was innocent of criminal negligence.

Harms, who saw one of the survivors of the crash, and the father of one of the victims, testify in his defense, went home for a long sleep, telling newsmen at the door of the court room he was too tired to talk.

Harms waited out the verdict with his wife, Judy, 23, his parents and his sister. He showed no reaction when it was announced.

The jury considered retiring twice during the night—at midnight and again at 1:30 a.m. Both times they decided to continue.

The jurors found, in effect, that Harms, 23, on a bitterly cold morning at a rural crossing near here, had fulfilled his duties by stopping his bus, looking and listening before he started across.

A speeding Union Pacific streamliner, the City of Denver, racing toward Denver far behind schedule because of the Christmas mail rush, sliced the bus in two and left the dead and dying spread up and down the tracks.

A key witness for Harms was a survivor, Jerry Hembry, 16, who was riding in the front of the bus. He testified Harms stopped before he started to cross the tracks.

Harms himself testified that he was sure he stopped because he always did, but that he did not remember actually stopping on that occasion.

The train crew said he did not—that he merely slowed down, then started across.

Arthur Larons, who lost a 9-year-old son in the tragedy, backed up young Hembry's testimony. Larson was driving near the crossing and could see the bus. He said he was sure it stopped.

Harms had been free on $1,000 bond during the trial.

Offshore Lease Sale May Cut Other Drilling

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—The $445.8 million offshore oil lease sale—biggest in history—will cause a drop in onshore drilling, the Oil and Gas Journal said Saturday.

The journal also said that new offshore drilling equipment would have to be developed to explore some of the tracts, which are in water 240 feet or more deep.

Oil companies spent $445.8 million on the 412 tracts off Louisiana and Texas in the sale at New Orleans last week, and will spend additional millions for drilling and development, the journal said. "The result can only be a cutback elsewhere," it added.

The journal said the sale was the largest in area, 1,912,928 acres, and in total price, $445,835,533, but the average per-acre price of $223.06 was the smallest ever for a government offshore lease sale. It attributed this to the large number of deep-water tracts.

Humble Oil & Refining Co. paid the most money, $63,167,035 for 41 tracts. Shell Oil Co. bought the most leases, 57 for $45,508,109.

The largest single bid was $15,405,000 for a 5,000-acre block, a combination bid by Ohio Oil Co. and Pure Oil Co. The highest per-acre value was $3,201 by Shell for a 594-acre tract.

The Journal said that in addition to the money to be committed to developing these leases, oil companies "can gird themselves for still two more offshore sales this year."

One is scheduled April 11, another in the summer or fall.

GOP Advisory Group To Deal With Policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 50-member Republican Advisory Committee being set up by National Chairman William E. Miller apparently is going to deal with policy despite opposition of party congressional leaders.

Miller mailed out formal invitations last week to governors, national committee members, state chairmen and others to join the "All Republican Conference." He expects the group to play a part not only in his year's campaign but in the 1964 presidential election drive.

Miller said in an interview that all shades of opinion in the party will be represented. He said there will be a geographical distribution of members as well.

Former Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and Herbert Hoover and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon are being asked to participate. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., potential bidders for the party's top nomination in 1964, will be members.

Miller's obvious objective is to give Republicans who are not members of Congress a wider voice in party affairs.

Miller, a member of the House from New York State, wants men like Govs. John A. Volpe of Massachusetts and Norman A. Erbe of Iowa to have something to say about the direction in which the GOP is going.

PAR Slates Meeting On School Views

Panelists representing three viewpoints will discuss the question of what should be expected from the high schools during the morning session of the Eighth Annual Conference on Louisiana Government in Baton Rouge on March 30.

Sponsoring the Conference is the Public Affairs Research Council (PAR). The discussion will begin at 10 a.m. in the Capitol House, and the public is invited. There is no registration fee.

Discussing the subject from the standpoint of industry will be Robert H. Evans of Monroe, vice president of the Olin Forest Products Division of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation.

Evans inaugurated the Frostkraft Grant for Scientific Education under which Olin Mathieson has sponsored advanced classes in chemistry and physics at high schools in the Monroe area for the past five years, and which has now been extended to other Olin plant locations.

In civic activities in Monroe, Evans has served as president of the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish and is currently chairman of the Ouachita Parish Civil Defense Committee. The Air Force Association awarded him a citation at the Aerospace Education Symposium at Louisiana Tech last November.

Discussing what institutions of higher education should expect from the high schools will be Lt. Genl Troy H. Middleton who recently retired from the presidency of Louisiana State University and was named president emeritus.

Gen. Middleton has been associated with LSU since 1930, except for a term of service in World War II. During World War II he commanded the English Corps through France, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Germany.

Among the many citations given Gen. Middleton are those of "senior citizen for 1960" by the Rotary Club, and the 1958 citation by the Baton Rouge Chamber of Commerce.

Speaking from the standpoint of what labor expects from the high schools will be Gordon Flory of Baton Rouge, executive vice president of the Louisiana State Labor Council AFL-CIO.

Flory has been active in the work of organized labor since 1941 and has held a number of offices in the labor movement, including service on the merger committee which joined the AFL and CIO in Louisiana. He has headed the Department of Legislative Activities of the State Labor Council.

Presiding over the panel discussion will be William J. Dodd, prescdent of the Louisiana State Board of Education.

A luncheon will conclude the Conference program when the feature address will be given by A. Boyd Campbell of Jackson, Miss., who is a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Commission on Goals for Higher Education in the South.

A PAR membership meeting will be held in the afternoon with a report by retiring President Vertrees Young, and election of officers and trustees.

Potter Says New Frontier Unacceptable

NATCHEZ, Miss. (Special) — I. Lee Potter, assistant to National Republican Committee Chairman William Miller and State GOP Chairman for Virginia, told members of the Natchez Kiwanis Club that the "New Frontier" does not represent the ideas of Mississippi or the South and said: "What the nation needs is the clear expression of minority views."

Potter, who was introduced by Charlie Klumb, of Crystal Springs, chairman of the Mississippi Republican Party finance committee, said the product the Republican party has to offer the South is good, conservative government. An active two - party system is the only way to achieve and maintain good government, according to Potter.

The basic question asked by the visiting Republican leader was, "Are you satisfied with what you now have?" He insisted that unpledged electors cannot provide a solution. He spoke of unpledged electors as a one-way street that ends no place.

Potter further said his conviction that the GOP can offer the people good government and a good platform if the public is willing to come forward and participate. In challenging his hearers to consider the political situation, Potter predicted that the first action Congressman John Bell Williams will take if re-elected is to vote for John McCormick as Speaker of the House. This, he said, will lead to the selection of a number of committee chairmen totally unacceptable to most Mississippians.

Potter also stated that the Republican Party is in good shape in Mississippi and pointed out several state and local elections recently won in the South by Republican candidates.

He praised Mrs. J. Balfour Miller of Natchez, committeewoman of the party for her work. Mrs Miller presented Klumb.

At the conclusion of the program, Kiwanis Club Dallas Robertson presented a certificate of appreciation to Potter.

Ouachita's Parish Public Libraries are in financial trouble. Compare them to a man whose family and expenses have doubled. His salary has remained the same — and it will be cut off soon.

Exactly $42,045.56 was available on March 1 for library operating expenses, which run about $9,000 a month. The four libraries will be out-of-money by August.

The five-year tax has run out. It was three-quarters of a mill, and never was sufficient to meet spiraling expenses.

Parish property owners will vote April 17 on a new library operating tax, of one and five-tenths mills.

This millage is far below that of many parishes in Louisiana, and the money provided would be about one-third of what the American Library Association recommends for a parish of this size.

If the parish votes against the tax, the libraries will have to close their doors in late July, when funds-on-hand run out.

Library expenses have doubled since 1956 when the last tax was passed. At that time, it cost $51,648.28 for the year. In 1961, the cost stood at $109,286.53.

Yet, the Ouachita Parish Public Library has operated on the lowest tax rate of any library in the state, for several years.

Tax millage rates for nearby parishes are Caldwell, 3.5; Richland, 2.5; Jackson, 3.5; Union, 3; Morehouse, 1.5.

Jefferson parish's rate is 5 mills; Rapides, 5; Lafayette, 2; the City of Lake Charles is 2.25.

What will the library do with the increased funds, besides continuing in operation?

1. Put the library on a current operating basis — it has been in the red each year, because tax returns continuously were below what has been expected.

2. Purchase additional bookmobiles and improve service in neglected areas.

3. Bring the book collection up to A.L.A. standards of one book per person.

4. Purchase more phono-records and periodicals.

5. Establish a film collection.

6. Employ additional staff members to give the public better service.

7. Keep the library open longer hours each day, and open on Sunday afternoons.

The American Library Association recommends a budget of $349,654 for a parish of 100,000 people, or $3.49 a person. In 1961, Ouachita's Parish Public Library spent $109,286.53, or $1.07 per person.

Tax assessment for the parish last year would provide $161,587.00 under the proposed tax, or $1.60 per person.

"This would be about half of what the A.L.A. advocates," commented Miss Frances Flanders, librarian. "We feel we can give improved service with the new tax."

One reason why expenses have soared is the improvement in buildings. In 1956, Ouachita had the old, wooden house on Jackson Street, a similar building in West Monroe and the Carver branch.

Since then, three large, modern brick structures have been built: the main library on North 18 Street, the Anna Meyer Branch on Jackson Street, and the West Monroe branch library.

Operating expenses have risen — large utilities' bills, a larger budget for salaries to pay the new personnel, costs for more books, records, films, etc.

For example, in 1956 the library staff totalled 12 full time workers. In 1961, it was 23. Salaries increased from $27,527.26 to $58,485.22.

The library spends an enormous percentage of its money for books.

Last year, $20,227.17 went on books, compared to $6,368.72 in 1956.

In black and white, here are the rest of the comparative figures between 1956 and 1961, giving a graphic picture of how expenses have gone up:

1956 binding, $1,069.97 — 1961 price, $1,321.18.

Periodicals, $546.65 — $793.65.

Audio visual aids, $239.42 — $423.12.

Insurance $1,667.64 — $1,947.88 (the insurance rate dropped since the libraries moved into brick buildings, which are far less of a fire hazard than the old wooden libraries).

Tax assessor, $946.78 — $1,898.08.

Utilities, $611.33 — $8,729.56. Utilities have shown a tremendous increase in expense to the libraries. Until the new West Monroe branch was constructed, the city of West Monroe paid the bills for that library. Now, the branch has to pay all of its own bills. Larger, better lighted and temperature - regulated libraries also make for larger bills.

Household supplies $202.37 — $1,041.52 (another huge increase).

Equipment $122.50 — $111.69. This is one of two items which have shown a slight decrease.

Repairs, $172.43 — $1,487.96.

Janitors, $1,023 — $4,720.38.

Library supplies, $1,593.75 — $3,818.10.

Telephone, $621.16 — $1,565.37.

Travel, $383.42 — $223.29.

Dues, $25 — $59.

Postage, $232.97 — $839.84.

Bookmobile, 498.74 — $817.12.

Tallulah Slated To Host Officers Meeting May 27

TALLULAH (Special) — The Louisiana Division of International Association for Identification will hold it's annual convention in Tallulah May 27-30, according to Sheriff C. E. Hester.

The organization is composed of law enforcement personnel actively engaged in identification work.

It is the 17th annual conference, and is the first to be held in this district in several years. The department is working in cooperation with the police department.

"Plans for the program are not yet complete," said Sheriff Hester, "but there will be speakers from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the state identification bureau in Baton Rouge and Jackson, Miss."

Fund-Raising Lily Sale At Ferriday Held

FERRIDAY (Special) — Lilies grew on the streets of Ferriday Saturday when the annual Lily Day was held throughout the business district by the Ferriday Fire Department to help raise funds for crippled children. Several thousand lilies were sold.

Led by E. E. Wallace, assistant fire chief, Lily Day is a feature of the 1962 Easter Seal Campaign which continues through Easter Sunday, April 22.

The 1962 Easter Seal Campaign is being held simultaneously by approximately 1,400 Easter Seal state and local affiliates of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults in all 50 states, District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

It was stated by Assistant Fire Chief Wallace that approximately 90 per cent of the funds raised remains in the state where aid is given in rehabilitation services for the area's crippled. The remainder, he said, helps support a national program of direct service, education and research.

NEAR RUSSIA BORDER

Bush Pilots Touch Off Soviet Alert

WASHINGTON (AP) — A flight of Alaskan bush pilots on a polar bear hunting foray flew too close to Soviet territory last Wednesday and touched off a brief scramble of Russian planes, the Federal Aviation Agency said Saturday.

At least one U. S. military plane was put up to counter the Soviet action, an FAA spokesman said, but the Russian planes had turned back by that time. The activity was over in a few minutes.

He said he did not know exactly how close the U. S. bear-hunting flyers came to the Soviet-U.S. border, but it was "too close."

And the pilots, who annually fly hunters out over the arctic pack ice this time of year, have been warned not to come that close again, the FAA said.

The spokesman said the incident took place in the vicinity of Diomede Island in the Bering Strait.

He gave these details:

A number of professional hunters took off in 12 planes from Kotzebue, Alaska, in search of polar bears on the pack ice. If they are found the procedure then is to land the planes and let the hunters pursue the bears.

This year the pack ice had drifted much closer to the international boundary than usual and the Russian planes took off to investigate as the hunters' planes approached. The United States then responded with its plane—or planes. The spokesman said his information does not show how many American planes were put in the air.

The hunters, unaware of the activity on both sides, eventually turned back—"without seeing any planes of either side and without finding any bears," the spokesman said.

"They did not land on Soviet territory and did not fly into Soviet air space," he added. "Nobody got excited."

He said so far as he knew it was the first time such an incident had occurred, although hundreds of bear-hunting flights are made by hunters every year and are still continuing now.

NEW OPERATING TAX PROPOSED

Public Libraries In Parish Facing Financial Trouble

By MARY ANN CORPIN
World Staff Writer

Ouachita's Parish Public Liraries are in financial trouble. Compare them to a man whose family and expenses have doubled. His salary has remained the same — and it will be cut off soon.

Exactly $42,045.56 was available on March 1 for library operating expenses, which run about $9,000 a month. The four libraries will be out-of-money by August.

The five-year tax has run out. It was three-quarters of a mill, and never was sufficient to meet spiraling expenses.

Parish property owners will vote April 17 on a new library operating tax, of one and five-tenths mills.

This millage is far below that of many parishes in Louisiana, and the money provided would be about one-third of what the American Library Association recommends for a parish of this size.

If the parish votes against the tax, the libraries will have to close their doors in late July, when funds-on-hand run out.

Library expenses have doubled since 1956 when the last tax was passed. At that time, it cost $51,648.28 for the year. In 1961, the cost stood at $109,286.53.

Yet, the Ouachita Parish Public Library has operated on the lowest tax rate of any library in the state, for several years.

Tax millage rates for nearby parishes are: Caldwell, 3.5; Richland, 2.5; Jackson, 3.5; Union, 3; Morehouse, 1.5.

What will the library do with the increased funds, besides continuing in operation?

1. Put the library on a current operating basis — it has been in the red each year, because tax returns continuously were below what has been expected.
2. Purchase additional bookmobiles and improve service in neglected areas.
3. Bring the book collection up to A.L.A. standards of one book per person.
4. Purchase more phono-records and periodicals.
5. Establish a film collection.
6. Employ additional staff members to give the public better service.
7. Keep the library open longer hours each day, and open on Sunday afternoons.

The American Library Association recommends a budget of $349,654 for a parish of 100,000 people, or $3.49 a person. In 1961, Ouachita's Parish Public Library spent $109,286.53, or $1.07 per person.

Communist Cuba Regime Is Reshuffled

HAVANA (AP) — The Cuban government announced a reshuffle of the Cabinet Saturday. A long-time Communist party member moved into a top post as interior trade minister and a revolutionary heroine took over as a key aide.

Prime Minister Fidel Castro promised some top-level changes in a major address recently. He charged there were abuses of authority and numerous errors by his aides. But the changes announced looked more like transfers than dismissals.

Long-time Communist party member Manuel Luzardo replaced Maximo Berman in the Ministry of Trade. The announcement said Berman will fulfill other government functions.

Celia Sanchez, who fought beside Castro in the mountains of eastern Cuba during his guerrilla days, was named secretary to the presidency and the Council of Ministers. This is not a post of ministerial capacity. She succeeded Luis Buch, who had been named to head the Cuban Supreme Court.

The reshuffle came on the heels of an announcement Friday that the prime minister and his brother Raul had taken over the two top posts in the 25-member directorate of the Integrated Revolutionary Organization (ORI). This is the political party formed to guide Cuba along a Socialist path. It is expected to become the United Socialist party.

In other Cabinet moves, the government press said Faure Chomon would be recalled as ambassador to the Soviet Union to take over the job of communications minister. The present minister, Capt. Raul Curbelo, becomes chief of the air force.

Curbelo succeeds Cmdr. Sergio del Valle, who was recently named to the ORI directorate. No new government job was announced for him but his appointment to the political party's directorate indicates no falling out of favor.

FASHIONS FOR MEN

Half-Inch Stripes Perk Up Londoners

By WALTER LOGAN
United Press International

LONDON (UPI) — The white shirt, probably the first status symbol adopted by the working man to show he had moved onward and upward, is giving way in Britain to the striped shirt—bold, broad stripes that can be seen a block away.

The more dignified business man keeps his stripes fairly sedate and might even wear a white collar with them but the younger generation frequenting West End cocktail lounges goes in for the all-powerful variety.

One young man in his twenties was wearing a shirt with half-inch wide stripes in a dark red, almost maroon color. His companions were only slightly less conspicuous. All wore widespread collars (starched), plain black tie and plain three-piece suits.

John Taylor, editor of Tailor and Cutter, the authoritative British magazine on style and clothes, predicts even more popularity for the striped shirt but says it has killed the fancy vest and tie just when they were getting popular.

It is not clear at this point who is leading whom but the striped shirts are achieving a sudden popularity in New York, too, and some of the leading Madison Avenue and Fifth Avenue men's shops are featuring them in big newspaper ads.

Taylor, himself a picture of sartorial splendor, gives several pointers on the wearing of bold stripes. He says the safest tie to wear is a plain one and especially the narrow plain ones.

They should be worn with a plain suit, he said, but "a striped shirt is okay with a striped suit under two conditions: (a) if the width of the stripe matches exactly the width of the stripe in the shirt, or (b) if the difference in the widths of the two kinds of stripes is so marked as to produce a very definite contrast rather than a slightly missing match."

Other pointers: a longer point collar is the most effective styling for a bold stripe. . . . The semi-or stiffened collar is better than the wholly soft, as the latter is more likely to fold and crease — and so distort the pattern of the striping.

Taylor notes the usefulness of the low-cut collar where the neckband graduates to nothing at the front top button fastening. This is a move that can add an inch to an otherwise short-appearing neck. High cut collars can mask a long, scraggly neck.

And, while Britain invented the button down collar (which is worn only in the country in England, never in the city) Taylor and Cutter notes that the button down is, "even in poplin or broadcloth, a style which one would hardly formalize beyond a flannel suit."

How does this affect Americans? Well, the striped shirt already is making the transatlantic crossing and manufacturers are showing them in half-inch pink candy stripes for spring with button down, tab and other fancy collars—and in short sleeves.

Louisiana Tech To Host Band Meet This Week

RUSTON (Special) — Forty-one area bands in the northeast district of the Louisiana Music Educators Association will participate in the annual band festival here next weekend. Thursday's events will be held at the Ruston High School. Louisiana Tech will be host to the Friday and Saturday sessions.

The bands will be given constructive criticism on their concert playing and ability at sight reading. Those bands receiving a rating of superior will be eligible to enter the LMEA state competition in Baton Rouge the latter part of April.

The concert playing will be in Howard Auditorium and will be open to the public. Festival activities will start at 8:30 a.m. each day.

Search Abandoned For Missing Plane

CLARK AFB, Philippines (UPI) — The Air Force Friday abandoned its massive search for the chartered Flying Tiger airliner which vanished over the Pacific with 107 persons aboard eight days ago. All are officially presumed dead.

Aboard the plane were 93 jungle-trained U.S. soldiers en route to South Viet Nam to bolster that country's fight against Communist infiltration. There were 11 crew members, including 4 women, and 3 Vietnamese soldiers.

End of the search that covered hundreds of thousands of square miles of the southwest Pacific and scores of planes and ships was announced by Maj. Gen. Theodore R. Milton, commander of the 13th Air Force, who said there had been no trace of the plane or passengers.

The four-engine Super Constellation disappeared on hour out of Guam on a six-hour flight to the Philippines across 1,600 miles of sea. The search was begun shortly after dawn last Friday when the plane was declared overdue at this U.S. air base.

A Clark Air Force Base spokesman said aircraft participating in the search had flown a cumulative total of 152 search missions from here totalling 1,150 flying hours. Other planes flew from Guam in round-the-clock missions that added up to 377 individual flights.

The spokesman said that although the search had been called off, all civilian and military aircraft and ships in the search area will be asked to maintain a lookout for the missing plane for several weeks.

It was generally believed the big plane exploded in flight with such suddeness the pilot had no time to report trouble. Air Force officials discounted sabotage reports.

CONCERNING ARTMOBILE

Story On Arkansas Tour Causes Furor

Syndicated columnist Dorothy Kilgallen has raised a furor in Arkansas over a printed remark she made concerning an artmobile tour of the state scheduled this fall.

Noting that Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller (New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller's sister-in-law who lives in Arkansas) is promoting the art tour, Miss Kilgallen said TV films should be made because the reactions of the natives ought to be fascinating."

In answer to a newsman's questions concerning the statement, Mrs. Rockefeller asked, "Who is Dorothy Kilgallen?"

It all started when Arkansans read Miss Kilgallen's column Thursday.

Miss Kilgallen wrote:

"Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller intends to do her best to take art to the small towns of the U.S.A. Under her guidance, a $50,000 air-conditioned gallery on wheels, called an 'art-mobile,' will tour the Ozark hills this Fall. First exhibit scheduled is the Walter P. Chrysler Jr. collection of old masters. Let's hope some alert TV network will assign a camera crew and reporters to cover that project; the reactions of the natives ought to be fascinating."

"Reaction? Wow!," headlined Arkansas Gazette columnist Charles Allbright in Friday morning editions. Allbright noted that the ire of Arkansans was made known early and is lasting late.

Thus prompted, he interviewed Mrs. Rockefeller who commented "All of us are very excited about it (the artmobile tour). A great many Arkansans have played an important part in bringing it into being and everywhere the tour is discussed throughout the state. It's meeting with great enthusiasm

"We're certain there'll be a fine reception," she added

Allbright then noted that only one thing puzzled Mrs. Rockefeller. "Who," she asked, "is Dorothy Kilgallen?"

Mrs. Janice Clark of Crossett, a hobby painter and member of the Fine Arts Center of Little Rock under whose auspices the artmobile will travel, was furious.

In a letter to Miss Kilgallen, Mrs. Clark said, "Let us hope that Mrs. Rockefeller's efforts and those of many more like her will one day elevate the taste of the 'natives' to a point where people like you will no longer be able to earn such a tidy living with nothing more to contribute than back fence gossip."

"I think you will find," wrote Mrs. Clark, "we can take the Walter P. Chrysler Jr. collections of old masters in our stride."

She added, "There are those of us, Miss Kilgallen, who must live in the midst of the forests in order that paper on which your inanities are printed may be produced."

The distaste for the Kilgallen comment reached to the Statehouse. State publicity director Clovis Copeland said he was drafting a letter of protest and planned to submit it to the Publicity and Parks Commission. Copeland said Miss Kilgallen had "cast aspersions on Arkansas."

Added Mr. Clark, "aspersions on small towns everywhere for that matter."

Fire Fatal For Seven Persons

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI)—Seven persons burned to death Saturday when fire raced through an old, three-story rooming house that catered to elderly "out patients" from a nearby hospital

Another of the 15 occupants—an elderly woman—received minor cuts and burns in fleeing the flames

The victims were identified as William T. Johnson, 81; Godwin Giles, 84; Mrs. Mary E. Gentry, 93; Elizabeth Watson, 81; Linwood C. Taylor, 54; Charles Hunt, 32, and James Meadows, 22.

Officials said the fire started in the basement of the 50-year-old building and quickly swept up through the other levels to the roof. The roof and third floor of the building eventually collapsed and the chimney crashed into the cellar

The blaze was discovered shortly after 1 a.m. EST and all available fire-fighting equipment from Charlottesville and neighboring Albermarle County was pressed into the fight. Firemen finally brought the flames under control about 3:30 a.m. EST

Six bodies were immediately found in the ruins and a seventh was discovered several hours later

Castro Now Communist Mouthpiece

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fidel Castro is still the most important man in the Cuban government, though his role has undergone a gradual but radical transformation.

Without Castro, the Communists who have been gaining increasing power and responsibility would be unable to carry out their plans or get them accepted by the Cuban masses.

But, because the Communists consider the flighty Castro politically unreliable, they have gradually diffused his power and the direct control he once had over every department of government.

These are the views of Cuban affairs specialists here who keep track of the most minute developments in Havana.

These specialists point out that Castro no longer is the free-wheeling, one-man show of the early days of his revolution. Instead, they believe, Castro has become a mouthpiece, or salesman, for the policies of the emerging directorate in which Cuba's old-time Communists play a major part.

Castro has been named first secretary of the national directorate of the Integrated Revolutionary Organization, a transitional group that is expected to become the Politburo of Cuba's future Soviet-styled, one - party system.

This puts Castro right in the inner circle of power in Cuba. But this power, informed observers here believe, does not include such basic aspects of the Cuban government as agriculture, industry, labor, foreign commerce and foreign policy.

These are in the hands of the hard-line Communists who share the power with Castro.

The Communists need Castro, however, to put their ideas across to the Cuban masses. In this respect, Castro, a master orator, has no equal in Cuba.

CONCERNING ARTMOBILE

Story On Arkansas Tour Causes Furor

Syndicated columnist Dorothy Kilgallen has raised a furor in Arkansas over a printed remark she made concerning an artmobile tour of the state scheduled this fall.

Noting that Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller (New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller's sister-in-law who lives in Arkansas) is promoting the art tour, Miss Kilgallen said TV films should be made because "the reactions of the natives ought to be fascinating."

In answer to a newsman's questions concerning the statement, Mrs. Rockefeller asked, "Who is Dorothy Kilgallen?"

It all started when Arkansans read Miss Kilgallen's column Thursday.

Miss Kilgallen wrote:

"Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller intends to do her best to take art to the small towns of the U.S.A. Under her guidance, a $50,000 air-conditioned gallery on wheels, called an 'art-mobile,' will tour the Ozark hills this Fall. First exhibit scheduled is the Walter P. Chrysler Jr. collection of old masters. Let's hope some alert TV network will assign a camera crew and reporters to cover that project; the reactions of the natives ought to be fascinating."

"Reaction? Wow!," headlined Arkansas Gazette columnist Charles Allbright in Friday morning editions. Allbright noted that the ire of Arkansans was made known early and is lasting late.

Thus prompted, he interviewed Mrs. Rockefeller who commented: "All of us are very excited about it (the artmobile tour). A great many Arkansans have played an important part in bringing it into being and everywhere the tour is discussed throughout the state. It's meeting with great enthusiasm.

"We're certain there'll be a fine reception," she added.

Allbright then noted that only one thing puzzled Mrs. Rockefeller. "Who," she asked, "is Dorothy Kilgallen?"

Mrs. Janice Clark of Crossett, a hobby painter and member of the Fine Arts Center of Little Rock under whose auspices the artmobile will travel, was furious.

In a letter to Miss Kilgallen, Mrs. Clark said, "Let us hope that Mrs. Rockefeller's efforts and those of many more like her will one day elevate the taste of the 'natives' to a point where people like you will no longer be able to earn such a tidy living with nothing more to contribute than back fence gossip."

"I think you will find," wrote Mrs. Clark, "we can take the Walter P. Chrysler Jr. collections of old masters in our stride."

She added, "There are those of us, Miss Kilgallen, who must live in the midst of the forests in order that paper on which your inanities are printed may be produced."

The distaste for the Kilgallen comment reached to the Statehouse. State publicity director Clovis Copeland said he was drafting a letter of protest and planned to submit it to the Publicity and Parks Commission. Copeland said Miss Kilgallen had "cast aspersions on Arkansas."

Added Mr. Clark, "aspersions on small towns everywhere for that matter."

Castro Now Communist Mouthpiece

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fidel Castro is still the most important man in the Cuban government, though his role has undergone a gradual but radical transformation.

Without Castro, the Communists who have been gaining increasing power and responsibility would be unable to carry out their plans or get them accepted by the Cuban masses.

But, because the Communists consider the flighty Castro politically unreliable, they have gradually diffused his power and the direct control he once had over every department of government.

These are the views of Cuban affairs specialists here who keep track of the most minute developments in Havana.

These specialists point out that Castro no longer is the free-wheeling, one-man show of the early days of his revolution. Instead, they believe, Castro has become a mouthpiece, or salesman, for the policies of the emerging directorate in which Cuba's old-time Communists play a major part.

Castro has been named first secretary of the national directorate of the Integrated Revolutionary Organization, a transitional group that is expected to become the Politburo of Cuba's future Soviet-styled, one - party system.

This puts Castro right in the inner circle of power in Cuba. But this power, informed observers here believe, does not include such basic aspects of the Cuban government as agriculture, industry, labor, foreign commerce and foreign policy.

These are in the hands of the hard-line Communists who share the power with Castro.

The Communists need Castro, however, to put their ideas across to the Cuban masses. In this respect, Castro, a master orator, has no equal in Cuba.

Fire Fatal For Seven Persons

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) —Seven persons burned to death Saturday when fire raced through an old, three-story rooming house that catered to elderly "out patients" from a nearby hospital.

Another of the 15 occupants—an elderly woman—received minor cuts and burns in fleeing the flames.

The victims were identified as William T. Johnson, 81; Godwin Giles, 84; Mrs. Mary E. Gentry, 93; Elizabeth Watson, 81; Linwood C. Taylor, 54; Charles Hunt, 32, and James Meadows, 22.

Officials said the fire started in the basement of the 50-year-old building and quickly swept up through the other levels to the roof. The roof and third floor of the building eventually collapsed and the chimney crashed into the cellar.

The blaze was discovered shortly after 1 a.m. EST and all available fire-fighting equipment from Charlottesville and neighboring Albermarle County was pressed into the fight. Firemen finally brought the flames under control about 3:30 a.m. EST.

Six bodies were immediately found in the ruins and a seventh was discovered several hours later.

Art Of Quilting

By JANICE CLARK
Crossett, Ark. Correspondent

Of all the ancient crafts, most of which have wilted and died in the path of the mighty machine, there remains a handful which continue to flourish as art in the hands of those who cherish them.

The woodcarver is gone from our cities and villages — the man who spent his long winter days whittling the old cherry tree into fluted bed posts and the lightning - blasted black walnut into chair backs.

Devoted monks no longer work in America chipping away at turning wood into saints and carving the Lord Jesus and Our Lady of Guadalupe from the twisted trunk of the mesquite tree. Our churches now are adorned with placid saints with rosy cheeks — all poured into master molds and turned out in job lots. The emotional richness of the old missions still brings pilgrims to each and every different one who feel the stamp of the individual craftsman in the old buildings with their hand - carved Christs and saints. The modern church adornments seem quite sterile by comparison.

PRIDE IN WORK

Along with the woodcarver went the shoemaker, with his pride in turning a beautifully - tanned piece of leather into a shoe for a specific customer; the blacksmith the tinsmith, the glass blower and the milliner. All have made way for the efficient machine, which has taken the drudgery out of housework, revolutionized labor on farms, and released us all for recreation — and the tranquilizer and psychiatric couch.

Among the few old crafts which have survived the onslaught of the machine, quilting continues to find devotees in little groups of three and five and six about the country. And in spite of the electric blanket and chenille spread, many a rural bride treasures the quilts her friends and family have made for her new home.

It is not always easy to find a group who will do an old-fashioned artistic job of quilting, and for that reason an old quilt top was brought all the way from Florida to Crossett, Ark., recently to find a group of women who would turn the cherished top into a finished quilt for an antique bed.

POPPIES PATTERN

The unfinished quilt was appliqued decades ago by a young lady in Ohio, with a pattern of scarlet poppies scattered over over its snow - white surface, accented by leaves and stems of greens. The young Miss Fay McNally laid her dream away in a cedar chest and turned her attention to caring for her ailing mother. The years passed and the bright poppies remained folded in tissue — until this winter.

The mother died some years ago and the young lady, now a woman of about 60, moved to Dunedin, Florida, to live with her sister, Mrs. G. L. Ferrell. Miss McNally's bedroom is furnished with the antique furniture collected through the years, including a beautiful walnut spool bed.

As Mrs. Ferrell surveyed her sister's room with its early American furnishings she remembered the almost - forgotten quilt top, and decided to surprise her sister with the finished quilt.

So then began the search for someone who would take up where the young Fay McNally stopped almost four decades ago. The hunt in Florida was unsuccessful, so Mrs. Ferrell brought it to Crossett when she was visiting her children there. And the search began around Crossett. It was easy to find people who quilted, but no one wanted to tackle the intricate circle - and-scroll design indicated on the poppy quilt.

AGREED TO QUILT

A group of women of the West Crossett Missionary Baptist Church finally agreed to quilt the beautiful top. The women have been having regular weekly quilting bees all during the winter to earn money for the furnishings of their church, and because they enjoy their all-day "bees."

Webster doesn't tell why the quilting parties are called "bees,' but an approach to the room where a bee is in mid - career gives a clear hint. There is the hum of soft talk among the women as they buzz around their focal point — the quilting frame. That hum is the business of talking garden — when to plant the sweetpeas, how the lettuce is coming up — how is Mrs. Walker since her bout with pneumonia?— have Julia and Don decided on a name for the new baby?

The young women learn from the old, and the old stay youthful through their work with the young. On and on through the day the busy fingers fly as the news of the county buzzes over the frames.

SCARLET PETALS

Poppy petals of scarlet puff up as the needle carefully etches its edges in tiny stitches. A green seed pod grows fat and round and veins on leaves are sculptured with flying needles. The rich design of circles and scrolls is subtly traced in the open spaces with countless stitches which have yet to be duplicated by the mighty machine.

Nearly always there is one person who volunteers to care for any pre - school children of the group and keep the coffee pot going. And there is always a break for pot - luck lunch at noon. That's when the conversation swings to, "I want the recipe for this chocolate cake!" "How do you make your bread-'n-butter pickles?"

Ordinarily the women "quilt out" a quilt a day. This poppy quilt, however, is out - sized, and the elaborate design took more time — a total of 150 woman-hours of quilting and binding its scalloped edges in matching scarlet.

QUILT FOR FUN

For a quilt the women finish in one day they charge only $5— clear indication that they quilt for fun. They now have about five quilts waiting their turn at a bee — which will just about take them through this quilting season. The five who worked on the poppy quilt range in ages from Lucy Jones, the 19 year old mother of a young son, who was introduced to the art by her mother-in-law, Chlorene Jones. There is Jeanette Brown, who grew up in West Crossett, but is away some of the time when her engineer husband's work takes him to other parts of the country. Just now she is happily settled in her beautiful blue trailer in West Crossett while her husband is working on a long job in Crossett.

The senior member of the group is Ophelia Gardner, 66 years young, a long - time resident of the community. A visitor who worked on the poppy quilt was Dorothy Childers, also of the community. Each has beautiful quilts of her own. Young Lucy's favorite is the Friendship quilt given her at her marriage. Each of her friends made a square, centered by a pieced star, with the friend's name embroidered beside the star.

ASSEMBLED

All were assembled and quilted for the auburn - haired bride from Farmerville, La., to use in her Arkansas home. Others treasure their Texas Star, the Tulip, Dresdin Plate, Double Wedding Ring, and others of the old patterns created by our great-grandmothers as they sat around the fire of a winter evening turning bits of precious cloth into useful and beautiful covering for their feather beds.

The quilts made today are mostly ornamental — many times used over the modern electric blanket. But the old spirit of creating beauty with the hands, and the quiet pleasure of a day of working together keep the ancient craft alive all over our country. Ask those women who are regular members of the quilting bee what they know about tranquilizers or psychiatric couches. Only what they read in the papers.

THE FINAL stitch on the quilt is sewing the scarlet binding around its scalloped edges. Here are Chlorene Jones, Ophelia Gardner, Jeanette Brown (pausing in her work for a cup of coffee), and Lucy Jones, in whose home the bees are held. (Photos by Janice Clark)

Explosion At Courthouse

By ROWENA LOWREY
Correspondent

JONESBORO — On the night of January 16, 1936, at about 8:30, the Jackson Parish Courthouse was demolished by an explosion that was heard for miles around.

The building at the time of the explosion was occupied by five persons. The crushed body of W. Luther Barnes was found early the next morning by workers who had searched all night for victims.

Injured were Mrs. W. L. Barnes, assistant home demonstration agent; Aubrey Shows (now deceased); Z. E. Boyd, and A. J. Whittimore (also deceased). Another person, Jimmy McCain, was killed a few days later while helping to remove the ruins left standing, parts of the wall.

People who were interviewed gave the following account of the tragedy:

Marvin Brady, who was standing across the street (in front of the old Baptist Church) said, "I was standing on the street corner, and something went 'boom', and the whole place seemed to be on fire, and big pieces of brick and chairs and things began to fall all around me. Then by that time I could see that the courthouse was gone."

Mrs. E. A. Walsworth: "My brother, sister-in-law, and I were going home from a neighbor's and had to walk around the courthouse, to stay on the sidewalk near our home. My brother was walking in front of me, when we heard a hissing sound, then something like thunder, and things began to fall on us. We were knocked to the ground, and we could see flashes lighting up the elements. Typewriters, chairs, and other equipment fell all around us. There was a barbed wire fence nearby, and to this day I don't know if we went over it or under it.

"Then we ran to a friend's house about 50 yards away, where some people took us to Hodge Clinic. None of us were seriously hurt, but only Divine Providence kept us from being killed. Members of the Sheriffs' Department found my purse under some rubble a couple of days later."

Mayor Lawson Tait: "I got there as soon as I could run the short distance from my house. The noise sounded like bombs I heard in the Army, in World War One, and everything was knocked down but parts of the brick wall. Some men held some of the debris up, while I got Mrs. Barnes from underneath, and we took her to the clinic at Hodge.

"People from all the surrounding area hurried to offer their help. I remember James A. Noe from Monroe was among the first to get there from that distance. It was the worst thing we ever had to happen in Jonesboro."

CLEANUP TASK

It took several days (and nights) for the citizens of the community, aided by the effective work of the boys from the CCC Camp at a town nearby, to clear the ground where the courthouse had been.

Since it was only a few days until election day, in a very heated campaign, foul play was believed at first to be the cause of the explosion. But after authorities examined the walls, it was found that gas had seeped from pipes that had been used for steam heating in the basement of the building.

CORRECTION

In a story on this page last Sunday about Monroyans View U. S. Missile Might, a sentence said: "After the lectures on these fantastic missiles and almost unbelievable jobs they perform (at about 15 per cent perfection) there was an error. It should have read: perform (At about 85 per cent perfection) instead of 15.

Family Fallout Shelter Pioneers

By OTIS HASSELL
Correspondent

WINNSBORO — Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Burris and their six-year-old daughter, Barbara Jean, of Winnsboro Star Route, are now ready for any eventuality with their newly completed fallout shelter. This is the first shelter to be built in Franklin parish.

Rising from the yard of the Burris home, located 12 miles south of Winnsboro and midway between Jigger and Fort Necessity, like an over sized ant hill is a mound of dirt 40 feet across at the base and 10 feet high. Inside this mound is the shelter.

Burris is 55, and retired from the Army after 30 years service. He is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War. He retired from active duty in September, 1952, but remained in the active reserve until receiving his final discharge in 1960.

He married the former Miss Carolyn Rawls of Winsboro in June, 1953, and they purchased an 80 acre farm between Jigger and Fort Necessity. Since that time they have sold all the land except three acres on which their new home and fallout shelter are located.

Knowing what war is by first hand experience, the retired veteran has lost no time in protecting his family from the possibility of nuclear fall-out. He secured plans for the shelter from the Civil Defense Department at Battle Creek, Michigan, and went to work. Similar plans may now be secured from any post office.

A building supply firm of Winnsboro did the masonry work for a contract price of $600 and Burris did the rest of the work on the shelter himself.

On the inside the shelter measures 12 feet long, eight feet wide and six feet high. It has a concrete floor and a five and one-half inch reinforced concrete top covered by 18 inches of dirt. The walls are made of 8 inch by 16 inch building blocks filled with cement.

A ventilating pipe provides fresh air and entrance is by a hatch on top with a double door, one steel, and one wood, with a ladder to the floor. Water and electricity are piped into the shelter but an extra supply of water and battery operated transistor radio, and lights are stored in the shelter in case of power failure.

The young Miss Fay McNally laid her dream away in a cedar chest and turned her attention to caring for her ailing mother. The years passed and the bright poppies remained folded in tissue — until this winter.

The mother died some years ago and the young lady, now a woman of about 60, moved to Dunedin, Florida, to live with her sister, Mrs. G. L. Ferrell. Miss McNally's bedroom is furnished with the antique furniture collected through the years, including a beautiful walnut spool bed.

As Mrs. Ferrell surveyed her sister's room with its early American furnishings she remembered the almost - forgotten quilt top, and decided to surprise her sister with the finished quilt.

So then began the search for someone who would take up where the young Fay McNally stopped almost four decades ago. The hunt in Florida was unsuccessful, so Mrs. Ferrell brought it to Crossett when she was visiting her children there. And the search began around Crossett. It was easy to find people who quilted, but no one wanted to tackle the intricate circle - and-scroll design indicated on the poppy quilt.

AGREED TO QUILT

A group of women of the West Crossett Missionary Baptist Church finally agreed to quilt the beautiful top. The women have been having regular weekly quilting bees all during the winter to earn money for the furnishings of their church, and because they enjoy their all-day "bees."

Webster doesn't tell why the quilting parties are called "bees,' but an approach to the room where a bee is in mid - career gives a clear hint. There is the hum of soft talk among the women as they buzz around their focal point — the quilting frame. That hum is the business of talking garden — when to plant the sweetpeas, how the lettuce is coming up — how is Mrs. Walker since her bout with pneumonia?— have Julia and Don decided on a name for the new baby?

The young women learn from the old, and the old stay youthful through their work with the young. On and on through the day the busy fingers fly as the news of the county buzzes over the frames.

SCARLET PETALS

Poppy petals of scarlet puff up as the needle carefully etches its edges in tiny stitches. A green seed pod grows fat and round and veins on leaves are sculptured with flying needles. The rich design of circles and scrolls is subtly traced in the open spaces with countless stitches which have yet to be duplicated by the mighty machine.

Nearly always there is one person who volunteers to care for any pre - school children of the group and keep the coffee pot going. And there is always a break for pot - luck lunch at noon. That's when the conversation swings to, "I want the recipe for this chocolate cake!" "How do you make your bread-'n-butter pickles?"

Ordinarily the women "quilt out" a quilt a day. This poppy quilt, however, is out - sized, and the elaborate design took more time — a total of 150 woman-hours of quilting and binding its scalloped edges in matching scarlet.

QUILT FOR FUN

For a quilt the women finish in one day they charge only $5— clear indication that they quilt for fun. They now have about five quilts waiting their turn at a bee — which will just about take them through this quilting season. The five who worked on the poppy quilt range in ages from Lucy Jones, the 19 year old mother of a young son, who was introduced to the art by her mother-in-law, Chlorene Jones. There is Jeanette Brown, who grew up in West Crossett, but is away some of the time when her engineer husband's work takes him to other parts of the country. Just now she is happily settled in her beautiful blue trailer in West Crossett while her husband is working on a long job in Crossett.

The senior member of the group is Ophelia Gardner, 66 years young, a long - time resident of the community. A visitor who worked on the poppy quilt was Dorothy Childers, also of the community. Each has beautiful quilts of her own. Young Lucy's favorite is the Friendship quilt given her at her marriage. Each of her friends made a square, centered by a pieced star, with the friend's name embroidered beside the star.

ASSEMBLED

All were assembled and quilted for the auburn - haired bride from Farmerville, La., to use in her Arkansas home. Others treasure their Texas Star, the Tulip, Dresdin Plate, Double Wedding Ring, and others of the old patterns created by our great-grandmothers as they sat around the fire of a winter evening turning bits of precious cloth into useful and beautiful covering for their feather beds.

The quilts made today are mostly ornamental — many times used over the modern electric blanket. But the old spirit of creating beauty with the hands, and the quiet pleasure of a day of working together keep the ancient craft alive all over our country. Ask those women who are regular members of the quilting bee what they know about tranquilizers or psychiatric couches. Only what they read in the papers.

THE FINAL stitch on the quilt is sewing the scarlet binding around its scalloped edges. Here are Chlorene Jones, Ophelia Gardner, Jeanette Brown (pausing in her work for a cup of coffee), and Lucy Jones, in whose home the bees are held. (Photos by Janice Clark)

Explosion At Courthouse

By ROWENA LOWREY
Correspondent

JONESBORO — On the night of January 16, 1936, at about 8:30, the Jackson Parish Courthouse was demolished by an explosion that was heard for miles around.

The building at the time of the explosion was occupied by five persons. The crushed body of W. Luther Barnes was found early the next morning by workers who had searched all night for victims.

Injured were Mrs. W. L. Barnes, assistant home demonstration agent; Aubrey Shows (now deceased); Z. E. Boyd, and A. J. Whittimore (also deceased). Another person, Jimmy McCain, was killed a few days later while helping to remove the ruins left standing, parts of the wall.

People who were interviewed gave the following account of the tragedy:

Marvin Brady, who was standing across the street (in front of the old Baptist Church) said, "I was standing on the street corner, and something went 'boom', and the whole place seemed to be on fire, and big pieces of brick and chairs and things began to fall all around me. Then by that time I could see that the courthouse was gone."

Mrs. E. A. Walsworth: "My brother, sister-in-law, and I were going home from a neighbor's and had to walk around the courthouse, to stay on the sidewalk near our home. My brother was walking in front of me, when we heard a hissing sound, then something like thunder, and things began to fall on us. We were knocked to the ground, and we could see flashes lighting up the elements. Typewriters, chairs, and other equipment fell all around us. There was a barbed wire fence nearby, and to this day I don't know if we went over it or under it.

"Then we ran to a friend's house about 50 yards away, where some people took us to Hodge Clinic. None of us were seriously hurt, but only Divine Providence kept us from being killed. Members of the Sheriffs' Department found my purse under some rubble a couple of days later."

Mayor Lawson Tait: "I got there as soon as I could run the short distance from my house. The noise sounded like bombs I heard in the Army, in World War One, and everything was knocked down but parts of the brick wall. Some men held some of the debris up, while I got Mrs. Barnes from underneath, and we took her to the clinic at Hodge.

"People from all the surrounding area hurried to offer their help. I remember James A. Noe from Monroe was among the first to get there from that distance. It was the worst thing we ever had to happen in Jonesboro."

CLEANUP TASK

It took several days (and nights) for the citizens of the community, aided by the effective work of the boys from the CCC Camp at a town nearby, to clear the ground where the courthouse had been.

Since it was only a few days until election day, in a very heated campaign, foul play was believed at first to be the cause of the explosion. But after authorities examined the walls, it was found that gas had seeped from pipes that had been used for steam heating in the basement of the building.

Family Fallout Shelter Pioneers

By OTIS HASSELL

WINNSBORO — Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Burris and their six-year-old daughter, Barbara Jean, of Winnsboro Star Route, are now ready for any eventuality with their newly completed fallout shelter. This is the first shelter to be built in Franklin parish.

Rising from the yard of the Burris home, located 12 miles south of Winnsboro and midway between Jigger and Fort Necessity, like an over sized ant hill is a mound of dirt 40 feet across at the base and 10 feet high. Inside this mound is the shelter.

Burris is 55, and retired from the Army after 30 years service. He is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War. He retired from active duty in September, 1952, but remained in the active reserve until receiving his final discharge in 1960.

He married the former Miss Carolyn Rawls of Winsboro in June, 1953, and they purchased an 80 acre farm between Jigger and Fort Necessity. Since that time they have sold all the land except three acres on which their new home and fallout shelter are located.

Knowing what war is by first hand experience, the retired veteran has lost no time in protecting his family from the possibility of nuclear fall-out. He secured plans for the shelter from the Civil Defense Department at Battle Creek, Michigan, and went to work. Similar plans may now be secured from any post office.

A building supply firm of Winnsboro did the masonry work for a contract price of $600 and Burris did the rest of the work on the shelter himself.

On the inside the shelter measures 12 feet long, eight feet wide and six feet high. It has a concrete floor and a five and one-half inch reinforced concrete top covered by 18 inches of dirt. The walls are made of 8 inch by 16 inch building blocks filled with cement.

A ventilating pipe provides fresh air and entrance is by a hatch on top with a double door, one steel, and one wood, with a ladder to the floor. Water and electricity are piped into the shelter but an extra supply of water and battery operated transistor radio, and lights are stored in the shelter in case of power failure.

Cutting Out 31 Taxes

Louisiana could eliminate 24 different taxes with a total loss of only slightly more than $1,000,000.

According to the Public Affairs Research Council of Louisiana, Inc., many of this state's taxes yield little if any revenue. Louisiana has more than 50 state taxes but 10 of them produce 92 per cent of the revenue. There are 31 which produce less than $1 million each. Of these 31, there are 24 which produce a total of only a little more than $1 million. Ten taxes could be repealed with a loss of only $42,000 in revenue and five of these produce no revenue.

Two potently favorable results could come from the repeal of these taxes. Louisiana could gain favorable nationwide publicity by knocking far more than half of its taxes off the books. Moreover, this could result in increased economic growth and thereby increased collections from the remaining taxes, thus probably bringing an actual net gain in taxes by the simply process of eliminating those which represent little more than a nuisance.

If Louisiana were to take this step, which seems advisable, it might even make the federal government, or some members of Congress sit up and take notice. We know that there are scores of federal taxes which produce no net revenue and some of them actually are imposed at a loss, the cost of collecting them amounting to more than the revenue from the taxes. If Louisiana would set a good example, our congressmen and senators in Washington might see the light and might wipe out those taxes which do nothing more than constitute an imposition on the taxpayers and clutter up the tax collection books.

While recognizing that the state's tight financial situation may not make this an appropriate time to repeal taxes, PAR said that the state "could gain favorable national publicity by eliminating a large number of taxes."

We can think of no category in which we would be in favor of a tax increase but if it should be shown that elimination of the 31 small-return taxes failed to boost the economy enough to offset these small losses, tiny increases in some of the big-return taxes might be put into effect. This would bring practically no increase in collection costs for the big-return taxes and would eliminate collection costs on taxes which bring in practically no net return.

The same could apply to many of our federal taxes. We have such a multiciplicy of taxes that a large part of the return is wasted in collection work. With a smaller number of taxes we might easily have as much or more net revenue with less cost to the people, both in state and federal collections.

An analysis of each minor tax is included in the PAR report, along with comments as to what might be done in case changes are desired in any of them.

Some of Louisiana's minor taxes are old and outdated, such as the auction sales tax levied over 150 years ago and collected by the New Orleans Charity Hospital.

Besides the publicity potential from repealing some of the minor taxes, PAR also calls attention to the advantages of a simplified tax structure from the standpoint of administrative efficiency.

At present the state has 11 different agencies collecting taxes, though the bulk is collected by the State Department of Revenue.

"Centralization of tax collection can provide many benefits," PAR said. Enforcement could be improved, a better assignment of workers to handle peak loads could be worked out, some inequities could be avoided which might result from collection by different agencies, and specialists could be developed in tax fields who would improve efficiency of collections. Centralization could also reduce cost of collection and would be more convenient for the taxpayer.

The scattering of Louisiana's tax collection functions means that some taxpayers pay the same type of tax to two different agencies.

Commenting on its findings, PAR said:

"Many of Louisiana's minor taxes can be classed as 'nuisances' because of their low yield or deterring effect, but some may have other features which make it desirable that they be retained.

"If it is felt after careful review that some taxes should be retained, then these taxes should be reappraised in the light of their yield, cost of collection, uniformity and effectiveness of enforcement, adequacy of rates, and exemptions.

"Some adjustments may be needed to make such taxes more equitable and yield sufficient revenue to justify their levy."

PAR's probing of the minor taxes also turned up a comment that "there are two taxes which do not appear to have a legal basis for their levy." Both are levied by the Wild Life and Fisheries Commission.

One is severance tax on sand and land fill, the other is a severance tax on gravel. An attorney general's opinion in August of 1961 holds that the tax on sand in the fiscal year was $36,946 while nothing was collected on gravel.

Besides the collections by the Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, there is also a severance tax on sand and gravel collected by the Louisiana State Department of Revenue.

It is poor administrative practice to have similar taxes collected by different agencies.

Elimination of these practically useless taxes surely seems like a proper step.

I would like to offer a short comment regarding a letter written by Mr. Thomas O. Moses which appeared in your column March 18, 1962.

I am sure that such a letter from an American citizen makes several persons smile broadly. Some of these people might be Adlai Stevenson, the members of the Americans for Democratic Action, Gus Hall, Fidel Castro, Nikita Kruschev, and Mao Tse-tung.

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

The last paragraph of a letter addressed to you and printed on this page last Sunday read, and I quote, "your repeated attempts to vindicate the extreme right and your contention that it harbors no danger is distressing to say the least; for the end results of either extreme, right of left, is the same — freedom is lost." End quote.

Until "I lay me down to die" I will have more strength, more faith in my convictions, more nerve to openly serve that cause in which I believe, than this writer evidences by closing his letter with such a paragraph. It is apparent that he tried to leave the impression that he is not of the extreme left. If he were to deny such a charge I would say that he is completely fog-bound and without a definite sense of direction or understanding of his own position or views.

A favorite trick of the liberal, left - wing group, or their dupes, is to blast away at those who call attention to the fallacies of socialism and then in the same breath attempt to hide behind a smug "middle of the road" grin. But! Get on their back and spur a little, call attention to their affiliations, and they immediately adopt a pious, innocent, "poor little me" attitude. They always scream "reactionary", "demagogue", "witch hunter."

In this column last month, Mr. R. L. Marionneaux displayed marvelous courage by offering undenable evidence that one of his professors at college is of a character that is dangerous and indecent toward all that we hold dear and honorable. He spoke of a SPECIFIC individual I would bet my shirt that all of the pro - athiest and pro - communist group immediately contended that Mr. Marionneaux had accused ALL college professors of being so inclined. This ridiculous accusation is always leveled at those who would point out specific examples of socialist - communist activities in government, church, college communications groups.

J. Edgar Hooever testified last month before the house sub-committee on appropriations that, and I quote: "The communists mave infiltrated every conceivable sphere of activity; youth groups, radio, television, and motion picture industries; church school, educational and cultural groups, the press, nationality minority groups and civil and political units." Many veteran Washington correspondents pedict that Hoover will be removed as head of the F.B.I. before the year is out. He cannot be allowed to keep up his warnings to Americans.

If, by wanting a return to constitutional government, the complete destruction of the criminal communist conspiracy, the overthrow of the A.D.A. and Fabian Socialism, a surging, sweeping feeling of pride of National Origin, of love for the term "I AM AN AMERICAN" and distaste for the one - worldism bit, more support and broader authority for the House Committee on Un - American Activites, to be free from the clutches of total government, If by wanting these things I must choose the "extreme right", please Almighty Giver of strength, let me be strong and always proudly proclaim my choice.

Thank you for your courageous stand. While I cannot place all of the load on a particular political party, as you often do, in this fight that is neither here nor there. Ideological Mess

In this ideological mess we are experiencing there are only two solutions to the problem, revolution and a communistic form of government or a more liberal, less selfish industrialism. The more pleasant solution is the regimentation of industry, letting each employe become a stock holder with a voice, instead of the regimentation of the proletariat. I mean sell them common stock in par with his earnings and make his participation compulsory.

As for me, I believe in private ownership, but one of a more liberal type. I don't believe if the big fish continues to eat the little fish as they are now the revolution will be avoided. But let me add this, colloquially speaking, the prolatrait is as deep in the mud as the industrialist is in the mire. Largely he's apathetic, has no purpose in life but quitting time and pay day, please the boss, and keep up with the Jones. Most times he's so gullible he could be sold a steamboat a 100 miles from water if one of his neighbors had one and it could be purchased on installments.

I'm almost certain the pedagogies will want to lynch me. But our educational system is largely to be blamed for the condition of the country today. They don't try to inculcalcate self responsibility in the students. Instead they invariablly encourage them to become employes dependent upon the employer for a subsistence instead of encouraging them to step out upon their own and become independent men and women.

However, I'll not lay this at the pedagogics door as an entirely. Perhaps it's due to the system he came up under, and perhaps he can not see beyond its boundaries.

Our Democracy is a profit system, as was feudalism, monarchy, and every other system that has withstood the test of time. Every Communistic community save Russia and Red China has toppled and no doubt Russian Communism would have in the past had not Lenin seen in 1921 that pure marxism could not exist and made his famous retreat, accepting a profit form of merchandising. Russia's form of Communism is a Capitalistic Communism. Today Russia stands third in the world gold market and trades internationally on a profit base. That is not communism as Karl Marx taught it.

We had a Communistic community in Louisiana. The Shakers incorporated one at New Llano, but it failed. They also set up one at Darco, Tex., and it failed.

I'm neither a communist nor a Socialist. I believe every tub should sit on its own bottom, but I also believe every tub should be allowed to have a bottom to sit on.

The hankering for gold paved the aquatic route of the Santa Maria, the Pinta and the Nina, and competition and greed emancipated the southern slaves. Selfishness is the ogre in our community today. We shall have to learn to be more liberal minded if we are to avoid a revolution and a communistic form of government at some future time. As you know, a hungry rabbit will challenge a dog.

Our officials, like Belshazar see the handwriting on the wall and are endeavoring to avert the collapse via "welfare," and and integration. But I repeat what I said in the outset —make every employe a stockholder with a voice and the problem shall be solved.

Today is Sunday, March 25, the 84th day of the year with 281 to follow in 1962.

The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning star is Saturn.

The evening star is Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1776, the Continental Congress conferred the first medal to be awarded by the colonies upon Gen. George Washington.

In 1900, the Socialist party of the United States was organized at Indianapolis.

In 1913, the famous Palace Theater in New York opened its doors for the first time.

In 1954, the Radio Corporation of America began commercial production of color television sets.

A thought for the day: American author Thomas Paine said: "When we are planning for posterity, we ought to remember that virtue is not hereditary."

Disengagement

Kennedy Needs Release From World War II Complications

The problem that President Kennedy faces, as President Eisenhower faced it, is how to disengage the United States not only from the complications of World War II but the consequences of a long series of events and agreements prior and subsequent thereto. It is very much like an individual's attempt to get out from under, as the expression goes. It very often is impossible.

To the layman, this particular problem always seems easy. Some say that we ought to go to war with Soviet Russia and thus solve all problems. Others say that an atomic war is the most horrible event imaginable and that if, to avoid such a war, it is necessary to give in to Khrushchev, then we ought to give in. But Khruchchev is not our only problem. What about all the financial obligations we have undertaken in all parts of the world? Must we keep on pouring out our wealth? Must we accept the responsibility for every new country that has come into existence? And must we keep the United Nations alive even should it prove to be an instrument for our damage?

Some say, why not let these little countries go their own way even if that way leads to the Kremlin. Others say that we assumed the responsibility of world leadership and that having gone this far, there is nothing we can to about it. And then there is a mass of American public opinion which makes distinctions between the countries they like and the countries they dislike irrespective of American interests. There are the Anglophiles and Francophiles and those who love or hate Spain, and the Old China uands who would destroy Mao Tze-tung's regime and those who would use food to rescue all peoples from the consequences of their sins by giving them our surplus wheat and butter and whatever comes to hand and there are those who would let all Communists starve to prove that Marxism is a failure. Need we strengthen our enemies so that they might bite the hand that feeds them?

Public opinion in a free country is inevitably mixed because each individual sees things as his knowledge and experience permit and he always can back his opinion by a vote. Besides, we believe that out of debate will come the truth.

Thus, an American President, in his first term, is a prisoner of the complex of differing views. He might succeed as Roosevelt did to direct the force of public opinion into the channels that he chose, but Roosevelt, the politician, was at the beginning of a phase of history in which we still find ourselves and he was extra-ordinarily popular, although as some of believed then, as more believe now, undeservedly.

It was his personal popularity which made it possible for him, in his second term, to make vast alterations in our economic and social system and in his third term to involve this country in what eventually became World War II. If World War I was an historical error, World War II and our partnership with Soviet Russia, particularly our willingness to sacrifice the British and Dutch Empires to Soviet Russia, proved to be a magnificent tragedy. Teheran and Yalta will go down in American history as headstones of defeat.

However, it is not easy to stay within the margins of our responsibilities without bringing on a war, if not on us, then one with our allies and our new friends, the former foes. Nor is it easy to disengage ourselves from these responsibilities without giving Soviet Russia a free hand to conquer much of the world. Two ideas, conflicting ideas, offer themselves as remedies.

One is that we use friendship, propaganda, educational exchanges, good will and all the virtues of our civilization and the advantages of our wealth to aid nations to rise in their standards of life and to find it in their hearts to love us;

The other is to continue the arms race with Soviet Russia until the overwhelming cost of missiles, rockets, satellites and similar exhibitionistic instruments of power pose in this race, it destroys our economy? Apparently this race is damaging both countries.

The problems of disengagement are numerous and, truth to tell, if there is no break - through soon, both sides will go broke.

JFK Surrender?

Leftists Writing As If President Will Concede To Khrush

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Say it isn't so, Mr. President. Say it twice.

Laureates of the Left are writing, in language suspiciously alike, that you are — after all those brave words to the contrary — going to the Summit with a purpose which looks mighty like surrender. Tell us, if you can, that these two samples of suspicious similarity, published on the same day (March 15) belong to the Department of Funny Coincidences.

Chalmers M. Roberts of the Washington Post: Under a head "U. S. Seeks Summit Success Signs," this knowledgeable reporter wrote last week that . . . "Mr. Kennedy seems edging toward a meeting with . . Khrushchev." The reason is that Mr. Kennedy "does not want to miss any possibility of resolving one or more of the East-West points of conflict."

Marquis Childs of the St. Louis Post Dispatch: Under a head in the Washington Post, "Why Summitry Has Its Virtue," Childs predicts that" . . . in the not too distant future President Kennedy will meet with Khrushchev." There follows some soft and sweet Munich music on the proven value of Summit meetings. The one at Geneva in 1955 was a wonderful thing because it resulted in those "cultural exchanges" with Communists. The one at Vienna in 1961 was wonderful, too, because it afforded an opportunity for each man to measure the other."

There is, of course, an apparent "line" of Summit-justification in the Roberts-Childs pieces. A country boy like myself might use a horsey analogy and say that the "line" was sired by the No Win policy out of a pale mare called Irresolution. But I hope I'm wrong, and that the President will say it isn't so.

Let him say the same thing about the theme song of the March 15th "Ev and Charlie Show." The Republican floor leaders, Senator Dirksen and Congressman Halleck, bore down on a book entitled "The Liberal Papers" directly sponsored by 12 Liberal Democratic Congressmen, in association with 23 others, who in 1959 established a think-cell called "The Liberal Project," of which this book is now the foreign policy expression.

Chester Bowles, then Congressman and now Mr. Kennedy's Ambassador - at - large to the Southern Hemisphere, is one of several associates now in the Administration. Author of the book's foreword is Congressman James Roosevelt, archi-abolitionist of the Un-American Activities Committee.

If the 12 essays of the "Liberal Papers" reveal the sort of thinkers who have access to the President and influence upon his decisions, this is an even worse time for America than we know. Here are some excerpts cited by Dirksen and Halleck, who invited us reporters to draw our own conclusions:

In Chapter One we have the familiar Communist insult regarding the Fascist - monopolist-warmongering - imperialist tyranny of the USA. ". . . it is becoming increasingly difficult for decent Americans, humane enough to prefer peace to an egocentric national honor, to be outspokenly and genuinely anti-Communist."

In Chapter Two we are fed defeatism, East and West. "The alliance with Chiang Kai-shek . . cements the Sino-Soviet alliance . . . West Berlin is of no particular value . . . the U. S. (should) begin by recognizing Peking's unquestionably valid claim to the off-shore islands (of Quemoy-Matsu) . . . Taiwan and the Pescadores should be placed . . . under UN administration . . . neutralized and demilitarized . . ."

In Chapter Five we are treated to the whole pro-Communist package. Castro's Cuba is dismissed as no threat, Red China is presented as a debutante for UN admission, NATO is offered on the sacrificial block as a "peace" offering.

President Kennedy keeps political company with the Democratic sponsors of these propositions, and can't avoid being judged by them — unless he speaks up now to say it isn't so.

Cutting Out 31 Taxes

Louisiana could eliminate 24 different taxes with a total loss of only slightly more than $1,000,000.

According to the Public Affairs Research Council of Louisiana, Inc., many of this state's taxes yield little if any revenue. Louisiana has more than 50 state taxes but 10 of them produce 92 per cent of the revenue. There are 31 which produce less than $1 million each. Of these 31, there are 24 which produce a total of only a little more than $1 million. Ten taxes could be repealed with a loss of only $42,000 in revenue and five of these produce no revenue.

Two potently favorable results could come from the repeal of these taxes. Louisiana could gain favorable nationwide publicity by knocking far more than half of its taxes off the books. Moreover, this could result in increased economic growth and thereby increased collections from the remaining taxes, thus probably bringing an actual net gain in taxes by the simply process of eliminating those which represent little more than a nuisance.

If Louisiana were to take this step, which seems advisable, it might even make the federal government, or some members of Congress sit up and take notice. We know that there are scores of federal taxes which produce no net revenue and some of them actually are imposed at a loss, the cost of collecting them amounting to more than the revenue from the taxes. If Louisiana would set a good example, our congressmen and senators in Washington might see the light and might wipe out those taxes which do nothing more than constitute an imposition on the taxpayers and clutter up the tax collection books.

While recognizing that the state's tight financial situation may not make this an appropriate time to repeal taxes, PAR said that the state "could gain favorable national publicity by eliminating a large number of taxes."

We can think of no category in which we would be in favor of a tax increase but if it should be shown that elimination of the 31 small-return taxes failed to boost the economy enough to offset these small losses, tiny increases in some of the big-return taxes might be put into effect. This would bring practically no increase in collection costs for the big-return taxes and would eliminate collection costs on taxes which bring in practically no net return.

The same could apply to many of our federal taxes. We have such a multiciplicy of taxes that a large part of the return is wasted in collection work. With a smaller number of taxes we might easily have as much or more net revenue with less cost to the people, both in state and federal collections.

An analysis of each minor tax is included in the PAR report, along with comments as to what might be done in case changes are desired in any of them.

Some of Louisiana's minor taxes are old and outdated, such as the auction sales tax levied over 150 years ago and collected by the New Orleans Charity Hospital.

Besides the publicity potential from repealing some of the minor taxes, PAR also calls attention to the advantages of a simplified tax structure from the standpoint of administrative efficiency.

At present the state has 11 different agencies collecting taxes, though the bulk is collected by the State Department of Revenue.

"Centralization of tax collection can provide many benefits," PAR said. Enforcement could be improved, a better assignment of workers to handle peak loads could be worked out, some inequities could be avoided which might result from collection by different agencies, and specialists could be developed in tax fields who would improve efficiency of collections. Centralization could also reduce cost of collection and would be more convenient for the taxpayer.

The scattering of Louisiana's tax collection functions means that some taxpayers pay the same type of tax to two different agencies.

Commenting on its findings, PAR said:

"Many of Louisiana's minor taxes can be classed as 'nuisances' because of their low yield or deterring effect, but some may have other features which make it desirable that they be retained.

"If it is felt after careful review that some taxes should be retained, then these taxes should be reappraised in the light of their yield, cost of collection, uniformity and effectiveness of enforcement, adequacy of rates, and exemptions.

"Some adjustments may be needed to make such taxes more equitable and yield sufficient revenue to justify their levy."

PAR's probing of the minor taxes also turned up a comment that "there are two taxes which do not appear to have a legal basis for their levy." Both are levied by the Wild Life and Fisheries Commission.

One is severance tax on sand and land fill, the other is a severance tax on gravel. An attorney general's opinion in August of 1961 holds that the tax on sand in the fiscal year was $36,946 while nothing was collected on gravel.

Besides the collections by the Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, there is also a severance tax on sand and gravel collected by the Louisiana State Department of Revenue.

It is poor administrative practice to have similar taxes collected by different agencies.

Elimination of these practically useless taxes surely seems like a proper step.

To the Editor:

I would like to offer a short comment regarding a letter written by Mr. Thomas O. Moses which appeared in your column March 18, 1962.

I am sure that such a letter from an American citizen makes several persons smile broadly. Some of these people might be Adlai Stevenson, the members of the Americans for Democratic Action, Gus Hall, Fidel Castro, Nikita Kruschev, and Mao Tse-tung.

Concerning the editorial policy of the News - Star World Publishing Corporation, all I have to say is more power to you and please keep them coming.

Replies To Letter

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

The last paragraph of a letter addressed to you and printed on this page last Sunday read, and I quote, "your repeated attempts to vindicate the extreme right and your contention that it harbors no danger is distressing to say the least; for the end results of either extreme, right of left, is the same — freedom is lost." End quote.

Until "I lay me down to die" I will have more strength, more faith in my convictions, more nerve to openly serve that cause in which I believe, than this writer evidences by closing his letter with such a paragraph. It is apparent that he tried to leave the impression that he is not of the extreme left. If he were to deny such a charge I would say that he is completely fog-bound and without a definite sense of direction or understanding of his own position or views.

A favorite trick of the liberal, left - wing group, or their dupes, is to blast away at those who call attention to the fallacies of socialism and then in the same breath attempt to hide behind a smug "middle of the road" grin. But! Get on their back and spur a little, call attention to their affiliations, and they immediately adopt a pious, innocent, "poor little me" attitude. They always scream "reactionary", "demagogue", "witch hunter."

In this column last month, Mr. R. L. Marionneaux displayed marvelous courage by offering undenable evidence that one of his professors at college is of a character that is dangerous and indecent toward all that we hold dear and honorable. He spoke of a SPECIFIC individual I would bet my shirt that all of the pro - athiest and pro - communist group immediately contended that Mr. Marionneaux had accused ALL college professors of being so inclined. This ridiculous accusation is always leveled at those who would point out specific examples of socialist - communist activities in government, church, college communications groups.

J. Edgar Hooever testified last month before the house sub-committee on appropriations that, and I quote: "The communists mave infiltrated every conceivable sphere of activity; youth groups, radio, television, and motion picture industries; church school, educational and cultural groups, the press, nationality minority groups and civil and political units." Many veteran Washington correspondents pedict that Hoover will be removed as head of the F.B.I. before the year is out. He cannot be allowed to keep up his warnings to Americans.

If, by wanting a return to constitutional government, the complete destruction of the criminal communist conspiracy, the overthrow of the A.D.A. and Fabian Socialism, a surging, sweeping feeling of pride of National Origin, of love for the term "I AM AN AMERICAN" and distaste for the one - worldism bit, more support and broader authority for the House Committee on Un - American Activites, to be free from the clutches of total government, If by wanting these things I must choose the "extreme right", please Almighty Giver of strength, let me be strong and always proudly proclaim my choice.

Thank you for your courageous stand. While I cannot place all of the load on a particular political party, as you often do, in this fight that is neither here nor there. Ideological Mess

In this ideological mess we are experiencing there are only two solutions to the problem, revolution and a communistic form of government or a more liberal, less selfish industrialism. The more pleasant solution is the regimentation of industry, letting each employe become a stock holder with a voice, instead of the regimentation of the prolateriat. I mean sell them common stock in par with his earnings and make his participation compulsory.

As for me, I believe in private ownership, but one of a more liberal type. I don't believe if the big fish continues to eat the little fish as they are now the revolution will be avoided. But let me add this, colloquially speaking, the prolatrait is as deep in the mud as the industrialist is in the mire. Largely he's apathetic, has no purpose in life but quitting time and pay day, please the boss, and keep up with the Jones. Most times he's so gullible he could be sold a steamboat a 100 miles from water if one of his neighbors had one and it could be purchased on installments.

I'm almost certain the pedagogics will want to lynch me. But our educational system is largely to be blamed for the condition of the country today. They don't try to inculcalcate self responsibility in the students. Instead they invariablly encourage them to become employes dependent upon the employer for a subsistence instead of encouraging them to step out upon their own and become independent men and women.

However, I'll not lay this at the pedagogics door as an entirely, Perhaps it's due to the system he came up under, and perhaps he can not see beyond its boundaries.

Our Democracy is a profit system, as was feudalism, monarchy, and every other system that has withstood the test of time. Every Communistic community save Russia and Red China has toppled and no doubt Russian Communism would have in the past had not Lenin seen in 1921 that pure marxism could not exist and made his famous retreat, accepting a profit form of merchandising. Russia's form of Communism is a Capitalistic Communism. Today Russia stands third in the world gold market and trades internationally on a profit base. That is not communism as Karl Marx taught it.

We had a Communistic community in Louisiana. The Shakers incorporated one at New Llano, but it failed. They also set up one at Darco, Tex., and it failed.

I'm neither a communist nor a Socialist. I believe every tub should sit on its own bottom, but I also believe every tub should be allowed to have a bottom to sit on.

The hankering for gold paved the aquatic route of the Santa Maria, the Pinta and the Nina, and competition and greed emancipated the southern slaves. Selfishness is the ogre in our community today. We shall have to learn to be more liberal minded if we are to avoid a revolution and a communistic form of government at some future time. As you know, a hungry rabbit will challenge a dog.

Our officials, like Belshazar see the handwriting on the wall and are endeavoring to avert the collapse via "welfare," and and integration. But I repeat what I said in the outset —make every employe a stockholder with a voice and the problem shall be solved.

Today is Sunday, March 25, the 84th day of the year with 281 to follow in 1962.

The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning star is Saturn.

The evening star is Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1776, the Continental Congress conferred the first medal to be awarded by the colonies upon Gen. George Washington.

In 1900, the Socialist party of the United States was organized at Indianapolis.

In 1913, the famous Palace Theater in New York opened its doors for the first time.

In 1954, the Radio Corporation of America began commercial production of color television sets.

A thought for the day: American author Thomas Paine said: "When we are planning for posterity, we ought to remember that virtue is not hereditary."

Disengagement

Kennedy Needs Release From World War II Complications

The problem that President Kennedy faces, as President Eisenhower faced it, is how to disengage the United States not only from the complications of World War II but the consequences of a long series of events and agreements prior and subsequent thereto. It is very much like an individual's attempt to get out from under, as the expression goes. It very often is impossible.

To the layman, this particular problem always seems easy. Some say that we ought to go to war with Soviet Russia and thus solve all problems. Others say that an atomic war is the most horrible event imaginable and that if, to avoid such a war, it is necessary to give in to Khrushchev, then we ought to give in. But Khruchchev is not our only problem. What about all the financial obligations we have undertaken in all parts of the world? Must we keep on pouring out our wealth? Must we accept the responsibility for every new country that has come into existence? And must we keep the United Nations alive even should it prove to be an instrument for our damage?

Some say, why not let these little countries go their own way even if that way leads to the Kremlin. Others say that we assumed the responsibility of world leadership and that having gone this far, there is nothing we can to about it. And then there is a mass of American public opinion which makes distinctions between the countries they like and the countries they dislike irrespective of American interests. There are the Anglophiles and Francophiles and those who love or hate Spain, and the Old China uands who would destroy Mao Tze-tung's regime and those who would use food to rescue all peoples from the consequences of their sins by giving them our surplus wheat and butter and whatever comes to hand and there are those who would let all Communists starve to prove that Marxism is a failure. Need we strengthen our enemies so that they might bite the hand that feeds them?

Public opinion in a free country is inevitably mixed because each individual sees things as his knowledge and experience permit and he always can back his opinion by a vote. Besides, we believe that out of debate will come the truth.

Thus, an American President, in his first term, is a prisoner of the complex of differing views. He might succeed as Roosevelt did to direct the force of public opinion into the channels that he chose, but Roosevelt, the politician, was at the beginning of a phase of history in which we still find ourselves and he was extra-ordinarily popular, although as some of believed then, as more believe now, undeservedly.

It was his personal popularity which made it possible for him, in his second term, to make vast alterations in our economic and social system and in his third term to involve this country in what eventually became World War II. If World War I was an historical error, World War II and our partnership with Soviet Russia, particularly our willingness to sacrifice the British and Dutch Empires to Soviet Russia, proved to be a magnificent tragedy. Teheran and Yalta will go down in American history as headstones of defeat.

However, it is not easy to stay within the margins of our responsibilities without bringing on a war, if not on us, then one with our allies and our new friends, the former foes. Nor is it easy to disengage ourselves from these responsibilities without giving Soviet Russia a free hand to conquer much of the world. Two ideas, conflicting ideas, offer themselves as remedies:

One is that we use friendship, propaganda, educational exchanges, good will and all the virtues of our civilization and the advantages of our wealth to aid nations to rise in their standards of life and to find it in their hearts to love us;

The other is to continue the arms race with Soviet Russia until the overwhelming cost of missiles, rockets, satellites and similar exhibitionistic instruments of power pose in this race, it destroys our economy? Apparently this race is damaging both countries.

The problems of disengagement are numerous and, truth to tell, if there is no break - through soon, both sides will go broke.

JFK Surrender?

Leftists Writing As If President Will Concede To Khrush

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Say it isn't so, Mr. President. Say it twice.

Laureates of the Left are writing, in language suspiciously alike, that you are — after all those brave words to the contrary — going to the Summit with a purpose which looks mighty like surrender. Tell us, if you can, that these two samples of suspicious similarity, published on the same day (March 15) belong to the Department of Funny Coincidences.

Chalmers M. Roberts of the Washington Post: Under a head "U. S. Seeks Summit Success Signs," this knowledgeable reporter wrote last week that . . . "Mr. Kennedy seems edging toward a meeting with . . Khrushchev." The reason is that Mr. Kennedy "does not want to miss any possibility of resolving one or more of the East-West points of conflict."

Marquis Childs of the St. Louis Post Dispatch: Under a head in the Washington Post, "Why Summitry Has Its Virtue," Childs predicts that" . . . in the not too distant future President Kennedy will meet with Khrushchev." There follows some soft and sweet Munich music on the proven value of Summit meetings. The one at Geneva in 1955 was a wonderful thing because it resulted in those "cultural exchanges" with Communists. The one at Vienna in 1961 was wonderful, too, because it afforded an opportunity for each man to measure the other."

There is, of course, an apparent "line" of Summit-justification in the Roberts-Childs pieces. A country boy like myself might use a horsey analogy and say that the "line" was sired by the No Win policy out of a pale mare called Irresolution. But I hope I'm wrong, and that the President will say it isn't so.

Let him say the same thing about the theme song of the March 15th "Ev and Charlie Show." The Republican floor leaders, Senator Dirksen and Congressman Halleck, bore down on a book entitled "The Liberal Papers" directly sponsored by 12 Liberal Democratic Congressmen, in association with 23 others, who in 1959 established a think-cell called "The Liberal Project," of which this book is now the foreign policy expression.

Chester Bowles, then Congressman and now Mr. Kennedy's Ambassador - at - large to the Southern Hemisphere, is one of several associates now in the Administration. Author of the book's foreword is Congressman James Roosevelt, archi-abolitionist of the Un-American Activities Committee.

If the 12 essays of the "Liberal Papers" reveal the sort of thinkers who have access to the President and influence upon his decisions, this is an even worse time for America than we know. Here are some excerpts cited by Dirksen and Halleck, who invited us reporters to draw our own conclusions:

In Chapter One we have the familiar Communist insult regarding the Fascist - monopolist-warmongering - imperialist tyranny of the USA. ". . . it is becoming increasingly difficult for decent Americans, humane enough to prefer peace to an egocentric national honor, to be outspokenly and genuinely anti-Communist."

In Chapter Two we are fed defeatism, East and West. "The alliance with Chiang Kai-shek . . cements the Sino-Soviet alliance . . . West Berlin is of no particular value . . . the U. S. (should) begin by recognizing Peking's unquestionably valid claim to the off-shore islands (of Quemoy-Matsu) . . . Taiwan and the Pescadores should be placed . . . under UN administration . . . neutralized and demilitarized . ."

In Chapter Five we are treated to the whole pro-Communist package. Castro's Cuba is dismissed as no threat, Red China is presented as a debutante for UN admission, NATO is offered on the sacrificial block as a "peace" offering.

President Kennedy keeps political company with the Democratic sponsors of these propositions, and can't avoid being judged by them — unless he speaks up now to say it isn't so.

SOUTH AMERICAN MAP

2 Sick Giants Dominate It

By ROMAN JIMINEZ

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Two sick giants dominate the map of South America. Uncle Sam is the only doctor available, according to one legend. Actually, according to another popular story, Uncle Sam has a degree in imperialism rather than medicine.

In any case, the crisis in Argentina reflects the illnesses that afflict this country and its vast neighbor, Brazil. Both countries are rich or potentially rich. But both look to the United States, and specifically President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress, to help them regain lost ground and strengthen their economic backbones.

Major elements of the population, especially in Argentina, are ready to strike back at the helping hand. The leading backers of Juan D. Peron who won last Sunday's elections contend that the United States expressed the issue as Pentagon or Peron.

That can be a popular issue to rally the Argentine common man who balks at a program of austerity introduced by President Arturo Frondizi with the announced aim of restoring economic health. The common man remembers how Peron used to picture him as a king. He may forget that Peron also brought the nation to chaos, until the military moved in.

Seven years later, the military is insisting that last Sunday's Peronist victories be nullified. Frondizi has moved to do so. The last word on that is still to be heard.

Whatever the outcome, one thing is clear. It's going to take U.S. money and lots of it to help cure the poverty and sloth plaguing Argentina and Brazil. It's going to take strong cash medicine to help clear away yearnings for Castroism, communism and dictatorship.

That's the aim of Kennedy's $20-billion program. Diplomats who know both countries well hail the alliance. But some wonder if the money will do the trick.

In their view the funds must power a massive effort toward industrialization and over-all economic development to stem the tide of discontent.

They doubt the wisdom of stressing such projects as social welfare in the form of funds for housing, schools and medical care.

"We wonder," a diplomat asks, "if this smacks too much of trying to pamper poor sectors of the population without attempting to cure the deep economic ills which make the misery in so many countries."

It is claimed, for example, that no amount of welfare spending can possibly pull the 22 million inhabitants of Brazil's appalling poor northeast out of their poverty. Basic industrialization is needed.

But the problems facing a successful aid program are enormous. Too many people see the alliance plan as simply 20 years of handouts from big uncle. In both countries, nationalist rejection of capital investments in basic industries still flourishes.

Until recently political leaders in Brazil and Argentina were making clear that U.S. aid could be a master plan for collaboration between hemisphere nations, a way to open backward areas for private capital investment that can eventually mass-produce the goods so desperately needed by the millions of poor.

But the old, timeworn outcries against imperialism are creeping back. Politicians and demagogues who hope to capitalize on popular discontent are shaking the anti-Yankee banners once more.

That kind of appeal—as the Peronist victories in Argentina and the Castro fever in Brazil demonstrate—works wonders on millions.

But seasoned observers are convinced the way to persuade the needy that the way to live better is to work better, is to show the evidence—factories, roads and a healthy consumer goods economy that only effective aid can bring to the ailing giants of Latin America.

ISRAELI AND SYRIA

Fight Threatened Over Holy Jordan

WEBB McKINLEY

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Fighting between Israelis and Syrians at the Sea of Galilee last week underscored another dispute that has been brewing for a decade a threatened unholy row over the waters of the holy Jordan River.

It is a dispute between Arabs and Israelis over use of the river waters. It is fanned now by an Israeli project to divert part of the Jordan waters from the Sea of Galilee to irrigate the Negev Desert.

The dispute is not directly connected with the Galilee fighting but it is prominently in the background. The Syrians contend that the Sea of Galilee, inside Israel but at the Syrian border, is not Israeli-owned.

Arab spokesmen insist they will fight to prevent Israel from siphoning off waters flowing into the Jordan from the Sea of Galilee. Military plans have been drawn up by the Arab League to oppose this. The league will take up the question at a meeting in Saudi Arabia next month.

Within sight of the Syrian shore, Israeli workmen are preparing lines that one day will put the project in motion.

Battles over water have been occurring for centuries in the Middle East. You can see the reason in a drive across any desert such as the Judean wilderness between Jerusalem and Amman, the capital of Jordan. Most of the wilderness is desolate.

Yet in the Jordan River Valley, as the river leaves the Sea of Galilee and drops toward the Dead Sea, palm trees grow and small farmers raise tomatoes and watermelons for the market at Beirut, Lebanon's capital. They do it with Jordan waters.

The United States has been intimately involved in the controversy. The Eisenhower administration tried to get Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Israel to cooperate in a unified development using Jordan Valley water. The $200-million plan allotted Arab states 40 per cent of the water and Israel 39 per cent.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower's emissary, Eric Johnston, made five trips to the Middle East to get the two sides together. "We're on the one-inch line," he said once. In fact, technicians on both sides were near the goal. But an attempt to finish it up has remained postponed.

Israel, fully utilizing its water reserves and needing more to expand agriculture, has gone ahead on its own. In 1959, Finance Minister Levi Eshkol termed the Jordan water diversion a top priority project.

The Israeli plan is to pump water from the Sea of Galilee, also called Lake Tiberias, to the Galilean hills, then pipe it 155 miles south into Israel's Negev Desert to irrigate 375,000 acres. When the project is completed, according to Israel, it will carry 320 million cubic meters annually from Lake Tiberias. Moles of 108-inch concrete pipeline have been laid. By 1964 water will flow to the main station of the Yarkon River-Negev project which already conveys water to the desert. When the entire project is finished in 1968, total cost will be $100 million.

Arabs contend the Israeli pumps actually will be able to lift 720 million cubic meters per year — or nearly twice what the Johnston plan allotted.

In addition, they say, removal of water from Galilee will increase the salt content of the lower Jordan River so that Arabs can no longer use it for irrigation. This phase of the argument is similar to the dispute between California and Mexico's Mexicali Province over salting of Colorado River waters.

Arab leaders say they fear what irrigation could do for the Negev, the desert the Bible prophesies will "blossom like a rose." They say an irrigated Negev could support millions of new Jewish immigrants, creating increased threats to security — in Arab eyes. The Israelis deny any threat exists.

Syria has voiced alarm in notes to the United States and other members of the U.N. Security Council.

In the precarious Middle East, claims and counterclaims can crystallize into increased border clashes. There have been hints of possible things to come in clashes between Israeli gunboats and Syrian shore positions on the sea of Galilee.

Webb McKinley, chief of Middle East services for the Associated Press, makes his headquarters at Beirut, Lebanon. He travels frequently through the Arab countries, at the same time keeping an eye on developments in neighboring Israel.

Seoul Much Safer Now Than Past

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—There's less chance of having a pocket picked in Seoul now. Money lenders and black marketeers have vanished from street corners. In the faces of the people, there is a glimmer of hope—and hope is something South Koreans haven't had for a long time.

A tough government is responsible. A group of young soldiers with Gen. Chung Hee Park at their head took over this nation, torn by corruption and mismanagement, 10 months ago.

Gangsters now are hanged and businessmen must be honest.

Gone are the carefree days of old President Syngman Rhee, ousted nearly two years ago by a student revolt. Here now is austerity and tight government management.

Many South Koreans accept this grim way of life because up to now, tough as it is, it appears to be working in their favor.

"This spring," said a rice farmer outside Seoul, "the government fertilizer arrived in time for the first time in years. After all, fertilizer is most important to me. I think Gen. Park is a good man."

Park is 44. He and his junta seized the government from Premier John M. Chang, Rhee's successor.

The junta declared Chang's government also was corrupt and making no progress. Rhee, 86, is in exile.

The soldiers are making progress against the economic problems that rank South Korea as one of Asia's hardship cases.

Much remains to be done, however, before the country emerges from poverty. There are still many critics and skeptics to be convinced.

There are some fears that the soldiers have tasted power and will not stand aside for democratic elections in 1963, as they promised. This month they in effect limited their election opposition to amateurs and other military men by banning from political activity all who held office under previous regimes.

Even skeptics agree the soldiers are moving South Korea's economy toward self-sufficiency.

The country has been bolstered since the Korean war with massive doses of U.S. aid. In 1961-62 Korea will cost America $250 million in aid.

The aid, which includes surplus agricultural produce, makes up more than 40 per cent of the national budget.

Without this, South Korea could not maintain its 600,000-man army.

U.S. aid also is a key factor in Gen. Park's five-year economic plan, which he hopes will bring an annual 7.1 per cent increase in the gross national product.

This plan strikes at the heart of the economic troubles — inefficient agriculture and lack of industrialization.

Price support programs for rice have eased somewhat the pinch on the rice farmer. Rice is the most important crop and farmers make up 70 per cent of the population.

Park's generals and colonels also cracked down on usurious money lenders, issuing government promissory notes to creditors and granting debtors loans at low interest. This was mainly a farm aid program — the farmer was always in debt.

Industrial production and exports have responded to tax and customs incentives granted businessmen. Exports in 1961 totalled $40 million, an 18 per cent increase over 1960.

One main feature of the economic plan is development of power stations. Most of Korea's power facilities are in Communist North Korea.

Seoul has become an austere city, with luxuries suspect, black market American cigarettes, cosmetics and textile goods have disappeared from markets.

So have many of the petty thieves, pickpockets and street robbers. National police arrested 8,857 persons in a month-long anticrime drive that ended March 15.

Businessmen accused of gaining profits illegally during previous regimes have fared badly. But the soldiers apparently feared they were going too far in crackdowns on industry, so a novel form of punishment has been devised. Some businessmen are allowed to pay off fines by building industrial plants.

The junta appears to have firm political control of South Korea but probably faces a strong challenge from inflation. The consumer price index rose in February to an all-time high of 207.7 per cent, a 14-point increase over pre-coup days.

There also is the question of how long the South Koreans can endure low wages and hunger while the junta concentrates on industrialization.

RUNNING THE SCALES

'All American' Gains Local Note

By JOHN CALE

Local interest reached out to New York's Winter Garden Theatre last week for the debut of the musical comedy, "All American." Like "Bye Bye Birdie," this venture is co-produced by former Monrovan L. Slade Brown.

Added to the list of state people with theatrical interests this time is director Joshua Logan. "All American" is built around a comic professor Fodorski, a visitor from Europe who arrives on an American college campus to teach mathematics.

This song-and-dance role is played by Ray Bolger, who has been away from Broadway since "Where's Charlie?" Early write-ups include favorable remarks for both Bolger and Logan with a few loose ends to be tied together for subsequent performances.

LOCAL SCENE

The Sunday Evensong service at Grace Episcopal Church today at 4 p.m. will feature a program of Lenten choir music by Mozart. Davis Bingham, choral director for Northeast State College, will direct the group of singers, and Ronnie Brothers, organist for the First Baptist Church, West Monroe, will serve as accompanist.

Future programs at the same church will include the oratorio, "The Redeemer," by Martin Shaw on April 15, and Brahms' "A German Requiem," slated for early May.

Thursday's filmed presentation of "La Traviata" completed half the cycle of Paramount Theatre's opera-on-film festival. This opera, which bears the accurate if stuffy designation of "grand opera" continues to be one of the most appealing musical programs ever put together. Even if there was no plot and the audience knew not whether the soprano was saint, sinner, sick or psychotic, "La Traviata" would still draw a crowd.

Remaining on the series are "Faust," and "Tosca," slated for April 5, and 19 respectively.

While there's a lull between now and the time set for "Thurber Carnival" (here, April 14) and the National Ballet of Canada (Ruston, April 10), we can devote a little time to events of the immediate past.

Comment is still going strong on the Greco Spanish ballet, especially in regards to vitality and costuming. When Pepita D'Arcos came forward in the last number to join in the flamenco singing section, it got all us Anglo-Saxons in a mood to click the castanets.

Other recent highlights have pointed up the device of intrigue, both on and offstage. Schiller's "Mary Stuart," featured on the Louisiana Tech series brought out that early dramatist's skill in combining history and power politics in the spoken lines of the players.

Modern playwrights could take a cue from this oldtimer in the business. The first scene of this play opened with a couple of minor characters digging into the personal letter file of Mary Queen of Scots. Right away the audience was tipped off as to the mass of trickery which was to follow. Too often, plays and musicals open nowadays with a "nothing" scene just to get the lights on. "Music Man" had such a beginning also. "Birdie."

FINE ARTS

On the lighter side, an English artist was fined for using his "brush" without a license. Could he help it if he was using the treads of a sports car to paint his latest "masterpiece?" Artist William Morris would have had no trouble with his paint job—142 tubes of paint on a 40-foot canvas—if his car had stayed on the private road which was serving as his "easel." But he backed into a public road after making a trick motion and had a "brush" with the law for not having a driver's license.

'Capitalist' Ideas Now In Red Budapest

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP)—That capitalistic device, the beauty parlor, is bringing chic back to Budapest and promoting the ruling party's program to convince the people that communism can deliver the goods.

For the equivalent of 75 cents, a girl can get a shampoo and set. For $2.40, a hair tint job. For $1.20, a facial.

The day is gone when makeup was sinful and nail polish considered decadent. Beauty parlors are mushrooming throughout Budapest. The government says this city of a million by 1965 will have 864 hairdressing and beauty salons.

It takes more than a facial to put a new look on a country, of course.

A cartoon in the humor magazine Ludas Matyi gives an insight into the Hungarian situation.

It depicts the staff of a Budapest office wearing those grinning Halloween masks. All, that is, except one man. His face is bare—and downcast.

Says the office manager, stabbing an accusing finger at Mr. Bare Face: "Why can't you be happy like the rest?"

The cartoon's publication in a Communist-controlled organ is a tacit admission that the authorities know the happy looks are sometimes bogus. That so far their ideology has failed to capture the soul of the nation.

The attempt to win the allegiance of the proud and independent Magyars is masterminded by the party chief and prime minister, Janos Kadar, who rode to power as Soviet tanks crushed the 1956 revolt.

The happy warriors evidently believe that ultimate victory will be theirs if they can supply things the people want—and if they can sell themselves as wishing to serve, not bludgeon, the population.

The party has been busily criticizing its own mistakes in the controlled press. It seems to have clipped the wings of the secret police.

Official primness on moral issues, which for long irritated the funloving Magyars, has given way to less sanctimonious attitudes. The party has told its members to start realizing that people are made of flesh and blood and are therefore fallible.

Characteristic is a near-striptease act at the Budapest variety theater. Magazines, too, are displaying more daring, publishing revealing pictures of Western film actresses.

Hungary's standard of living is now second only to Czechoslovakia's among satellite states.

The shops, many neon lit, offer good quality foodstuffs and rather inferior clothes.

Camera Notes

A revolutionary step in 8mm sound movies was revealed in Chicago recently when the photo industry gathered to show its latest developments.

A compact unit which instantly applies a high fidelity magnetic sound track to any 8mm movie film was demonstrated by Mansfield Industries. It can be used by a movie fan in his own home to make his movies immediately ready for recording commentary, music or sound effects. The magnetic stripe is applied by a disposable cartridge at a cost of approximately one-half cent a foot.

This step signifies a tremendous breakthrough in an 8mm sound system which will eventually reach the average home movie fan. It should make a more immediate impact on schools, institutions, camps and resorts, business and industry, for training and educational films, documentaries, sales messages and photographic records.

Until now a magnetic soundstripe could be applied only by laboratory specialists at approximately 6 cents per foot along with the usual delay involved in shipping and returning film. The new Mansfield-Syntronic Sound - stripper comes in a self-contained carrying case which weighs less than six pounds and costs under $60. It uses a refill plastic tube of iron oxide to add a standard 36-mil stripe to a maximum 400 foot reel of 8mm film in 15 minutes. The film dries as it is applied and is ready for recording.

Mansfield also demonstrated a new 8mm sound projector with its own recording and amplifying equipment which was priced under $200. The sound head is removable to permit recording, erasing and re-recording and superimposing of sound on sound.

In addition, an 8mm unit designed for playback only is to be available, priced under $100. It can be hooked up to hi fi, TV or other existing amplifier and speaker systems.

Last Nine Hours Of Ghandi

NINE HOURS TO RAMA. By Stanley Wolpert. Random House. $4.95.

Just after 5 p.m. on Jan. 30, 1948, the Mahatma Ghandi was shot to death by a right - wing fanatic named Naturam Godse. The nine hours before this event comprise the time span of this novel.

It was a period when India was coming out from under English rule, but was being split by local warfare, plundering and chaos. The assassin was a warped creature who belonged to a society which held that Ghandi was taking too soft a line with the Moslems.

There are many characters in this novel, including Ghandi himself. There are Rani, the modern - minded, beautiful wife of India's tennis champion, who became Naturam's mistress and then was horrified at the final disclosure of his intent; Vishnu Apte, the jittery companion of Naturam in the final hours; Gopal Das, the efficient, dedicated security officer who at the end pleaded hopelessly with Ghandi not to expose himself to danger; P. K. the cabinet minister who was looking out for himself, and the sinister figure of Dhondo, known as Guruji, the leader of the fanatics.

Wolpert has an interesting slant on Ghandi. He presents the Mahatma, one of the world's leading advocates of nonviolence, as believing he had been a failure, and therefore he had been a failure, and therefore willing to walk to his doom. In the author's view, Ghandi felt that after the end of the English rule, the violence that tore at India was a sign that his own teachings had not been heeded.

The author has attempted a tremendous feat of building suspense over a period of action that covers nine hours. He has had to switch back and forth from his major to his minor characters. He has made legitimate use of the flashback device to show the motivations of his characters, but there are a good many flashbacks. Eight, depicting the life of Naturam and his affair with Rani Seven more, delineating the other characters.

Altogether, it is a pretty good performance, even though it is a little uneven in spots. Perhaps the tension would have built itself higher if some of the minor details had been omitted. But when you consider that this is Wolpert's first venture from scholarship into big league fiction, you have to conclude he has made a very auspicious start.

A Daddy's Life On Riviera

THE PORTOFINO P. T. A. By Gerald Green. Scribner's. $3.95.

We've all heard some jolly stuff about the Italian Riviera, with all those scandalous creatures of the international set, and their terribly fashionable night life.

So now we have the switch—Green's account of a few summer months at Rapallo, in a domestic menage that includes a wife and three small children.

Green tells of his grappling with the avarice of people who rent villas, and his horror at the olive oil that is carted around in old tins that originally contained lubricating oil. He has a few well chosen words for Italian sanitation, and for the crummy beaches that are supposed to be such an attraction.

One of his adventures is the assignment to do a script on an Icelandic saga, which an Italian director insists will be a very sexy movie. Long after Green has been associated with it, it turns up in the Tyrol in a form that cannot be recognized.

Green gives the back of his hand to that over-advertised international set and after surveying the silly tourist types, concludes that the Americans are nowhere near as ludicrous as some of the others, particularly the Germans.

This is light entertainment, in the best vein of American wise cracking and quippery, and a refreshing antidote to all that jazz about "Old World" sophistication. Green's brand is better.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Books Of Every Taste, Interest

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Each week a great variety of new books are added to the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. There are books for every taste and interest. In the field of fiction there are several new titles. Especially interesting to me is "Tightening the String," by Ann Bridge. Miss Bridge is the pseudynomn used by Lady O'Malley, the wife of a retired British diplomat. She has been writing books about her experiences in all parts of the world for the past 30 years and it has only been since her husband's retirement that she allowed her identity to be known. She is one of my favorite authors and I am always happy when a new book of her's is released. This new one, "The Tightening String," deals with the British diplomatic staff stationed in Hungary during the first two years of World War II. It is a fascinating story of people trying to do their best, although almost cut off from their homeland. If you like an exciting story of adventure and action in far places, I can heartily recommend this or any of her earlier ones. Those who like the works of Aldous Huxley will welcome his new book, "Island." It like his others is a metaphysical novel, which will not appeal to everyone, but will be extremely popular with some readers. "Aters of Kronos" by Conrad Richter won the National Book Award for fiction in 1961 and will be eagerly read by those who like the works of Mr. Richter. "High On a Hill" by Lucy F. Daniels is an account of life in a mental hospital. It is well done and presents a very good picture of what goes on there.

In the field of non-fiction, the choice is very broad. People often say "I wish I knew more about how to use the library." Of course the staff does their best to explain, but sometimes people do not ask and sometimes the staff is rushed. However, a new book has just been published, called "Guide to the Use of Books and Libraries." The author is Jean Kay Gates. Everyone who uses the library in any way would profit by studying this book. Are you concerned about your teenager? If you are you may find help in "Intelligent Parents' Guide to Teen-Agers" by Thelma C. Purtell.

The citizens of our community are becoming very concerned about communism and it's partner socialism and the library is doing it's best to provide the material for them which will help them to wake up before it is too late. A most illuminating book is "Keynes at Harvard" prepared by the Veritas foundation. Another book, which gives a clear picture of the plans for world conquest is "The Communist Blueprint For the Future." "No Wonder We Are Losing" by Robert Morris is a strong indictment of our foreign policy. Bertram D. Wolfe has written "Communist Totalitarianism: Keys to the Soviet System" which sheds much new light on conditions in Soviet Russia.

There are two new books on personal finance this week. One is called "Personal Finance" and was written by Elvin Frank Donaldson. The other is "Creative Money Management for the Executive" by Israel Unterman. Are you puzzled by the new Arithmetic now being taught in elementary schools? We have a book to help you help your child. It is called "Helping Your Child Learn the New Arithmetic" and the author is David Engler. A fascinating book is "Merchants, Pilgrims and Highwaymen" written by Nermann Schreiber and is a history of roads throughout the ages. Women could do well to read and heed the advice given by Kenneth Charles Hutchin in "How Not to Kill Your Husband."

A very beautiful and fine book is "Encyclopedia of Earth" by Leon Bertin. It is beautifully done and profusely illustrated. It is a history of the fascinating earth on which we live. A very practical book is "All About Small Gas Engines" by J. A. Purvis. Just in time for the African violet show, which is to be presented by the La Viollette Club as one of the features of National Library Week is a new book of African violets, called "African Violets and Their Relatives" and written by Harold E. Moore. Do you collect coins? Many people do and will want to see the newest books in this field. "Getting Started in Coin Collecting" by Burton Hobson and "A Treasury of American Coins" by Fred Reinfeld.

In the field of fine arts there are several interesting new books. "Arts and Crafts for Flower Arrangers," by Kathryn Seibel tells how to make many of the accessories used in this activity. "Flower Embroidery" by E. K. Kohler is a lovely little book with some excellent ideas. "Painting Made Easy" by John Mills gives much practical advice in this field. "Musical Instruments" by Karl Gerringer is quite an addition to our musical collection and should be most useful.

New books in the field of history are always in demand. "Moscow Journal" by Harrison Salisbury is a good account of contemporary Russia. "Ishi in Two Worlds" by Theodora Kroeber is an account of life among the Yana Indians of the Northwest. An interesting book about early American history is "They All Discovered America" by Charles Boland. "C.S.S. Shenandoah" is taken from the memoirs of her commanding officer, James Iredell Waddell. There are two new biographies worthy of note. One is "Louis Jolliett, Explorer of Rivers" by Virginia Eifert and "Carl Sandburg" by Harry Golden.

By ROMAN JIMINEZ

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Two sick giants dominate the map of South America. Uncle Sam is the only doctor available, according to one legend. Actually, according to another popular story, Uncle Sam has a degree in imperialism rather than medicine.

In any case, the crisis in Argentina reflects the illnesses that afflict this country and its vast neighbor, Brazil. Both countries are rich or potentially rich. But both look to the United States, and specifically President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress, to help them regain lost ground and strengthen their economic backbones.

Major elements of the population, especially in Argentina, are ready to strike back at the helping hand. The leading backers of Juan D. Peron who won last Sunday's elections contend that the United States expressed the issue as Pentagon or Peron.

That can be a popular issue to rally the Argentine common man who balks at a program of austerity introduced by President Arturo Frondizi with the announced aim of restoring economic health. The common man remembers how Peron used to picture him as a king. He may forget that Peron also brought the nation to chaos, until the military moved in.

Seven years later, the military is insisting that last Sunday's Peronist victories be nullified. Frondizi has moved to do so. The last word on that is still to be heard.

Whatever the outcome, one thing is clear. It's going to take U.S. money and lots of it to help cure the poverty and sloth plaguing Argentina and Brazil. It's going to take strong cash medicine to help clear away yearnings for Castroism, communism and dictatorship.

That's the aim of Kennedy's $20-billion program. Diplomats who know both countries well hail the alliance. But some wonder if the money will do the trick.

In their view the funds must power a massive effort toward industrialization and over-all economic development to stem the tide of discontent.

They doubt the wisdom of stressing such projects as social welfare in the form of funds for housing, schools and medical care.

"We wonder," a diplomat asks, "if this smacks too much of trying to pamper poor sectors of the population without attempting to cure the deep economic ills which make the misery in so many countries."

It is claimed, for example, that no amount of welfare spending can possibly pull the 22 million inhabitants of Brazil's appalling poor northeast out of their poverty. Basic industrialization is needed.

But the problems facing a successful aid program are enormous. Too many people see the alliance plan as simply 20 years of handouts from big uncle. In both countries, nationalist rejection of capital investments in basic industries still flourishes.

Until recently political leaders in Brazil and Argentina were making clear that U.S. aid could be a master plan for collaboration between hemisphere nations, a way to open backward areas for private capital investment that can eventually mass-produce the goods so desperately needed by the millions of poor.

But the old, timeworn outcries against imperialism are creeping back. Politicians and demagogues who hope to capitalize on popular discontent are shaking the anti-Yankee banners once more.

That kind of appeal—as the Peronist victories in Argentina and the Castro fever in Brazil demonstrate—works wonders on millions.

But seasoned observers are convinced the way to persuade the needy that the way to live better is to work better, is to show the evidence—factories, roads and a healthy consumer goods economy that only effective aid can bring to the ailing giants of Latin America.

Seoul Much Safer Now Than Past

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—There's less chance of having a pocket picked in Seoul now. Money lenders and black marketeers have vanished from street corners. In the faces of the people, there is a glimmer of hope—and hope is something South Koreans haven't had for a long time.

A tough government is responsible. A group of young soldiers with Gen. Chung Hee Park at their head took over this nation, torn by corruption and mismanagement, 10 months ago.

Gangsters now are hanged and businessmen must be honest.

Gone are the carefree days of old President Syngman Rhee, ousted nearly two years ago by a student revolt. Here now is austerity and tight government management.

Many South Koreans accept this grim way of life because up to now, tough as it is, it appears to be working in their favor.

"This spring," said a rice farmer outside Seoul, "the government fertilizer arrived in time for the first time in years. After all, fertilizer is most important to me. I think Gen. Park is a good man."

Park is 44. He and his junta seized the government from Premier John M. Chang, Rhee's successor.

The junta declared Chang's government also was corrupt and making no progress. Rhee, 86, is in exile.

The soldiers are making progress against the economic problems that rank South Korea as one of Asia's hardship cases.

Much remains to be done, however, before the country emerges from poverty. There are still many critics and skeptics to be convinced.

There are some fears that the soldiers have tasted power and will not stand aside for democratic elections in 1963, as they promised. This month they in effect limited their election opposition to amateurs and other military men by banning from political activity all who held office under previous regimes.

Even skeptics agree the soldiers are moving South Korea's economy toward self-sufficiency.

The country has been bolstered since the Korean war with massive doses of U.S. aid. In 1961-62 Korea will cost America $250 million in aid.

The aid, which includes surplus agricultural produce, makes up more than 40 per cent of the national budget.

Without this, South Korea could not maintain its 600,000-man army.

U.S. aid also is a key factor in Gen. Park's five-year economic plan, which he hopes will bring an annual 7.1 per cent increase in the gross national product.

This plan strikes at the heart of the economic troubles — inefficient agriculture and lack of industrialization.

Price support programs for rice have eased somewhat the pinch on the rice farmer. Rice is the most important crop and farmers make up 70 per cent of the population.

Park's generals and colonels also cracked down on usurious money lenders, issuing government promissory notes to creditors and granting debtors loans at low interest. This was mainly a farm aid program — the farmer was always in debt.

ISRAELI AND SYRIA

WEBB McKINLEY

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Fighting between Israelis and Syrians at the Sea of Galilee last week underscored another dispute that has been brewing for a decade: a threatened unholy row over the waters of the holy Jordan River.

It is a dispute between Arabs and Israelis over use of the river waters. It is fanned now by an Israeli project to divert part of the Jordan waters from the Sea of Galilee to irrigate the Negev Desert.

The dispute is not directly connected with the Galilee fighting but it is prominently in the background. The Syrians contend that the Sea of Galilee, inside Israel but at the Syrian border, is not Israeli-owned.

Arab spokesmen insist they will fight to prevent Israel from siphoning off waters flowing into the Jordan from the Sea of Galilee. Military plans have been drawn up by the Arab League to oppose this. The league will take up the question at a meeting in Saudi Arabia next month.

Within sight of the Syrian shore, Israeli workmen are preparing lines that one day will put the project in motion.

Battles over water have been occurring for centuries in the Middle East. You can see the reason in a drive across any desert such as the Judean wilderness between Jerusalem and Amman, the capital of Jordan. Most of the wilderness is desolate.

Yet in the Jordan River Valley, as the river leaves the Sea of Galilee and drops toward the Dead Sea, palm trees grow and small farmers raise tomatoes and watermelons for the market at Beirut, Lebanon's capital. They do it with Jordan waters.

The United States has been intimately involved in the controversy. The Eisenhower administration tried to get Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Israel to cooperate in a unified development using Jordan Valley water. The $200-million plan allotted Arab states 61 per cent of the water and Israel 39 per cent.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower's emissary, Eric Johnston, made five trips to the Middle East to get the two sides together. "We're on the one-inch line," he said once. In fact, technicians on both sides were near the goal. But an attempt to finish it up has remained postponed.

Israel, fully utilizing its water reserves and needing more to expand agriculture, has gone ahead on its own. In 1959, Finance Minister Levi Eshkol termed the Jordan water diversion a top priority project.

The Israeli plan is to pump water from the Sea of Galilee, also called Lake Tiberias, to the Galileean hills, then pipe it 155 miles south into Israel's Negev Desert to irrigate 375,000 acres.

When the project is completed, according to Israel, it will carry 320 million cubic meters annually from Lake Tiberias. Moles of 108-inch concrete pipeline have been laid. By 1964 water will flow to the main station of the Yarkon River-Negev project which already conveys water to the desert. When the entire project is finished in 1968, total cost will be $100 million.

Arabs contend the Israeli pumps actually will be able to lift 720 million cubic meters per year — or nearly twice what the Johnston plan allotted.

In addition, they say, removal of water from Galilee will increase the salt content of the lower Jordan River so that Arabs can no longer use it for irrigation. This phase of the argument is similar to the dispute between California and Mexico's Mexicali Province over salting of Colorado River waters.

Arab leaders say they fear what irrigation could do for the Negev, the desert the Bible prophesies will "blossom like a rose." They say an irrigated Negev could support millions of new Jewish immigrants, creating increased threats to security — in Arab eyes. The Israelis deny any threat exists.

Syria has voiced alarm in notes to the United States and other members of the U.N. Security Council.

In the precarious Middle East, claims and counterclaims can crystallize into increased border clashes. There have been hints of possible things to come in clashes between Israeli gunboats and Syrian shore positions on the sea of Galilee.

Webb McKinley, chief of Middle East services for the Associated Press, makes his headquarters at Beirut, Lebanon. He travels frequently through the Arab countries, at the same time keeping an eye on developments in neighboring Israel.

'All American' Gains Local Note

By JOHN CALE

Local interest reached out to New York's Winter Garden Theatre last week for the debut of the musical comedy, "All American." Like "Bye Bye Birdie," this venture is co-produced by former Monroyan L. Slade Brown.

Added to the list of state people with theatrical interests this time is director Joshua Logan. "All American" is built around a comic professor Fodorski, a visitor from Europe who arrives on an American college campus to teach mathematics.

This song-and-dance role is played by Ray Bolger, who has been away from Broadway since "Where's Charlie?" Early write-ups include favorable remarks for both Bolger and Logan with a few loose ends to be tied together for subsequent performances.

LOCAL SCENE

The Sunday Evensong service at Grace Episcopal Church today at 4 p.m. will feature a program of Lenten choir music by Mozart. Davis Bingham, choral director for Northeast State College, will direct the group of singers, and Ronnie Brothers, organist for the First Baptist Church, West Monroe, will serve as accompanist.

Future programs at the same church will include the oratorio, "The Redeemer," by Martin Shaw on April 15, and Brahms' "A German Requiem," slated for early May.

Thursday's filmed presentation of "La Traviata" completed half the cycle of Paramount Theatre's opera-on-film festival. This opera, which bears the accurate if stuffy designation of "grand opera" continues to be one of the most appealing musical programs ever put together. Even if there was no plot and the audience knew not whether the soprano was saint, sinner, sick or psychotic, "La Traviata" would still draw a crowd.

Remaining on the series are "Faust," and "Tosca," slated for April 5, and 19 respectively.

While there's a lull between now and the time set for "Thurber Carnival" (here, April 14) and the National Ballet of Canada (Ruston, April 10), we can devote a little time to events of the immediate past.

Comment is still going strong on the Greco Spanish ballet, especially in regards to vitality and costuming. When Pepita D'Arcos came forward in the last number to join in the flamenco singing section, it got all us Anglo-Saxons in a mood to click the castanets.

Other recent highlights have pointed up the device of intrigue, both on and offstage. Schiller's "Mary Stuart," featured on the Louisiana Tech series brought out that early dramatist's skill in combining history and power politics in the spoken lines of the players.

Modern playwrights could take a cue from this oldtimer in the business. The first scene of this play opened with a couple of minor characters digging into the personal letter file of Mary Queen of Scots. Right away the audience was tipped off as to the mass of trickery which was to follow. Too often, plays and musicals open nowadays with a "nothing" scene just to get the lights on. "Music Man" had such a beginning also "Birdie."

FINE ARTS

On the lighter side, an English artist was fined for using his "brush" without a license. Could he help it if he was using the treads of a sports car to paint his latest "masterpiece?" Artist William Morris would have had no trouble with his paint job—142 tubes of paint on a 40-foot canvas—if his car had stayed on the private road which was serving as his "easel." But he backed into a public road after making a trick motion and had a "brush" with the law for not having a driver's license.

'Capitalist' Ideas Now In Red Budapest

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP)—That capitalistic device, the beauty parlor, is bringing chic back to Budapest and promoting the ruling party's program to convince the people that communism can deliver the goods.

For the equivalent of 75 cents, a girl can get a shampoo and set. For $2.40, a hair tint job. For $1.20, a facial.

The day is gone when makeup was sinful and nail polish considered decadent. Beauty parlors are mushrooming throughout Budapest. The government says this city of a million by 1965 will have 864 hairdressing and beauty salons.

It takes more than a facial to put a new look on a country, of course.

A cartoon in the humor magazine Ludas Matyi gives an insight into the Hungarian situation.

It depicts the staff of a Budapest office wearing those grinning Halloween masks. All, that is, except one man. His face is bare—and downcast.

Says the office manager, stabbing an accusing finger at Mr. Bare Face: "Why can't you be happy like the rest?"

The cartoon's publication in a Communist-controlled organ is a tacit admission that the authorities know the happy looks are sometimes bogus: That so far their ideology has failed to capture the soul of the nation.

The attempt to win the allegiance of the proud and independent Magyars is masterminded by the party chief and prime minister, Janos Kadar, who rode to power as Soviet tanks crushed the 1956 revolt.

The happy warriors evidently believe that ultimate victory will be theirs if they can supply things the people want—and if they can sell themselves as wishing to serve, not bludgeon, the population.

The party has been busily criticizing its own mistakes in the controlled press. It seems to have clipped the wings of the secret police.

Official primness on moral issues, which for long irritated the funloving Magyars, has given way to less sanctimonious attitudes. The party has told its members to start realizing that people are made of flesh and blood and are therefore fallible.

Characteristic is a near-striptease act at the Budapest variety theater. Magazines, too, are displaying more daring, publishing revealing pictures of Western film actresses.

Hungary's standard of living is now second only to Czechoslovakia's among satellite states.

The shops, many neon lit, offer good quality foodstuffs and rather inferior clothes.

A revolutionary step in 8mm sound movies was revealed in Chicago recently when the photo industry gathered to show its latest developments.

A compact unit which instantly applies a high fidelity magnetic sound track to any 8mm movie film was demonstrated by Mansfield Industries. It can be used by a movie fan in his own home to make his movies immediately ready for recording commentary, music or sound effects. The magnetic stripe is applied by a disposable cartridge at a cost of approximately one-half cent a foot.

This step signifies a tremendous breakthrough in an 8mm sound system which will eventually reach the average home movie fan. It should make a more immediate impact on schools, institutions, camps and resorts, business and industry, for training and educational films, documentaries, sales messages and photographic records.

Until now a magnetic soundstripe could be applied only by laboratory specialists at approximately 6 cents per foot along with the usual delay involved in shipping and returning film. The new Mansfield-Syntronic Sound - stripper comes in a self-contained carrying case which weighs less than six pounds and costs under $60. It uses a refill plastic tube of iron oxide to add a standard 30-mil stripe to a maximum 400 foot reel of 8mm film in 15 minutes. The film dries as it is applied and is ready for recording.

Mansfield also demonstrated a new 8mm sound projector with its own recording and amplifying equipment which was priced under $200. The sound head is removable to permit recording, erasing and re-recording and superimposing of sound on sound.

In addition, an 8mm unit designed for playback only is to be available, priced under $100. It can be hooked up to hi fi, TV or other existing amplifier and speaker systems.

Last Nine Hours Of Ghandi

NINE HOURS TO RAMA. By Stanley Wolpert. Random House. $4.95.

Just after 5 p.m. on Jan. 30, 1948, the Mahatma Ghandi was shot to death by a right - wing fanatic named Naturam Godse. The nine hours before this event comprise the time span of this novel.

It was a period when India was coming out from under English rule, but was being split by local warfare, plundering and chaos. The assassin was a warped creature who belonged to a society which held that Ghandi was taking too soft a line with the Moslems.

There are many characters in this novel, including Ghandi himself. There are Rani, the modern - minded, beautiful wife of India's tennis champion, who became Naturam's mistress and then was horrified at the final disclosure of his intent; Vishnu Apte, the jittery companion of Naturam in the final hours; Gopal Das, the efficient, dedicated security officer who at the end pleaded hopelessly with Ghandi not to expose himself to danger; P. K. the cabinet minister who was looking out for himself, and the sinister figure of Dhondo, known as Guruji, the leader of the fanatics.

Wolpert has an interesting slant on Ghandi. He presents the Mahatma, one of the world's leading advocates of nonviolence, as believing he had been a failure, and therefore he had been a failure, and therefore willing to walk to his doom. In the author's view, Ghandi felt that after the end of the English rule, the violence that tore at India was a sign that his own teachings had not been heeded.

The author has attempted a tremendous feat of building suspense over a period of action that covers nine hours. He has had to switch back and forth from his major to his minor characters. He has made legitimate use of the flashback device to show the motivations of his characters, but there are a good many flashbacks. Eight, depicting the life of Naturam and his affair with Rani. Seven more, delineating the other characters.

Altogether, it is a pretty good performance, even though it is a little uneven in spots. Perhaps the tension would have built itself higher if some of the minor details had been omitted. But when you consider that this is Wolpert's first venture from scholarship into big league fiction, you have to conclude he has made a very auspicious start.

A Daddy's Life On Riviera

THE PORTOFINO P. T. A. By Gerald Green. Scribner's. $3.95.

We've all heard some jolly stuff about the Italian Riviera, with all those scandalous creatures of the international set, and their terribly fashionable night life.

So now we have the switch—Green's account of a few summer months at Rapallo, in a domestic menage that includes a wife and three small children.

Green tells of his grappling with the avarice of people who rent villas, and his horror at the olive oil that is carted around in old tins that originally contained lubricating oil. He has a few well chosen words for Italian sanitation, and for the crummy beaches that are supposed to be such an attraction.

One of his adventures is the assignment to do a script on an Icelandic saga, which an Italian director insists will be a very sexy movie. Long after Green has been associated with it, it turns up in the Tyrol in a form that cannot be recognized.

Green gives the back of his hand to that over-advertised international set and after surveying the silly tourist types, concludes that the Americans are nowhere near as ludicrous as some of the others, particularly the Germans.

This is light entertainment, in the best vein of American wise cracking and quippery, and a refreshing antidote to all that jazz about "Old World" sophistication. Green's brand is better.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Books Of Every Taste, Interest

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Each week a great variety of new books are added to the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. There are books for every taste and interest. In the field of fiction there are several new titles. Especially interesting to me is "Tightening the String," by Ann Bridge. Miss Bridge is the pseudynomn used by Lady O'Malley, the wife of a retired British diplomat. She has been writing books about her experiences in all parts of the world for the past 30 years and it has only been since her husband's retirement that she allowed her identity to be known. She is one of my favorite authors and I am always happy when a new book of her's is released. This new one, "The Tightening String," deals with the British diplomatic staff stationed in Hungary during the first two years of World War II. It is a fascinating story of people trying to do their best, although almost cut off from their homeland. If you like an exciting story of adventure and action in far places, I can heartily recommend this or any of her earlier ones. Those who like the works of Aldous Huxley will welcome his new book, "Island." It like his others is a metaphysical novel, which will not appeal to everyone, but will be extremely popular with some readers. "Aters of Kronos" by Conrad Richter won the National Book Award for fiction in 1961 and will be eagerly read by those who like the works of Mr. Richter. "High On a Hill" by Lucy F. Daniels is an account of life in a mental hospital. It is well done and presents a very good picture of what goes on there.

In the field of non-fiction, the choice is very broad. People often say "I wish I knew more about how to use the library." Of course the staff does their best to explain, but sometimes people do not ask and sometimes the staff is rushed. However, a new book has just been published, called "Guide to the Use of Books and Libraries." The author is Jean Kay Gates. Everyone who uses the library in any way would profit by studying this book. Are you concerned about your teenager? If you are you may find help in "Intelligent Parents' Guide to Teen-Agers" by Thelma C. Purtell.

The citizens of our community are becoming very concerned about communism and it's partner socialism and the library is doing it's best to provide the material for them which will help them to wake up before it is too late. A most illuminating book is "Keynes at Harvard" prepared by the Veritas foundation. Another book, which gives a clear picture of the plans for world conquest is "The Communist Blueprint For the Future." "No Wonder We Are Losing" by Robert Morris is a strong indictment of our foreign policy. Bertram D. Wolfe has written "Communist Totalitarianism: Keys to the Soviet System" which sheds much new light on conditions in Soviet Russia.

There are two new books on personal finance this week. One is called "Personal Finance" and was written by Elvin Frank Donaldson. The other is "Creative Money Management for the Executive" by Israel Unterman. Are you puzzled by the new Arithmetic now being taught in elementary schools? We have a book to help you help your child. It is called "Helping Your Child Learn the New Arithmetic" and the author is David Engler. A fascinating book is "Merchants, Pilgrims and Highwaymen" written by Nermann Schreiber and is a history of roads throughout the ages. Women could do well to read and heed the advice given by Kenneth Charles Hutchin in "How Not to Kill Your Husband."

A very beautiful and fine book is "Encyclopedia of Earth" by Leon Bertin. It is beautifully done and profusely illustrated. It is a history of the fascinating earth on which we live. A very practical book is "All About Small Gas Engines" by J. A. Purvis. Just in time for the African violet show, which is to be presented by the La Viollette Club as one of the features of National Library Week is a new book of African violets, called "African Violets and Their Relatives" and written by Harold E. Moore. Do you collect coins? Many people do and will want to see the newest books in this field, "Getting Started in Coin Collecting" by Burton Hobson and "A Treasury of American Coins" by Fred Reinfeld.

In the field of fine arts there are several interesting new books: "Arts and Crafts for Flower Arrangers," by Kathryn Seibel tells how to make many of the accessories used in this activity. "Flower Embroidery" by E. K. Kohler is a lovely little book with some excellent ideas. "Painting Made Easy" by John Mills gives much practical advice in this field. "Musical Instruments" by Karl Gerringer. is quite an addition to our musical collection and should be most useful.

New books in the field of history are always in demand. "Moscow Journal" by Harrison Salisbury is a good account of contemporary Russia. "Ishi in Two Worlds" by Theodora Kroeber is an account of life among the Yana Indians of the Northwest. An interesting book about early American history is "They All Discovered America." by Charles Boland. "C.S.S. Shenandoah" is taken from the memoirs of her commanding officer, James Iredell Waddell. There are two new biographies worthy of note. One is "Louis Jolliett, Explorer of Rivers" by Virginia Eifert and "Carl Sandburg" by Harry Golden.

STILL TEETERING

Outcome Of '62 Business Depends On Consumer

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The consumer holds the answer to whether 1962 is going to be a moderately good business year, good or excellent.

This became apparent during the week as the first quarter of the year neared an end with the economic scales still teetering.

Business didn't live up to expectations in January and February.

But a survey by the University of Michigan Research Center indicates the consumer is optimistic about the outlook and is in the mood to buy durable goods during the next six to nine months.

The big question is whether the man in the street will translate this mood into action and open up his pocketbook.

"Some findings suggest caution in appraising the prospects for further increases in the rate of spending but there are no findings that would point to an impending downturn," the center said.

The survey indicated that more consumers intend to buy new automobiles than a year ago.

That many already have turned plans into purchases is reflected by the good rate of automobile sales so far this year.

And the automakers, considering their rate of production, seem convinced that the level of buying is going to continue. Output during the week was an estimated 140,000, compared with 135,706 the previous week and only 87,934 a year ago.

So far this year the industry has built more than 1.5 million cars, an increase of about 50 per cent over this time last year.

On the other side of the coin, the survey turned up information that consumers' intentions to buy houses and appliances had declined from last year.

In February, according to figures just released by the Census Bureau, private housing starts fell 4 per cent below the rate of February 1961, the low point of the recession.

The annual rate of starts last month was 1,126,000 units, 11 per cent below January.

Department store sales from Jan. 1 to March 17 showed a 3 per cent gain over the like period of last year, the Federal Reserve Board reported. The National Retail Merchants Association predicted a 5 per cent gain for March and April.

There were a couple of price moves during the week but they didn't indicate any trend.

General Motors Corp.'s Frigidaire Division cut factory prices on three refrigerator-freezer models by $6, $25 and $45. General Electric Co. reduced its wholesale prices on two models. Westinghouse Electric Corp. said it would be competitive.

The price of nylon tricot, a knitted fabric used in women's lingerie and other garments, generally is being increased 3 to 5 per cent.

Negotiations to reach a steel industry labor contract dragged on without any report of progress. R. Conrad Cooper, executive vice president for personnel services of U.S. Steel Corp., speaking for both sides, said only that the management and union bargaining teams were 'working diligently to explore and develop solutions to our problems, if that's possible."

Steel production during the week posted a gain for the second consecutive week, totaling 2,387,000 tons, up 0.8 per cent from the previous week.

A maritime strike tied up a big segment of Pacific coast shipping. The Labor Department said the strike's impact has hurt the West Coast economy and "seriously endangered" the state of Hawaii. Rationing began in Hawaii, which depends on shipping for its staples.

Briefly around the business scene: Publicly owned corporations paid cash dividends totaling $544 million in February, a gain of $76 million over January . . . Yellow Creek Deep Oil Pool Near Opening

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Humble Oil & Refining Co. may be near opening of the first deep oil producing pool in the semi-shallow Yellow Creek field of Wayne County.

Humble is testing the USA No 1, sec. 13-9n-8w at 12,506 feet No information has been released.

The Yellow Creek field was discovered in 1947 with current producing level at 5,000 feet in the Eutaw zone.

Elsewhere in Wayne County, Placid Oil Co. is testing the GM&O Land Co. No. 1, sec. 34-8n-8w, about six miles south of Yellow Creek.

The well is being tested at 11,842-50 feet.

Pan American Petroleum Corp. continued efforts to complete its Collins unit No. 2, sec. 25-8n-15w, as the second producer in the recently found deep area of Covington County.

Operators are testing a perforated zone at 13,770-76 feet with reports that the well is swabbing a small amount of oil. A Paluxy sand below 11,500 feet has yet to be tested for its commercial worth.

In the Magee field of Smith County, Cities Service Petroleum Co. is preparing production tests on a Tuscaloosa sand in its Yelverton No. A-1, sec. 6-10n-16w.

The well was drilled to 14,122 feet and failed to log commercial production in the two deep sands below 13,000 feet that are productive in the field.

Operators plugged back and set casing at 9,235 feet in an effort to complete in the Tuscaloosa zone.

In Copiah County, L. O. McMillan is below 9,600 feet in the Southern Package Corp. wildcat No. 1, sec. 27-1n-3w, a 13,200 foot test.

Pure Oil Co. is below 8,890 feet in the Henry No. 1, sec. 15-12n-15e, in the Black Warrior Basin of Kemper County.

The venture is scheduled to 15,000 feet and has been in the Paleozoic formation since it reached a depth of 5,800 feet with drilling progress slow due to the hard formation.

Field drilling during the past week completed three new oilers.

California Co. finaled its board of Supervisors No. 5, sec. 16-9n-11w, at Reedy Creek in Jones County, pumping 75 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 6,266-96 feet.

In the Baxterville Field of Lamar County, Lee and Ladner completed their Bass No. B-1, sec. 18-1n-16w, pumping 81 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 8,804-33 feet.

Kelly and Byrne finaled the Young Estate No. 1, sec. 7-5n-2w, in the north Overton Field of Adams County, flowing about 84 barrels of oil daily from a and at 4,595-96 feet.

Spring Brings Sharp Price Fall To Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—Spring arrived this week but it brought no rally to the stock market. Prices were down moderately after a two-week advance.

Wall Streeters have been talking hopefully of a "spring rally" for some time but when spring made its calendar entrance on Wednesday the market took its sharpest dip of the week, although the decline was moderate as market movements go.

For the week as a whole, the Dow Jones industrial average lost 6.31 at 716.46.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 1.60 at 260.20.

Early in the week there was technical justification for the general softening of prices because there were some profits to be taken on the prior two weeks of advance. As the week wore on, however, comments of security analysts became somewhat less assured. Most look for higher prices later this year but there were elements of doubt.

In some quarters the question of what will come out of the steel negotiations was uppermost. If there is a strike, then the economy and the stock market, presumably, will be thrown out of kilter, according to these sources, but a non-inflationary settlement would be exceedingly helpful.

So the steel situation remained one element of incertainty, and the same emotion was tied to the troubles in Algeria and Argentina as well as the deadlocked disarmament talks in Geneva.

Week-to-week figures on steel production, department store sales and rail carloadings were on the upbeat, but housing starts were down for the fourth straight month.

Volume declined to 15,831,030 shares from 16,465,460 in the prior week.

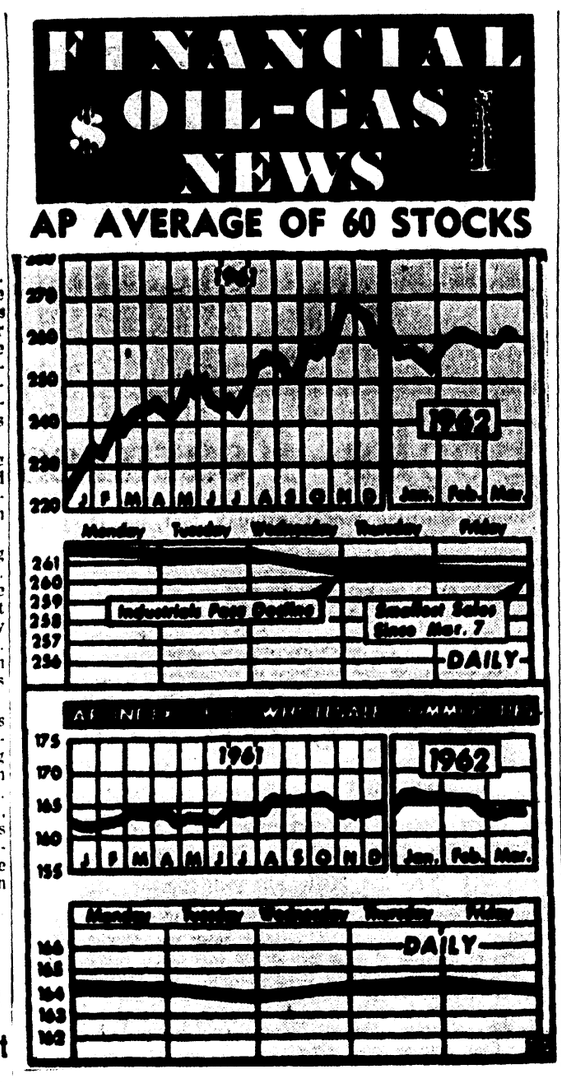
U.S. government bonds leaped ahead during the week for their best gains in eight months.

Corporates traded on the New York Stock Exchange also improved.

Volume on the exchange dipped to $25,217,000 par value from $26,879,000 the previous week.

BAN TWIST TEACHING

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Police headquarters Saturday baned teaching of the twist by dancing schools in Formosa. Police said dancing schools on this island are licensed only to teach folk dancing and ballet.



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined this week, closing today at 260.2 from 261.8 a week ago. The Commodity Index, with livestock showing the largest loss, declined for the second straight week, closing today at 164.0 from 164.2 a week earlier. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

FOUR COMPLETIONS

Ten New Locations Staked In District

A new wildcat completed in Ouachita Parish led the way in activity last week in the Monroe Oil & Gas District. It joined three other completions, one in each of Catahoula, Lincoln and Union Parishes, and a total of 10 new locations staked over the area.

Yesterday's report from District Manager Duncan Cook showed one of the new sites in the Ouachita Parish Calhoun Field. The parish further contributed two wells to a total of 16 rigs actively drilling or testing throughout the 14-parish area.

Concordia Parish continued to show the way in new activity with reports on four wells staked there, while LaSalle Parish listed six rigs active to lead the field in working wells.

A re-completion was included in last week's business, that also in LaSalle Parish, the Olla Field, and was the Ada Hopkins No. 1 of the Cities Service Petroleum Company.

Five wells were plugged and abandoned, running the total on inactive sites on the district map to 89, and locations numbered 32.

Kroger Gives Profit Plan To Employees

Kroger employee-members of the company's savings and profit sharing plan owned stocks, bonds, and other property with a market value of $64,012,680 at the end of 1961, it has been reported by trustees of the fund.

The plan, which is part of the overall Kroger Profit Sharing and Retirement Income program, is now 10-½ years old.

Of this amount, approximately $805,607 is shared by the 620 Kroger employees in the Childs Big Chain division area who are members of the plan.

Employee - members were notified that they received added credits of 90 cents for each dollar they saved and deposited under the plan during 1961, H. S. Hatch, Division vice president, said. A share of company profits is contributed to the fund each year by Kroger and credited to employees' accounts in proportion to each member's savings during the year.

Employee savings in the plan now total $30,278,893, while company contributions from profits and earnings thereon at the end of the year totaled $33,733,787.

Employee savings are held in U. S. government bonds and mortgages. Company contributions are invested in stocks and bonds of leading companies, including Kroger. The 25,536 employee-members of the plan as a group are the largest Kroger shareowner, holding 417,427 shares of Kroger common stock valued at $12,418,453 at the end of the year.

In addition to $2,449,347 contributed from Kroger's 1961 profits, members' accounts in the savings and profit sharing fund increased in value by $2,953,237 from interest, dividends, rents, capital gains on securities sold and gains in market value of securities owned.

The Kroger Profit Sharing and Retirement Income program helps employees to prepare for retirement in two ways. The savings and profit sharing plan encourages employees to save regularly and gives them the opportunity to share in the company profits they help earn. In this way they are able to build a sizable estate for themselves and their families to supplement the regular income they will receive from the company at retirement.

No Change Seen In Grain Price Market Pattern

CHICAGO (AP)—Influences in the grain futures trade were meager this week and the market pattern scarcely changed.

Wheat, corn and rye were under fairly constant pressure while oats and soybeans maintained a firm trend, principally on speculative demand.

The major factor of the week was the government report on farmer intentions to plant this year. Immediately it created some difference of opinion because of doubt about whether it included acreage curtailment signups reported during this month.

The corn acreage, for example, showed an increase of 3.5 per cent over a year ago and while some brokers viewed it as bearish others were inclined to believe land withdrawal under the curtailment program surely would have been taken into account by producers in reporting their plans to the Department of Agriculture.

It finally appeared that the latter view prevailed and the report was given a more general bearish treatment. Otherwise the figures were construed as at least mildly bullish although the soybean acreage also showed an increase. However, traders said it was well below some expectations.

At the end of the week, wheat was ½-1⅜ cents a bushel lower than a week ago, May $2.06-06¼; corn ⅛-1½ lower, May $1.12½-⅝; oats ⅝-1⅜ higher, May 69¼-⅛; rye unchanged to 4 cents lower, May $1.28-27¾; soybeans ½-1⅛ higher, May $2.48⅞-49.

Renewed fear of increased government sales of surplus corn caused some pressure in that grain after midweek. Indeed, some speculators viewed a little heavier selling by elevators on Friday as an indication it may already have begun.

Earning Growth Seen In Gulf's 60-Year Report

Gulf Oil Corporation's operations in 1961 marked its 60th year of sustained growth. This was pointed out by W. K. Whiteford, Chairman of the Board, and E. D. Brockett, President, in the 1961 Annual Report mailed to 134,329 stockholders.

Net earnings of Gulf and consolidated subsidiaries in 1961 totaled $338,537,000, an increase of 2.5 per cent over the previous year.

Based on the 105,404,018 shares outstanding on December 31, 1961, Gulf's net earnings amounted to $3.21 per share, compared to $3.13 in 1960.

The increase in net earnings was reflected in two decisions by Gulf's Board of Directors to increase the cash dividends. On July 25, 1961, the Directors increased the regular quarterly cash dividend from 25 to 30 cents per share, and dividends at the higher rate were paid in September and December, making a total cash distribution for 1961 of $1.10 per share as compared to $1.00 per share in 1960. In addition, a two per cent stock dividend was distributed in December to shareholders of record October 13, 1961. On January 23, 1962, the Directors again increased the cash dividend by five cents per share per quarter, thus raising cash dividends to an annual rate of $1.40 per share.

Louisiana Electric Co-ops Erased The . .

Incredible as it may seem to younger generations, rural Louisiana lived in the "Dark Ages" of modern technology and social comforts only 23 years ago.

Less than 2,000, or 1.7% to be exact, of the rural homes and farms in Louisiana had electricity . . so essential for decent living and a thriving economy.

Today, the member-owned electric co-ops offer better than 98% area coverage, leading the nation in per capita rural service. That's a wonderful record, indeed!

Electric co-ops were born of urgent necessity at a time when no one else would risk rural development which means so much to the economic development and progress of Louisiana — town and country.

STILL TEETERING

Outcome Of '62 Business Depends On Consumer

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The consumer holds the answer to whether 1962 is going to be a moderately good business year, good or excellent.

This became apparent during the week as the first quarter of the year neared an end with the economic scales still teetering.

Business didn't live up to expectations in January and February.

But a survey by the University of Michigan Research Center indicates the consumer is optimistic about the outlook and is in the mood to buy durable goods during the next six to nine months.

The big question is whether the man in the street will translate this mood into action and open up his pocketbook.

"Some findings suggest caution in appraising the prospects for further increases in the rate of spending but there are no findings that would point to an impending downturn," the center said.

The survey indicated that more consumers intend to buy new automobiles than a year ago.

That many already have turned plans into purchases is reflected by the good rate of automobile sales so far this year.

And the automakers, considering their rate of production, seem convinced that the level of buying is going to continue. Output during the week was an estimated 140,000, compared with 135,706 the previous week and only 87,934 a year ago.

So far this year the industry has built more than 1.5 million cars, an increase of about 50 per cent over this time last year.

On the other side of the coin, the survey turned up information that consumers' intentions to buy houses and appliances had declined from last year.

In February, according to figures just released by the Census Bureau, private housing starts fell 4 per cent below the rate of February 1961, the low point of the recession.

The annual rate of starts last month was 1,126,000 units, 11 per cent below January.

Department store sales from Jan. 1 to March 17 showed a 3 per cent gain over the like period of last year, the Federal Reserve Board reported. The National Retail Merchants Association predicted a 5 per cent gain for March and April.

There were a couple of price moves during the week but they didn't indicate any trend.

General Motors Corp.'s Frigidaire Division cut factory prices on three refrigerator-freezer models by $6, $25 and $45. General Electric Co. reduced its wholesale prices on two models. Westinghouse Electric Corp. said it would be competitive.

The price of nylon tricot, a knitted fabric used in women's lingerie and other garments, generally is being increased 3 to 5 per cent.

Negotiations to reach a steel industry labor contract dragged on without any report of progress. R. Conrad Cooper, executive vice president for personnel services of U.S. Steel Corp., speaking for both sides, said only that the management and union bargaining teams were 'working diligently to explore and develop solutions to our problems, if that's possible."

Steel production during the week posted a gain for the second consecutive week, totaling 2,387,000 tons, up 0.8 per cent from the previous week.

A maritime strike tied up a big segment of Pacific coast shipping. The Labor Department said the strike's impact has hurt the West Coast economy and "seriously endangered" the state of Hawaii. Rationing began in Hawaii, which depends on shipping for its staples.

Briefly around the business scene: Publicly owned corporations paid cash dividends totaling $544 million in February, a gain of $76 million over January . . . Detroiter Mobile Homes, Inc., estimates four million Americans live in mobile homes . . . Walgreen drug stores will enter the discount department store field in Houston, Tex.

Yellow Creek Deep Oil Pool Near Opening

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Humble Oil & Refining Co. may be near opening of the first deep oil producing pool in the semi-shallow Yellow Creek field of Wayne County.

Humble is testing the USA No. 1, sec. 13-9n-8w at 12,506 feet. No information has been released.

The Yellow Creek field was discovered in 1947 with current producing level at 5,000 feet in the Eutaw zone.

Elsewhere in Wayne County, Placid Oil Co. is testing the GM&O Land Co. No. 1, sec. 34-8n-8w, about six miles south of Yellow Creek.

The well is being tested at 11,842-50 feet.

Pan American Petroleum Corp. continued efforts to complete its Collins unit No. 2, sec. 25-8n-15w, as the second producer in the recently found deep area of Covington County.

Operators are testing a perforated zone at 13,770-76 feet with reports that the well is swabbing a small amount of oil. A Paluxy sand below 11,500 feet has yet to be tested for its commercial worth.

In the Magee field of Smith County, Cities Service Petroleum Co. is preparing production tests on a Tuscaloosa sand in its Yelverton No. A-1, sec. 6-10n-16w.

The well was drilled to 14,122 feet and failed to log commercial production in the two deep sands below 13,000 feet that are productive in the field.

Operators plugged back and set casing at 9,235 feet in an effort to complete in the Tuscaloosa zone.

In Copiah County, L. O. McMillan is below 9,600 feet in the Southern Package Corp. wildcat No. 1, sec. 27-1n-3w, a 13,200 foot test.

Pure Oil Co. is below 8,890 feet in the Henry No. 1, sec. 15-12n-15e, in the Black Warrior Basin of Kemper County.

The venture is scheduled to 15,000 feet and has been in the Paleozoic formation since it reached a depth of 5,800 feet with drilling progress slow due to the hard formation.

Field drilling during the past week completed three new oilers.

California Co. finaled its board of Supervisors No. 5, sec. 16-9n-11w, at Reedy Creek in Jones County, pumping 75 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 6,266-96 feet.

In the Baxterville Field of Lamar County, Lee and Ladner completed their Bass No. B-1, sec. 18-1n-16w, pumping 81 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 8,804-33 feet.

Kelly and Byrne finaled the Young Estate No. 1, sec. 7-5n-2w, in the north Overton Field of Adams County, flowing about 84 barrels of oil daily from a and at 4,595-96 feet.

Spring Brings Sharp Price Fall To Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—Spring arrived this week but it brought no rally to the stock market. Prices were down moderately after a two'week advance.

Wall Streeters have been talking hopefully of a "spring rally" for some time but when spring made its calendar entrance on Wednesday the market took its sharpest dip of the week, although the decline was moderate as market movements go.

For the week as a whole, the Dow Jones industrial average lost 6.31 at 716.46.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 1.60 at 260.20.

Early in the week there was technical justification for the general softening of prices because there were some profits to be taken on the prior two weeks of advance. As the week wore on, however, comments of security analysts became somewhat less assured. Most look for higher prices later this year but there were elements of doubt.

In some quarters the question of what will come out of the steel negotiations was uppermost. If there is a strike, then the economy and the stock market, presumably, will be thrown out of kilter, according to these sources, but a non-inflationary settlement would be exceedingly helpful.

So the steel situation remained one element of incertainty, and the same emotion was tied to the troubles in Algeria and Argentina as well as the deadlocked disarmament talks in Geneva.

Week-to-week figures on steel production, department store sales and rail carloadings were on the upbeat, but housing starts were down for the fourth straight month.

Volume declined to 15,831,030 shares from 16,465,460 in the prior week.

U.S. government bonds leaped ahead during the week for their best gains in eight months.

Corporates traded on the New York Stock Exchange also improved.

Volume on the exchange dipped to $25,217,000 par value from $26,879,000 the previous week.

Kroger Gives Profit Plan To Employees

Kroger employee-members of the company's savings and profit sharing plan owned stocks, bonds, and other property with a market value of $64,012,680 at the end of 1961, it has been reported by trustees of the fund.

The plan, which is part of the overall Kroger Profit Sharing and Retirement Income program, is now 10-½ years old.

Of this amount, approximately $805,607 is shared by the 620 Kroger employees in the Childs Big Chain division area who are members of the plan.

Employee - members were notified that they received added credits of 90 cents for each dollar they saved and deposited under the plan during 1961, H. S. Hatch, Division vice president, said. A share of company profits is contributed to the fund each year by Kroger and credited to employees' accounts in proportion to each member's savings during the year.

Employee savings in the plan now total $30,278,893, while company contributions from profits and earnings thereon at the end of the year totaled $33,733,787.

Employee savings are held in U. S. government bonds and mortgages. Company contributions are invested in stocks and bonds of leading companies, including Kroger. The 25,536 employee-members of the plan as a group are the largest Kroger shareowner, holding 417,427 shares of Kroger common stock valued at $12,418,453 at the end of the year.

In addition to $2,449,347 contributed from Kroger's 1961 profits, members' accounts in the savings and profit sharing fund increased in value by $2,953,237 from interest, dividends, rents, capital gains on securities sold and gains in market value of securities owned.

The Kroger Profit Sharing and Retirement Income program helps employees to prepare for retirement in two ways. The savings and profit sharing plan encourages employees to save regularly and gives them the opportunity to share in the company profits they help earn. In this way they are able to build a sizable estate for themselves and their families to supplement the regular income they will receive from the company at retirement.

No Change Seen In Grain Price Market Pattern

CHICAGO (AP)—Influences in the grain futures trade were meager this week and the market pattern scarcely changed.

Wheat, corn and rye were under fairly constant pressure while oats and soybeans maintained a firm trend, principally on speculative demand.

The major factor of the week was the government report on farmer intentions to plant this year. Immediately it created some difference of opinion because of doubt about whether it included acreage curtailment signups reported during this month.

The corn acreage, for example, showed an increase of 3.5 per cent over a year ago and while some brokers viewed it as bearish others were inclined to believe land withdrawal under the curtailment program surely would have been taken into account by producers in reporting their plans to the Department of Agriculture.

It finally appeared that the latter view prevailed and the report was given a more general bearish treatment. Otherwise the figures were construed as at least mildly bullish although the soybean acreage also showed an increase. However, traders said it was well below some expectations.

At the end of the week, wheat was ½-1⅜ cents a bushel lower than a week ago, May $2.06-06⅛; corn ⅛-1½ lower, May $1.12½-⅝; oats ⅝-1⅜ higher, May 69¼-⅛; rye unchanged to 4 cents lower, May $1.28-27¾; soybeans ½-1⅛ higher, May $2.48⅞-49.

Renewed fear of increased government sales of surplus corn caused some pressure in that grain after midweek. Indeed, some speculators viewed a little heavier selling by elevators on Friday as an indication it may already have begun.

Earning Growth Seen In Gulf's 60-Year Report

Gulf Oil Corporation's operations in 1961 marked its 60th year of sustained growth. This was pointed out by W. K. Whiteford, Chairman of the Board, and E. D. Brockett, President, in the 1961 Annual Report mailed to 134,329 stockholders.

Net earnings of Gulf and consolidated subsidiaries in 1961 totaled $338,537,000, an increase of 2.5 per cent over the previous year.

Based on the 105,404,018 shares outstanding on December 31, 1961, Gulf's net earnings amounted to $3.21 per share, compared to $3.13 in 1960.

The increase in net earnings was reflected in two decisions by Gulf's Board of Directors to increase the cash dividends. On July 25, 1961, the Directors increased the regular quarterly cash dividend from 25 to 30 cents per share, and dividends at the higher rate were paid in September and December, making a total cash distribution for 1961 of $1.10 per share as compared to $1.00 per share in 1960. In addition, a two per cent stock dividend was distributed in December to shareholders of record October 13, 1961. On January 23, 1962, the Directors again increased the cash dividend by five cents per share per quarter, thus raising cash dividends to an annual rate of $1.40 per share.

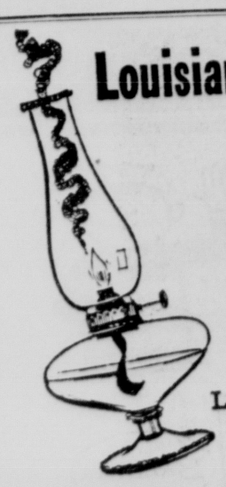
'DARK AGES'

Less Than 2% Rural Homes Had Electricity In 1937



Incredible as it may seem to younger generations, rural Louisiana lived in the "Dark Ages" of modern technology and social comforts only 23 years ago.

Less than 2,000, or 1.7% to be exact, of the rural homes and farms in Louisiana had electricity . . so esesntial for decent living and a thriving economy.

Today, the member-owned electric co-ops offer better than 98% area coverage, leading the nation in per capita rural service. That's a wonderful record, indeed!

Electric co-ops were born of urgent necessity at a time when no one else would risk rural development which means so much to the economic development and progress of Louisiana — town and country.

Curtain Call

By BB STRON

"Speaking of Murder," is in rehearsal at Strauss Playhouse, and everyone is quite busy. Richard Clark, director, is still on the lookout for dog to be used in the play. The part would necessarily call for the dog to be well trained and one that would be still and quiet while on stage. There must be plenty of those kind around, so if you have been waiting for a chance to show off your pup, please call Clark at Fairfax 3-1235.

Among the Little Theatre members seen on Saturday night at the performance of "Elizabeth the Queen," in Ruston were Roz and Henry Haas, Richard Brooks and Jan Evans, John Vaught, Julius Cahn and Santo Giglio.

BEST WISHES

Our very best wishes go to Joan Magruder, who was married yesterday to John Copeland Pickard Jr. We feel that Joan is one of our very own, as she appeared in so many Little Theatre plays here before going away to college, one of the latest being "The Moon is Blue."

A guest of Sue and Mac Ward was a young playwright from New Orleans, Christopher Blake. He was en route to the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, where they have organized an experimental theatre called The Playwright's Showcase, which will give promising young playwrights a chance to try their wings.

The Cinema 62 presentation, "The Seventh Seal," was enjoyed by a host of our people. The next presentation will be "Red Shoes." There is still plenty of time to obtain a membership. If you are interested in seeing any of these foreign films, please call Mrs. R. C. White, membership chairman.

TOUR

This past week the West Monroe Rotary Club entertained the El Dorado and Monroe Rotary Clubs at a regular luncheon meeting. After the meeting the group toured the Strauss Playhouse, and seemed to be very interested and impressed. We are always delighted and happy to show off our theatre.

A former Little Theatre member, George (Sandy) Lawn Jr., was privileged to audition for "Six Flags Over Texas," which seems to be Texas' answer to Disneyland. There is something relatively new, having come into effect only last summer. They have all types of entertainment and it is especially good for vacationing families. In his audition, Sandy had to play, sing, dance and read. Students from six colleges were invited to audition, and Sandy was one of those from Centenary. We wish him lots of luck, as this would seem to be an ideal way to spend the summer.

AT OPENING

Among those who are in New York and were there for the opening of "All American," were Mrs. Frances McHenry, Miss Mary Wilton McHenry, Miss Lallage Feazel and Robert H. Evans. The gala opening was held at the Winter Garden Theatre. Mrs. McHenry tells us that they enjoyed all of the festivities that accompany an opening night.

"All American" is a rowdy and enjoyable musical about football and campus shenanigans at a small southern college. Ray Bolger and Anita Gillette star. The choreography is by Danny Daniels, music by Charles Strouse, lyrics by Lee Adams and it is directed by Josh Logan. We hope it will enjoy a long run on Broadway.

GIANT CAST

'Four Horsemen' At Jim Theatre

In the three years spent to bring Vicente Blasco-Ibanez' "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," now at the Jim Theatre, to the screen, the four corners of the globe were canvassed by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer for a cast of international importance to match the scope of the story's backgrounds which sweep from the Argentine pampas to the streets of Paris and the French countryside.

Representing a "world of talent," the cast is headed by Canadian - born Glenn Ford, as Julio Desnoyers, and Ingrid Thulin, Sweden's No. 1 dramatic actress who makes her American film debut as Marguerite Laurier, one of literature's most glamorous women.

CAST

Then there are Charles Boyer of Paris; New Yorker Lee J. Cobb of Russian heritage; Paul Lukas, originally from Hungary; and Viennese Paul Henreid. Yvette Mimieux, playing Ford's lovely young sister, is of French - Spanish percentage. Newcomer Karl Boehm, a young Austrian born in Darmstadt, is a resident of Switzerland. Director Vincente Minnelli is of French - Italian descent.

In line with the cosmopolitan make-up of its stars, the company employed more than 15,000 actors of all nationalities as part of the backgrounds. Huge crowds colored such scenes as the South American fiesta, the Left Bank mob scenes, the swarming riders in the Paris subways, the patrons of the fashionable cafes and, on a more somber note, the prisoners of the concentration camps.

For the Occupation scenes, 3,500 "German soldiers" tramped the Champs Elysees, with 1,500 more in the Place del'Opera. For the evacuation of Paris, Director Minnelli used more than 2,600 French residents, including adults, children and even a number of their pets.

But it is the story's timelessness and its counterpart in the world situation today which makes "Four Horseman" of prime importance as screen material. It also made for one of the production's biggest headaches when the 90-day Paris location found the company filming on the heels of current headlines.

"We up - dated the Blasco Ibanez story to deal with Hitler, World War II and the Resistance movement in France rather than with the Kaiser, World War I and the trench warfare, as it was originally written," explained Julian Blaustein, the film's producer.

"Although the French officials were willing to cooperate with our unit during the Paris location, there were certain limitations. We could not hang Nazi flags from trees or buildings. Extras had to remove Nazi uniforms the moment they were no longer before the cameras. No Nazi vehicles were permitted to remain on highways between shots. Moreover, it was extremely difficult to find accoutrements of the 1939-45 period because at the end of the Occupation, the French people were so impassioned they burned everything Nazi they could put their hands on."

LIMITED

In order to avoid any unnecessary commotion, the company filmed the "invasion" on Sundays during the month of August when most of paris goes on holiday. During these scenes, photographed in the Place de la Concorde and Place del' Opera with four CinemaScope cameras turning simultaneously, non - vacationing Parisiens lined the streets watching Nazi tanks and soldiers swarm through the great thoroughfares.

All regular traffic was halted. The clock had been turned back. Then, late evening editions hit the streets with headlines blazing, "German Troops To Train On French Soil For First Time Since War."

The volatile French blew their tops and permits for further filming were immediately cancelled. Hollywood make - believe had hit too close to home and headlines had caught up with Hollywood. The remaining scenes were completed in the nearby village of Versailles.

PORTRAIT IN CRIME

Gordie Church Burglar By Trade

EDITOR'S NOTE — Gordie visited church often, carrying a trumpet. But he always went at night and the horn was just a clever decoy for suspicious cops. Gordie was a church burglar by profession — with some quaint ethics of his own. Here is the first of four intriguing studies in offbeat criminals and what makes them tick.

By BERNARD GAVZER

Gordie read the church news in the daily newspaper with devotion.

He was nonsectarian. The doings of Methodists were just as important to him as those of the Roman Catholics. He knew all about the cake bakes, the rummage sales, the bingo sessions.

Gordie's business was robbing churches.

In the army of the nation's criminals, Gordie is merely an obscure infantry man. He never made headlines, probably he never will. But he's typical of many strange characters who live beyond the law. Gordie, incidentally, is not his real name but the portrait is authentic.

Sneaking out of a church at about 2 a.m., on a brisk fall night, he would be dressed in a trench coat. He'd wear a dark Tyrolean-style hat with a bright, brush feather and tight, black leather gloves. His sport jacket was soft-shouldered, and beneath it he usually wore a light blue shirt, with a button-down collar. The only jarring note in his stylish appearance was in his trousers. They were full-legged instead of narrow. He carried a trumpet.

Any question about the trumpet brought a look of pride to his face.

MY HITS

"Since I made my hits about 2 a.m., I'd be out on some streets and maybe get stopped by a cop. I'd show them the case and say I was on my way to a late gig (job). Some cops are wise, you know, asking if you can play it. I'd pull the horn right out and blow. Man, you know what that sounds like in the middle of the night?" Just one note and they'd say, 'Okay, man.'"

Inside the case, he had a compartment for a small, jimmy bar, screw driver and skeleton keys.

There was cunning behind his out-of-style trousers, too. The legs had pockets that went down to his knees with little pouch pockets at about the normal position. The large pockets were filled with sawdust.

"That was so I could carry loose coins and not jingle when I walked. You get $30 or so of coins in your pocket and you can set up a hell of a scream unless you pad them. That little pocket was so I could dig quick and come up with a couple of bucks or change if I needed it."

Gordie preferred to rob churches and then homes of people who would be mentioned in society news columns, and lastly mailboxes.

"I couldn't hit a church every night, even if I found something good each night, because that would make a pattern and the cops would have an m.o. (modus operandi) on me. They aren't stupid, you know. Someone would figure out that I was always hitting the places late the same day or night they had functions. If they staked out enough churches, I'd get hit."

Gordie arrived at his preference by his own special logic.

"You see, I made up my mind that anybody with real brains could beat the game or at least shoe the risk. The first thing I decided was to go after the bread, the green. After all, when you take money, you take something that is pretty hard to identify. How could you prove that this dollar was your dollar? It's impossible, unless you mark it or write down the numbers, and who does that? You steal a watch or a TV set, you have to deal with a fence. They are the most venal guys in the world. They cheat you on the payoff and they also inform.

"Another thing is that I never carried a gun. That's for heisters and stickup guys. I figured that if I ever got busted, I'd just raise the pinkies and roll my eyes and maybe do the crocodile bit. I know I could con any judge in the country.

Gordie did not fall into the world of crime because his family was poor or because he was denied any comforts or advantages. At 16, he was winner of a scholarship to a conservatory but refused it. He was also a chess champion. He lived with his widowed mother and a brother.

When he is in his role as burglar, he speaks one way. When he tries to analyze the forces in his life that changed him, his language changes. This is how he explains refusing the scholarship.

"When it gets down to essentials when I have to be brutal with myself, I suspect that I turned it down because of my mother. She never harmed or hurt me, not in any way that one could specify. 'Ivanhoe' Is Showing At Paramount

Robert Taylor and Elizabeth Taylor head a cast for the Technicolor production of the classic "Ivanhoe," which opens today at the downtown Paramount Theatre.

Also listed in the screen production are Joan Fontaine, George Sanders and Emlyn Williams and a cast of thousands.

Based on the literary masterpiece by Sir Walter Scott and filmed in Technicolor against breathtaking backgrounds, "Ivanhoe" brings to life the story of high adventure and exciting romance that has thrilled generations of readers. Set in the England of 1200 A.D., when knighthood was in flower, it is the story of one brave man's attempt to restore to King Richard the Lion-Hearted the throne stolen from him by his brother, Prince John.

This picture set a precedent for tumultuous action crowd scenes with thousands of actors, and some of the most spectacular fighting sequences ever filmed, including the storming of a Norman stronghold, a fiery tournament in which Ivanhoe has five separate encounters with Norman knights and unhorses each opponent, and a savage battle to the death with the opponents using an axe and a chain - mace respectively.

"Ivanhoe" was produced by Pandro S. Berman and directed by Richard Thorpe, with a musical score by Academy Award winning Miklos Rozsa.

Off Broadway Ticket Prices Are Reduced

NEW YORK (AP) — Kermit Bloomgarden, a Broadway producer who recently put on his first show in one of experimental off-Broadway's little theaters, has started a campaign to cut ticket prices in that area.

The prevailing scale, Bloomgarden feels, is so near Broadway rates that fans are reluctant to support these offerings. Practicing what he preaches, Bloomgarden has set the top price for week day attendance to $2.95 (instead of $3.95) and cut week end rates to $3.95 (instead of $4.50) at "Moon on a Rainbow Shawl."

Curtain Call

By BB STRON

"Speaking of Murder," is in rehearsal at Strauss Playhouse, and everyone is quite busy. Richard Clark, director, is still on the lookout for dog to be used in the play. The part would necessarily call for the dog to be well trained and one that would be still and quiet while on stage. There must be plenty of those kind around, so if you have been waiting for a chance to show off your pup, please call Clark at Fairfax 3-1235.

Among the Little Theatre members seen on Saturday night at the performance of "Elizabeth the Queen," in Ruston were Roz and Henry Haas, Richard Brooks and Jan Evans, John Vaught, Julius Cahn and Santo Giglio.

BEST WISHES

Our very best wishes go to Joan Magruder, who was married yesterday to John Copeland Pickard Jr. We feel that Joan is one of our very own, as she appeared in so many Little Theatre plays here before going away to college, one of the latest being "The Moon is Blue."

A guest of Sue and Mac Ward was a young playwright from New Orleans, Christopher Blake. He was en route to the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, where they have organized an experimental theatre called The Playwright's Showcase, which will give promising young playwrights a chance to try their wings.

The Cinema 62 presentation, "The Seventh Seal," was enjoyed by a host of our people. The next presentation will be "Red Shoes." There is still plenty of time to obtain a membership. If you are interested in seeing any of these foreign films, please call Mrs. R. C. White, membership chairman.

TOUR

This past week the West Monroe Rotary Club entertained the El Dorado and Monroe Rotary Clubs at a regular luncheon meeting. After the meeting the group toured the Strauss Playhouse, and seemed to be very interested and impressed. We are always delighted and happy to show off our theatre.

A former Little Theatre member, George (Sandy) Lawn Jr., was privileged to audition for "Six Flags Over Texas," which seems to be Texas' answer to Disneyland. There is something relatively new, having come into effect only last summer. They have all types of entertainment and it is especially good for vacationing families. In his audition, Sandy had to play, sing, dance and read. Students from six colleges were invited to audition, and Sandy was one of those from Centenary. We wish him lots of luck, as this would seem to be an ideal way to spend the summer.

AT OPENING

Among those who are in New York and were there for the opening of "All American," were Mrs. Frances McHenry, Miss Mary Wilton McHenry, Miss Lallage Feazel and Robert H. Evans. The gala opening was held at the Winter Garden Theatre. Mrs. McHenry tells us that they enjoyed all of the festivities that accompany an opening night.

"All American" is a rowdy and enjoyable musical about football and campus shenanigans at a small southern college. Ray Bolger and Anita Gillette star. The choreography is by Danny Daniels, music by Charles Strouse, lyrics by Lee Adams and it is directed by Josh Logan. We hope it will enjoy a long run on Broadway.

GIANT CAST

'Four Horsemen' At Jim Theatre

In the three years spent to bring Vicente Blasco-Ibanez' "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," now at the Jim Theatre, to the screen, the four corners of the globe were canvassed by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer for a cast of international importance to match the scope of the story's backgrounds which sweep from the Argentine pampas to the streets of Paris and the French countryside.

Representing a "world of talent," the cast is headed by Canadian - born Glenn Ford, as Julio Desnoyers, and Ingrid Thulin, Sweden's No. 1 dramatic actress who makes her American film debut as Marguerite Laurier, one of literature's most glamorous women.

CAST

Then there are Charles Boyer of Paris; New Yorker Lee J. Cobb of Russian heritage; Paul Lukas, originally from Hungary; and Viennese Paul Henreid. Yvette Mimieux, playing Ford's lovely young sister, is of French - Spanish percentage. Newcomer Karl Boehm, a young Austrian born in Darmstadt, is a resident of Switzerland. Director Vincente Minnelli is of French - Italian descent.

In line with the cosmopolitan make-up of its stars, the company employed more than 15,000 actors of all nationalities as part of the backgrounds. Huge crowds colored such scenes as the South American fiesta, the Left Bank mob scenes, the swarming riders in the Paris subways, the patrons of the fashionable cafes and, on a more somber note, the prisoners of the concentration camps.

For the Occupation scenes, 3,500 "German soldiers" tramped the Champs Elysees, with 1,500 more in the Place del'Opera. For the evacuation of Paris, Director Minnelli used more than 2,600 French residents, including adults, children and even a number of their pets.

But it is the story's timelessness and its counterpart in the world situation today which makes "Four Horseman" of prime importance as screen material. It also made for one of the production's biggest headaches when the 90-day Paris location found the company filming on the heels of current headlines.

"We up - dated the Blasco-Ibanez story to deal with Hitler, World War II and the Resistance movement in France rather than with the Kaiser, World War I and the trench warfare, as it was originally written," explained Julian Blaustein, the film's producer.

"Although the French officials were willing to cooperate with our unit during the Paris location, there were certain limitations. We could not hang Nazi flags from trees or buildings. Extras had to remove Nazi uniforms the moment they were no longer before the cameras. No Nazi vehicles were permitted to remain on highways between shots. Moreover, it was extremely difficult to find accoutrements of the 1939-45 period because at the end of the Occupation, the French people were so impassioned they burned everything Nazi they could put their hands on."

LIMITED

In order to avoid any unnecessary commotion, the company filmed the "invasion" on Sundays during the month of August when most of paris goes on holiday. During these scenes, photographed in the Place de la Concorde and Place del' Opera with four CinemaScope cameras turning simultaneously, non - vacationing Parisiens lined the streets watching Nazi tanks and soldiers swarm through the great thoroughfares.

All regular traffic was halted. The clock had been turned back. Then, late evening editions hit the streets with headlines blazing: "German Troops To Train On French Soil For First Time Since War."

The volatile French blew their tops and permits for further filming were immediately cancelled. Hollywood make - believe had hit too close to home and headlines had caught up with Hollywood. The remaining scenes were completed in the nearby village of Versailles.

PORTRAIT IN CRIME

Gordie Church Burglar By Trade

EDITOR'S NOTE — Gordie visited church often, carrying a trumpet. But he always went at night and the horn was just a clever decoy for suspicious cops. Gordie was a church burglar by profession — with some quaint ethics of his own. Here is the first of four intriguing studies in offbeat criminals and what makes them tick.

By BERNARD GAVZER

Gordie read the church news in the daily newspaper with devotion.

He was nonsectarian. The doings of Methodists were just as important to him as those of the Roman Catholics. He knew all about the cake bakes, the rummage sales, the bingo sessions.

Gordie's business was robbing churches.

In the army of the nation's criminals, Gordie is merely an obscure infantry man. He never made headlines; probably he never will. But he's typical of many strange characters who live beyond the law. Gordie, incidentally, is not his real name but the portrait is authentic.

Sneaking out of a church at about 2 a.m., on a brisk fall night, he would be dressed in a trenchcoat. He'd wear a dark Tyrolean-style hat with a bright, brush feather and tight, black leather gloves. His sport jacket was soft-shouldered, and beneath it he usually wore a light blue shirt, with a button-down collar. The only jarring note in his stylish appearance was in his trousers. They were full-legged instead of narrow. He carried a trumpet.

Any question about the trumpet brought a look of pride to his face.

MY HITS

"Since I made my hits about 2 a.m., I'd be out on some streets and maybe get stopped by a cop. I'd show them the case and say I was on my way to a late gig (job). Some cops are wise, you know, asking if you can play it. I'd pull the horn right out and blow. Man, you know what that sounds like in the middle of the night? Just one note and they'd say, 'Okay, man.' "

Inside the case, he had a compartment for a small, jimmy bar, screw driver and skeleton keys.

There was cunning behind his out-of-style trousers, too. The legs had pockets that went down to his knees with little pouch pockets at about the normal position. The large pockets were filled with sawdust.

"That was so I could carry loose coins and not jingle when I walked. You get $30 or so of coins in your pocket and you can set up a hell of a scream unless you pad them. That little pocket was so I could dig quick and come up with a couple of bucks or change if I needed it."

Gordie preferred to rob churches and then homes of people who would be mentioned in society news columns, and lastly mailboxes.

"I couldn't hit a church every night, even if I found something good each night, because that would make a pattern and the cops would have an m.o. (modus operandi) on me. They aren't stupid, you know. Someone would figure out that I was always hitting the places late the same day or night they had functions. If they staked out enough churches, I'd get hit."

Gordie arrived at his preference by his own special logic:

"You see, I made up my mind that anybody with real brains could beat the game or at least slice the risk. The first thing I decided was to go after the bread, the green. After all, when you take money, you take something that is pretty hard to identify. How could you prove that this dollar was your dollar? It's impossible, unless you mark it or write down the numbers, and who does that? You steal a watch or a TV set, you have to deal with a fence. They are the most venal guys in the world. They cheat you on the payoff and they also inform.

"Another thing is that I never carried a gun. That's for heisters and stickup guys. I figured that if I ever got busted, I'd just raise the pinkies and roll my eyes and maybe do the crocodile bit. I know I could con any judge in the country.

"I picked burgling because it is one man all the way. If you have to work with somebody else, then there's two chances something can go wrong, and the bigger chance that the guy could stool on you.

"The church angle came because one day I realized that I never saw a guard near a church and I never heard of one being wired. Also, I figured that church people might be shrewd about raising dough or prying it out of their parishoners, but naive about stashing it. I don't know why they do it, but they usually put the money in a desk in the middle drawer under the well, or in the second drawer down on the right.

"I never hit the poor box and I never went for the collection take. To me, this is money that people give for pure and important reasons. But the loot from a cake bake or bingo is commercial. It's like robbing a business.

"To me, if the church wants to be in business, then it has to take the risks of business, such as getting robbed."

Gordie did not fall into the world of crime because his family was poor or because he was denied any comforts or advantages. At 16, he was winner of a scholarship to a conservatory but refused it. He was also a chess champion. He lived with his widowed mother and a brother.

When he is in his role as burglar, he speaks one way. When he tries to analyze the forces in his life that changed him, his language changes. This is how he explains refusing the scholarship:

"When it gets down to essentials when I have to be brutal with myself, I suspect that I turned it down because of my mother. She never harmed or hurt me, not in any way that one could specify. But I sensed that she was interested in my accomplishments or potential accomplishments for herself, not for me. I'm sure this analysis would revolt her, but I think that what I did was a disguised way of striking back at her. When I became a bellhop, it was the same thing. It was a demeaning job, an unworthy one, in her mind. How could she tell anyone her brilliant son was a bellhop?"

Bellhopping was the only honest job Gordie ever held. He had it for nearly three months. He made about $200 a week. He was 18.

One day—a bad one—he was at the race track, tearing up losing tickets. A well-dressed man, identifying himself as a guest at the hotel, started talking to him and offered him a soft job. He would make weekend trips, mostly to Los Angeles, all expenses paid, and get $300. While doing this, Gordie became ill and was convalescing about five weeks. One day he saw the man's picture in the paper. The man was prominent in a counterfeiting ring that had just been broken. Gordie had been a courier.

"That chilled me," he says. "I really didn't know until then what I was carrying. I knew it must be something, but I didn't know it was paper. That convinced me that I had to work alone."

His grand plan was to build up a bank roll of $50,000.

"Then I would go into legitimate thievery, the stock market. That's been my idea all along. I think there would be just as much excitement, maybe even more, in the stock or grain markets."

He never got close to $50,000. The proceeds from church burglaries ran between $75 and $300, but he spent it faster than he got it. He liked to gamble, despite his conviction that gamblers never really win.

"I suppose deep down that this was a way of punishing myself," he says. "But it didn't matter."

Gordie wound up one day in Reno, had a bad luck streak, panicked and ended up in Arizona, serving two concurrent sentences of four-years. He got out in 17 months, returned home, got arrested on a burglary charge and skipped bail.

Northeast Tracksters Romp In 3-Team Meet

Cincinnati Crushes Ohio State, 71-59, Cops NCAA Title Again

Easily Defeat USL, Arkansas Thinlies

By RICK BRYAN
World Sports Editor

Northeast State's track and field team captured firsts in all but three events to easily vanquish Arkansas State Teachers college and Southwestern Louisiana at rain - soaked Brown Stadium in their first home meet of the season here last night.

The Indians, undefeated in three straight outdoor meets, compiled a total of 100 points to 43½ for Arkansas State and 33½ for Southwestern.

Rains which fell steadily through the first hour of the meet drove most of a sizeable crowd to shelter and slowed the track enough to prevent any new records from being set.

TIES RECORDS

Speedy Dave Styron, however, was able to tie the Brown Stadium record for the 220-yard dash with a sizzling 21.4 run.

Styron's run equaled the mark set by Sid Garton of East Texas State in 1960.

Dave's twin brother, Don, who injured his leg in the Shreveport Relays last week, participated in only the 440 and mile relays.

Dave, who placed first in two events along with distance man Buddy Eiland, and field specialist Tommy Edmondson, also won the 100 in 9.6, only one tenth of a second off the stadium record of 9.5.

Eiland pulled in front of Southwestern's Malcom Robinson starting the final lap of the mile and increased the gap to nearly 20 yards in handing the Englishman his third defeat in four meetings this year in the mile. Eiland's time was 4:13.6; Robinson's 4:17.03.

Eiland started to pass the Southwestern freshman twice earlier in the race but dropped back again both times.

The long-striding Eiland also took first place honors in the half mile with a 1:56.3 clocking.

Gerald Cound of ASTC as second and Jim Collins of USL third

TROJANS CATCHUP

In one of the most thrilling runs of the night, Tallulah's mile relay team came from behind in the last lap to hand Neville its only defeat in three high school relay runs. The Trojan team of Ed Yerger, James Reeves, Bill Gilfoil and Chapman Lee circled the oval in 3:36.5.

Neville, behind the combine of Don Brant, Freddy Moses, Steve Jefferson and Mike Wilson won the 440 yard relays in 44.7, while the combine of Brant, Moses, Bunsey Bryant and Wilson clipped off the 880-relay in 1:31.0.

Neville and Tallulah were the only high school teams competing.

LEAVES FIELD

Robinson, running barefooted, won the two mile run in 9:29.3, completely leaving the field. Jack Williams and Bill Frye of Northeast were second and third.

Robinson said later running barefoot wasn't the usual procedure; that he removed his shoes only because the short spikes he brought weren't helping him.

The only other events Northeast didn't place first in were the high jump and the shot put.

Arkansas State teachers captured the high jump, with Ronnie Hern and Dale Kent tying for first at 6.0. Eugene Franklin of Northeast and Larry Simon from Southwestern shared second with 5-10 jumps.

The shot put went to Larry De La Bretonne of USL with a heave of 45½. Northeast's Tiffen Stone was second with 43-3¾.

WINS TWO EVENTS

Edmonson's firsts came in the pole vault and broad jump. The Tribe freshman vaulted 13-6 to win while Noel Orr of Northeast and ASTC's Tommy Pace tied for second with 12-0.

Edmonson took the broad jump with a 21-9½ leap. Owen was second at 21-8.

The Indians, who also won the Southwestern Recreation meet and the Shreveport Relays, took ten seconds (including two ties) and two thirds, in addition to their 17 first places.

Northeast's mile relay team, with the Styrons running the third and anchor positions sailed away to an easy win in 3:15.8. John Baker and Randall Walker took the first two laps. ASTC was far behind in second.

The 440-yard relay combine of Dave Styron, Charles McDonald, Jay Goldsmith and Don Styron clipped off that distance in 41.8. Arkansas State was second in this too.

Northeast also won the 880-yard relay to complete the relay sweep, with McDonald, John Baker, Walker and Goldsmith running this one in 1:28.6. The Arkansas team, defending champions of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference, placed second.

Franklin of Northeast finished first in the 120-mile hurdles ahead of Bill Wright of STC. Franklin's time was 15.4, Wright's 16.0.

The Tribe finished one, two, three in the 440-yard dash, Walker winning with 48.6, Baker taking second and Claude Mercer third.

Northeast's Owen Owen claimed the 220-yard hurdles, winning in 25.7, ahead of Franklin who was clocked at 26.6.

Tiffen Stone of the Indians won in the Discus with a 147-1¾ heave and Gene Harbert the javeline on a chunk of 195-8¾.

Wake Forest Edges UCLA For 3rd Spot

By DON WEISS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mighty Cincinnati, with Paul Hogue playing rings around ailing Jerry Lucas, crushed Ohio State in their long awaited rematch Saturday night, 71-59, and won the National Collegiate Basketball Championship for the second straight year.

Wake Forest won third place, edging UCLA 82-80 in the opener of the showdown doubleheader before 18,469 at Freedom Hall.

Hogue, a 6-foot-8, 240-pound bull, was facing a Lucas considerably under form as a result of the sprained left knee the Buckeye ace suffered in Friday night's semifinals. But it's doubtful that even a 100 per cent Lucas would have made any difference.

The Bearcats of Ed Jucker, who shocked the basketball world by beating Ohio State 70-65 in overtime in the title game last year at Kansas City, played it almost all the way with their wonderfully cohesive unit of Hogue, Tommy Thacker, Ron Bonham, George Wilson and Tony Yates.

Still it was Hogue who made the difference this time, the first time two schools ever met in successive years for the NCAA championship.

Hogue scored 22 points and did a tremendous job on the boards, both on offense and defense. This, combined with the jump shooting of Thacker and the high pressure defense and ball hawking of the Bearcats, made the outcome never in doubt after a 37-29 halftime lead.

The pressure began to tell on Ohio State as time ticked away and with the massive crowd roaring as it turned into a rout, the Bearcats poured it on. They led by as many as 20 points before a late Buckeye flurry cut down the final margin.

Making it two championships in two years of coaching for Jucker, the Bearcats pushed their season record to 29-2 and wound up winning their last 18 games. Ohio State finished 26-2 and the loss was only the sixth against 78 victories since Lucas joined the varsity and began his spectacular career three years ago.

The big fellow from Middletown, Ohio — ironically located only 28 miles from Cincinnati — did his best with a left knee heavily bandaged but obviously bothering him.

He couldn't rebound like he usually does, he couldn't defend like he usually does, and he didn't shoot like he usually does.

The three-time All-America and player of the year the last two seasons has an over-all shooting average of nearly 63 per cent in his collegiate varsity career, which ended Saturday night.

Against the Bearcats though, he hit only five of 17 shots and scored just 11 points.

Hogue, who came to Cincinnati from Knoxville, Tenn., four years ago because he wanted to play on a team with the great Oscar Robertson, also wound up his collegiate career.

He took 18 shots, many of them hooks and short jumps over Lucas, and hit on 11. He added 19 rebounds. With Thacker peppering away consistently at long range, they made a pair that Ohio State couldn't come close to matching.

Thacker, a 6-2 junior, scored only two points last night when the Bearcats won a 72-70 semi-final thriller from UCLA. The two points were on a field goal with four seconds left and won the game.

Jumping Tommy took it from there against the Bucks. He hit six of 14 shots, slipped in 9 of 11 free throws, and wound up with 21 points—13 in the first half when the Bearcats began to put it away.

Lucas scored six points in the first 4:45 of the game but seemed uncomfortable and didn't mix in the under-basket scrambling.

John Havlicek, Luke's fine running mate, drove Ohio State into a 23-22 lead midway of the first half after there had been five ties and the lead had been changing hands practically from the tipoff.

There was 9:01 remaining when Havlicek's jump shot put the Buckeyes in front and from that point until nearly the midway point of the second half, this high powered Ohio State offense scored only 16 points.

By that time Cincinnati had a 57-39 lead and the Buckeye booster club was thinking of disbanding. Across the way, the Bearcat followers were screaming with every shot.

With Lucas ineffective inside, Coach Fred Taylor of Ohio State inserted Gary Bradds, a 6-8 sophomore and Lucas' understudy and moved Jerry outside.

Three or four times Lucas fed Bradds cutting across the key, but while the young rookie wound up with 15 points to lead the Ohio State scoring, he couldn't hit at the stage when it might have mattered.

Cincinnati is the fourth school to win back-to-back national championships. The last to do it were the San Francisco Dons of the Bill Russell era in 1955-56. Kentucky won successive titles in 1948 and 1949 and Oklahoma A&M in 1945 and 1946. Ohio State, which, of course, won the national title when Lucas was a sophomore.

Celtics Humiliate Warriors, 117-89

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP)—The brilliant Boston Celtics led by Bill Russell and Bob Cousy, humiliated cold-shooting Philadelphia 117-89 Saturday in the opener of the National Basket ball Association Eastern Division playoff finals.

With Russell doing a defensive masterpiece on Wilt Chamberlain and Cousy gunning the patented Celtics fast break, Boston settled the contest early as it launched the defense of its world title.

Russell, a picture of coordinated movement rising to the Chamberlain challenge, held Wilt to a mere 12 points in the first half including one lone field goal in the second period.

Chamberlain wound up the high scorer with 33 points only after the issue was no longer in doubt. The Celtics ruined Philadelphia's plan to play deliberately by combining superior rebounding and a relentless, hounding defense.

The ball-stealing, shot-blocking tactics of the Celtics often sent the Warrior stars reeling back in frustration and wound up in numerous layup baskets for the victors.

In addition, the Warriors hurt their cause with numerous errors and wound up with their worst one-half performance of the year. Boston was leading 50-35 at intermission and Philadelphia had been able to hit on only 12 of 46 field goal tries while being outrebounded decisively 5-31.

Sam Jones hit for 20 points, Russell 16, Tommy Heinsohn 15, and Frank Ramsey 13.

The tone of the game was set in the early moments with Philadelphia leading 5-3. The Warriors had set up a neat ring to control the rebounds but a missed shot, a block by Russell and a traveling penalty cost them three big scoring chances.

From there the Celtics were off as Russell fed Tom Sanders for the tying basket, Cousy started a full court play with Sanders scoring, then it was Cousy stealing and feeding Sam Jones for a layup.

After Guy Rodgers of the Warriors made a three point contribution, Cousy fed Russell for a stuff-in, Cousy sent Heinsohn for a layup and Jim Loscutoff hit a long set, making it 15-7.

Cousy was the central figure in keeping Boston in front when Philadelphia tried to whittle away the lead in the second period.

Boston ran off seven quick points at the start of the third quarter to erase all doubts as the score went to 57-37.

The nationally televised game, blacked out in New England, opened a best of seven series with the next game at Philadelphia Tuesday night.

REGAINS CROWN

Emil Griffith Stops Paret In 12th Round

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP)— Fired up Emile Griffith of New York stopped champ Benny (Kid) Paret of Cuba in the 12th round Saturday night and regained the world welterweight title.

A series of right hand blows to the head staggered the 25-year-old Paret midway in the 12th round and as he started to slump to the floor, Referee Ruby Goldstein stopped the fight at 2 minutes and 9 seconds of the round.

As Goldstein wrapped his arms around Griffith, the dazed Paret continued his slow slump to the floor. He collapsed on the canvas as the announcement of Griffith's victory was made.

Dr. Alexander Schiff rushed into the ring to attend the stricken champion. Then Paret was carried out of the ring on a stretcher.

Paret was unconscious when he was taken to the dressing room. He was still out when the commission doctors worked over him and then ordered an ambulance. He was taken to Roosevelt Hospital.

"It looks like he suffered a head injury but we don't know what it is," said Dr. Ira McCown, of the state athletic commission's medical staff.

"It looks like a case of cerebral rigidity," said Dr. Harry Kleiman of the New York State Athletic Commission. "It could be a serious brain injury."

Paret, who had taken a severe beating although he had floored Griffith in the sixth round, didn't seem to have any pep at all in the 12th. He was sluggish and moving flatfootedly.

Griffith weighed 144 and Paret 146½.

Griffith, eager to make up for his split decision defeat to Paret last Sept. 30, nailed Paret with a right to the jaw. Paret went against the ropes, where he had spent most of the fight.

Griffith hammered him with a series of rights that sent Paret's head between the second and top rope. Griffith hammered him with several uppercuts to the head that kept the blood flowing from Paret's nose and a cut under his right eye.

Altogether Griffith landed more than 20 punches without a return as Paret sagged on the ropes.

Outside of the flash knockdown in the sixth round, the fight was dominated almost completely by the 25-year-old Virgin Island native. Griffith staggered the muscular Cuban in the fourth, fifth, seventh and tenth rounds and piled up a big margin on the scorecards of all of the officials.

In the sixth Griffith was leading as usual when he walked into a left hook that snapped against his jaw and sent him on the seat of his pants. Griffith, hurt badly, wobbled to his feet at 6. He held the ropes and Goldstein continued the count to eight. Then as Griffith moved out the bell sounded to end the round. That was Paret's first and last big moment of the third and rubber bout between the two.

Griffith had won the first fight and title by knocking out Paret in the 13th round at Miami Beach, Fla., last April 1. Then Paret regained the crown on a split, controversial decision at the Garden last Sept. 30.

Since then Paret had one fight. He absorbed a fearful beating from the NBA middleweight champion Gene Fullmer at Las Vegas last Dec. 9.

The odds favored Griffith, the challenger, at 4-1, and one of the chief reasons was the shallacking Paret took from the brawny Fullmer.

Griffith became the 11th former welterweight champion to regain the crown. He weighed the lightest since he hit the big time.

The officials had Griffith ahead by the following scores: Goldstein 7-3-1, Judge Tony Rossi 8-3, and Judge Frank Forbes 9-2. The Associated Press had Griffith ahead 7-3-1.

A crowd of 7,600 paid $27,000 for the televised bout. Paret collected $50,000 guarantee. Griffith received about $17,000. It was the fourth time Paret has been stopped. Fullmer knocked him out in the tenth round. Paret's record is 34-12-3. Griffith's record is 29-4

LOYOLA TAKES THIRD PLACE

Dayton Downs St. John's, Wins NIT Championship

By JIM HACKLEMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Dayton ended a long string of frustrations Saturday by wining the National Invitation Basketball Tournament with a powerful 73-67 victory over St. John's of New York.

The exciting final was played before a Madison Square Garden crowd of 16,037 after Loyola of Chicago had beaten Duquesne 95-84 for third place.

Dayton, a five-time runner-up in nine previous NIT's, was led to its first triumph by sophomores Bill Chmielewski and Gordy Hatton. Chmielewski, completely outplaying St. John's vaunted Leroy Ellis, spearheaded the Flyers into control of the game and Hatton applied the clincher in the closing minutes.

Dayton went with its starting five until just one minute was left and each had a big hand in the victory. Playing tight, patient basketball, the Flyers refused to wilt against a furious St. John's rally at the finish.

Dayton pushed ahead by 11 points midway in the second half but saw the lead dwindle to five with 7:18 to go. Then Hatton, a 6-foot guard, put on his clutch performance with 11 of Dayton's final 13 points.

Chmielewski, a bruising 6-10, 235-pounder, was named the tournament's most valuable player. He scored 24 points for a four-game total of 107, and had 11 rebounds Saturday as he thoroughly outclassed Ellis, St. John's 6-10 senior center, under the boards.

Hatton, who had a cold hand in the first half, netted 18 points and had 94 for the tourney.

Ellis scored 22 points for the Redmen, hitting only five of 19 from the floor but clicking on 12 of 13 free throws. Kevin Loughery was high man with 26 points for St. John's, which has won the NIT title three times in 16 appearances.

St. John's had an 18-11 lead midway in the first half before Chmielewski paced Dayton into the lead. It was see-saw for the next few minutes, but the Flyers gradually moved ahead, led 35-29 at intermission, and never was headed.

Loyola's speedy high-jumping young Ramblers led throughout the first half but temporarily lost their poise against the Duquesne press at the outset of the second half. The scrappy Dukes, after trailing by as many as 12 points and by 43-38 at intermission, took a 50-49 lead with four minutes gone in the second half.

But behind the sparkling play of back courtman John Egan and cashing in on its foul-shooting opportunities, the Ramblers from Chicago regained command and won going away.

Duquesne, which had a lively brawl with St. John's in Thursday's semifinals, almost touched off another one. With the game in its concluding minutes, Dennis Cuff of the Dukes manhandled Loyola's Vic Rouse, bringing players from both benches onto the floor. There was no actual fight and a technical foul was called against Cuff.

Duquesne was in foul trouble most of the second half, committed a total of 27 and gave up 29 points to Loyola from the free throw line.

Loyola (23-4) showed its usual well-balanced high-scoring attack. Jerry Harkness, Egan and Ron Miller had 20 each for the winners, Rouse scored 18 and Les Hunter 15. Duquesne (22-7) was led by Clyde Arnold with 25 points and its muscular 5-10 guard, Willie Somerset, with 18.

Somerset totaled 86 points as Duquesne split its four NIT games.

Easily Defeat USL, Arkansas Thinlies

By RICK BRYAN
World Sports Editor

Northeast State's track and field team captured firsts in all but three events to easily vanquish Arkansas State Teachers college and Southwestern Louisiana at rain - soaked Brown Stadium in their first home meet of the season here last night.

The Indians, undefeated in three straight outdoor meets, compiled a total of 100 points to 43½ for Arkansas State and 33½ for Southwestern.

Rains which fell steadily through the first hour of the meet drove most of a sizeable crowd to shelter and slowed the track enough to prevent any new records from being set.

TIES RECORDS

Speedy Dave Styron, however, was able to tie the Brown Stadium record for the 220-yard dash with a sizzling 21.4 run.

Styron's run equaled the mark set by Sid Garton of East Texas State in 1960.

Dave's twin brother, Don, who injured his leg in the Shreveport Relays last week, participated in only the 440 and mile relays.

Dave, who placed first in two events along with distance man Buddy Eiland, and field specialist Tommy Edmondson, also won the 100 in 9.6, only one tenth of a second off the stadium record of 9.5.

Eiland pulled in front of Southwestern's Malcom Robinson starting the final lap of the mile and increased the gap to nearly 20-yards in handing the Englishman his third defeat in four meetings this year in the mile. Eiland's time was 4:13.6; Robinson's 4:17.03.

Eiland started to pass the Southwestern freshman twice earlier in the race but dropped back again both times.

The long-striding Eiland also took first place honors in the half mile with a 1:56.3 clocking.

Gerald Cound of ASTC as second and Jim Collins of USL third.

TROJANS CATCHUP

In one of the most thrilling runs of the night, Tallulah's mile relay team came from behind in the last lap to hand Neville its only defeat in three high school relay runs. The Trojan team of Ed Yerger, James Reeves, Bill Gilfoil and Chapman Lee circled the oval in 3:36.5.

Neville, behind the combine of Don Brant, Freddy Moses, Steve Jefferson and Mike Wilson won the 440 yard relays in 44.7, while the combine of Brant, Moses, Bunsey Bryant and Wilson clipped off the 880-relay in 1:31.0.

Neville and Tallulah were the only high school teams competing.

LEAVES FIELD

Robinson, running barefooted, won the two mile run in 9.29.3, completely leaving the field. Jack Williams and Bill Frye of Northeast were second and third.

Robinson said later running barefoot wasn't the usual procedure; that he removed his shoes only because the short spikes he brought weren't helping him.

The only other events Northeast didn't place first in were the high jump and the shot put.

Arkansas State teachers captured the high jump, with Ronnie Hern and Dale Kent tying for first at 6.0. Eugene Franklin of Northeast and Larry Simon from Southwestern shared second with 5-10 jumps.

The shot put went to Larry De La Bretonne of USL with a heave of 45½. Northeast's Tiffen Stone was second with 43-3¾.

WINS TWO EVENTS

Edmonson's firsts came in the pole vault and broad jump. The Tribe freshman vaulted 13-6 to win while Noel Orr of Northeast and ASTC's Tommy Pace tied for second with 12-0.

Edmonson took the broad jump with a 21-9½ leap. Owen was second at 21-8.

The Indians, who also won the Southwestern Recreation meet and the Shreveport Relays, took ten seconds (including two ties) and two thirds, in addition to their 17 first places.

Northeast's mile relay team, with the Styrons running the third and anchor positions sailed away to an easy win in 3:15.8. John Baker and Randall Walker took the first two laps. ASTC was far behind in second.

The 440-yard relay combine of Dave Styron, Charles McDonald, Jay Goldsmith and Don Styron clipped off that distance in 41.8. Arkansas State was second in this too.

Northeast also won the 880-yard relay to complete the relay sweep, with McDonald, John Baker, Walker and Goldsmith running this one in 1:28.6. The Arkansas team, defending champions of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference, placed second.

Franklin of Northeast finished first in the 120-mile hurdles ahead of Bill Wright of STC. Franklin's time was 15.4, Wright's 16.0.

The Tribe finished one, two, three in the 440-yard dash, Walker winning with 48.6, Baker taking second and Claude Mercer third.

Northeast's Owen Owen claimed the 220-yard hurdles, winning in 25.7, ahead of Franklin who was clocked at 26.6.

Tiffen Stone of the Indians won in the Discus with a 147-1¾ heave and Gene Harbert the javeline on a chunk of 195-8¾.

IN PLAYOFF OPENER

Celtics Humiliate Warriors, 117-89

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP)—The brilliant Boston Celtics led by Bill Russell and Bob Cousy, humiliated cold-shooting Philadelphia 117-89 Saturday in the opener of the National Basket ball Association Eastern Division playoff finals.

With Russell doing a defensive masterpiece on Wilt Chamberlain and Cousy gunning the patented Celtics fast break, Boston settled the contest early as it launched the defense of its world title.

Russell, a picture of coordinated movement rising to the Chamberlain challenge, held Wilt to a mere 12 points in the first half including one lone field goal in the second period.

Chamberlain wound up the high scorer with 33 points only after the issue was no longer in doubt. The Celtics ruined Philadelphia's plan to play deliberately by combining superior rebounding and a relentless, hounding defense.

The ball-stealing, shot-blocking tactics of the Celtics often sent the Warrior stars reeling back in frustration and wound up in numerous layup baskets for the victors.

In addition, the Warriors hurt their cause with numerous errors and wound up with their worst one-half performance of the year. Boston was leading 50-35 at intermission and Philadelphia had been able to hit on only 12 of 46 field goal tries while being outrebounded decisively 5-31.

Sam Jones hit for 20 points, Russell 16, Tommy Heinsohn 15, and Frank Ramsey 18.

The tone of the game was set in the early moments with Philadelphia leading 5-3. The Warriors had set up a neat ring to control the rebounds but a missed shot, a block by Russell and a traveling penalty cost them three big scoring chances.

From there the Celtics were off as Russell fed Tom Sanders for the tying basket, Cousy started a full-court play with Sanders scoring, then it was Cousy stealing and feeding Sam Jones for a layup.

After Guy Rodgers of the Warriors made a three point contribution, Cousy fed Russell for a stuff-in, Cousy sent Heinsohn for a layup and Jim Loscutoff hit a long set, making it 15-7.

Cousy was the central figure in keeping Boston in front when Philadelphia tried to whittle away the lead in the second period.

Boston ran off seven quick points at the start of the third quarter to erase all doubts as the score went to 57-37.

The nationally televised game, blacked out in New England, opened a best of seven series with the next game at Philadelphia Tuesday night.

Sports Writer Is Selected As New Hall's First

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — The late Grantland Rice has been chosen as the first member of the new National Sportswriter.

Rice, who rose from a $5 a week newspaper job with the Nashville, Tenn., News, to rank among the nation's most widely chosen in a vote of more than 3,600 sportswriters and sportscasters. A 75 per cent majority was necessary to be elected to the Hall of Fame.

On April 3 a plaque denoting Rice as the first entry, along with samples of his work and personal belongings, will be placed in the hall of fame building, located here on the Catawba College campus.

The final ballot also contained the names of Graham McNamee and Ted Husing, noted sportscasters of another era, and Damon Runyon, late sportswriter and author.

Wake Forest Edges UCLA For 3rd Spot

By DON WEISS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mighty Cincinnati, with Paul Hogue playing rings around ailing Jerry Lucas, crushed Ohio State in their long awaited rematch Saturday night, 71-59, and won the National Collegiate Basketball Championship for the second straight year.

Wake Forest won third place, edging UCLA 82-80 in the opener of the showdown doubleheader before 18,469 at Freedom Hall.

Hogue, a 6-foot-8, 240-pound bull, was facing a Lucas considerably under form as a result of the sprained left knee the Buckeye ace suffered in Friday night's semifinals. But it's doubtful that even a 100 per cent Lucas would have made any difference.

The Bearcats of Ed Jucker, who shocked the basketball world by beating Ohio State 70-65 in overtime in the title game last year at Kansas City, played it almost all the way with their wonderfully cohesive unit of Hogue, Tommy Thacker, Ron Bonham, George Wilson and Tony Yates.

Still it was Hogue who made the difference this time, the first time two schools ever met in successive years for the NCAA championship.

Hogue scored 22 points and did a tremendous job on the boards, both on offense and defense. This, combined with the jump shooting of Thacker and the high pressure defense and ball hawking of the Bearcats, made the outcome never in doubt after a 37-29 halftime lead.

The pressure began to tell on Ohio State as time ticked away and with the massive crowd roaring as it turned into a rout, the Bearcats poured it on. They led by as many as 20 points before a late Buckeye flurry cut down the final margin.

Making it two championships in two years of coaching for Jucker, the Bearcats pushed their season record to 29-2 and wound up winning their last 18 games. Ohio State finished 26-2 and the loss was only the sixth against 78 victories since Lucas joined the varsity and began his spectacular career three years ago.

The big fellow from Middletown, Ohio — ironically located only 28 miles from Cincinnati — did his best with a left knee heavily bandaged but obviously bothering him.

He couldn't rebound like he usually does, he couldn't defend like he usually does, and he didn't shoot like he usually does.

The three-time All-America and player of the year the last two seasons has an over-all shooting average of nearly 63 per cent in his collegiate varsity career, which ended Saturday night.

Against the Bearcats though, he hit only five of 17 shots and scored just 11 points.

Hogue, who came to Cincinnati from Knoxville, Tenn., four years ago because he wanted to play on a team with the great Oscar Robertson, also wound up his collegiate career.

He took 18 shots, many of them hooks and short jumps over Lucas, and hit on 11. He added 19 rebounds. With Thacker peppering away consistently at long range, they made a pair that Ohio State couldn't come close to matching.

Thacker, a 6-2 junior, scored only two points last night when the Bearcats won a 72-70 semifinal thriller from UCLA. The two points were on a field goal with four seconds left and won the game.

Jumping Tommy took it from there against the Bucks. He hit six of 14 shots, slipped in 9 of 11 free throws, and wound up with 21 points—13 in the first half when the Bearcats began to put it away.

Lucas scored six points in the first 4:45 of the game but seemed uncomfortable and didn't mix in the under-basket scrambling.

John Havlicek, Luke's fine running mate, drove Ohio State into a 23-22 lead midway of the first half after there had been five ties and the lead had been changing hands practically from the tipoff.

There was 9:01 remaining when Havlicek's jump shot put the Buckeyes in front and from that point until nearly the midway point of the second half, this high powered Ohio State offense scored only 16 points.

By that time Cincinnati had a 57-39 lead and the Buckeye booster club was thinking of disbanding. Across the way, the Bearcat followers were screaming with every shot.

With Lucas ineffective inside, Coach Fred Taylor of Ohio State inserted Gary Bradds, a 6-8 sophomore and Lucas' understudy and moved Jerry outside.

Three or four times Lucas fed Bradds cutting across the key, but while the young rookie wound up with 15 points to lead the Ohio State scoring, he couldn't hit at the stage when it might have mattered.

Cincinnati is the fourth school to win back-to-back national championships. The last to do it were the San Francisco Dons of the Bill Russell era in 1955-56. Kentucky won successive titles in 1948 and 1949 and Oklahoma A&M in 1945 and 1946. Ohio State, which, of course, won the national title when Lucas was a sophomore in 1960, lost in the championship game for the third time.

The ailment kept Lucas from reaching the 2,000 point mark during his career. He finished with 1,990.

Ohio State won its way into this year's finals with an 84-68 victory over Wake Forest Friday night. The Deacons then came back to win third place.

All-America Len Chappell, who added two more records to the Wake Forest books, did the heavy job again with 26 points but it was his foul trouble that nearly gave the Bruins from UCLA the victory.

Behind 78-70 with 2 minutes 44 left, the Bruins lured Chappell into his fifth foul a minute later and with Walt Hazzard, Fred Slaughter and Johnny Green driving and ball hawking, pulled to within two points at 80-78.

Two free throws by Tommy McCoy of Wake Forest boosted the Deacons from the Atlantic Coast Conference into an 82-78 advantage with a half minute remaining.

But Slaughter hit from close in and it was 82-80.

LOYOLA TAKES THIRD PLACE

Dayton Downs St. John's, Wins NIT Championship

By JIM HACKLEMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Dayton ended a long string of frustrations Saturday by wining the National Invitation Basketball Tournament with a powerful 73-67 victory over St. John's of New York.

The exciting final was played before a Madison Square Garden crowd of 16,037 after Loyola of Chicago had beaten Duquesne 95-84 for third place.

Dayton, a five-time runner-up in nine previous NIT's, was led to its first triumph by sophomores Bill Chmielewski and Gordy Hatton. Chmielewski, completely outplaying St. John's vaunted Leroy Ellis, spearheaded the Flyers into control of the game and Hatton applied the clincher in the closing minutes.

Dayton went with its starting five until just one minute was left and each had a big hand in the victory. Playing tight, patient basketball, the Flyers refused to wilt against a furious St. John's rally at the finish.

Dayton pushed ahead by 11 points midway in the second half but saw the lead dwindle to five with 7:18 to go. Then Hatton, a 6-foot guard, put on his clutch performance with 11 of Dayton's final 13 points.

Chmielewski, a bruising 6-10, 235-pounder, was named the tournament's most valuable player. He scored 24 points for a four-game total of 107, and had 11 rebounds Saturday as he thoroughly outclassed Ellis, St. John's 6-10 senior center, under the boards.

Hatton, who had a cold hand in the first half, netted 18 points and had 94 for the tourney.

Ellis scored 22 points for the Redmen, hitting only five of 19 from the floor but clicking on 12 of 13 free throws. Kevin Loughery was high man with 26 points for St. John's, which has won the NIT title three times in 16 appearances.

St. John's had an 18-11 lead midway in the first half before Chmielewski paced Dayton into the lead. It was see-saw for the next few minutes, but the Flyers gradually moved ahead, led 35-29 at intermission, and never was headed.

Loyola's speedy high-jumping young Ramblers led throughout the first half but temporarily lost their poise against the Duquesne press at the outset of the second half. The scrappy Dukes, after trailing by as many as 12 points and by 43-38 at intermission, took a 50-49 lead with four minutes gone in the second half.

But behind the sparkling play of back courtman John Egan and cashing in on its foul-shooting opportunities, the Ramblers from Chicago regained command and won going away.

Duquesne, which had a lively brawl with St. John's in Thursday's semifinals, almost touched off another one. With the game in its concluding minutes, Dennis Cuff of the Dukes manhandled Loyola's Vic Rouse, bringing players from both benches onto the floor. There was no actual fight and a technical foul was called against Cuff.

Duquesne was in foul trouble most of the second half, committed a total of 27 and gave up 29 points to Loyola from the free throw line.

Loyola (23-4) showed its usual well-balanced high-scoring attack. Jerry Harkness, Egan and Ron Miller had 20 each for the winners, Rouse scored 18 and Les Hunter 15. Duquesne (22-7) was led by Clyde Arnold with 25 points and its muscular 5-10 guard, Willie Somerset, with 18.

Somerset totaled 86 points as Duquesne split its four NIT games.

REGAINS CROWN

Emil Griffith Stops Paret In 12th Round

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP)— Fired up Emile Griffith of New York stopped champ Benny (Kid) Paret of Cuba in the 12th round Saturday night and regained the world welterweight title.

A series of right hand blows to the head staggered the 25-year-old Paret midway in the 12th round and as he started to slump to the floor, Referee Ruby Goldstein stopped the fight at 2 minutes and 9 seconds of the round.

As Goldstein wrapped his arms around Griffith, the dazed Paret continued his slow slump to the floor. He collapsed on the canvas as the announcement of Griffith's victory was made.

Dr. Alexander Schiff rushed into the ring to attend the stricken champion. Then Paret was carried out of the ring on a stretcher.

Paret was unconscious when he was taken to the dressing room. He was still out when the commission doctors worked over him and then ordered an ambulance. He was taken to Roosevelt Hospital.

"It looks like he suffered a head injury but we don't know what it is," said Dr. Ira McCown, of the state athletic commission's medical staff.

"It looks like a case of cerebral rigidity," said Dr. Harry Kleiman of the New York State Athletic Commission. "It could be a serious brain injury."

Paret, who had taken a severe beating although he had floored Griffith in the sixth round, didn't seem to have any pep at all in the 12th. He was sluggish and moving flatfootedly.

Griffith weighed 144 and Paret 146½.

Griffith, eager to make up for his split decision defeat to Paret last Sept. 30, nailed Paret with a right to the jaw. Paret went against the ropes, where he had spent most of the fight.

Griffith hammered him with a series of rights that sent Paret's head between the second and top rope. Griffith hammered him with several uppercuts to the head that kept the blood flowing from Paret's nose and a cut under his right eye.

Altogether Griffith landed more than 20 punches without a return as Paret sagged on the ropes.

Outside of the flash knockdown in the sixth round, the fight was dominated almost completely by the 25-year-old Virgin Island native. Griffith staggered the muscular Cuban in the fourth, fifth, seventh and tenth rounds and piled up a big margin on the scorecards of all of the officials.

In the sixth Griffith was leading as usual when he walked into a left hook that snapped against his jaw and sent him on the seat of his pants. Griffith, hurt badly, wobbled to his feet at 6. He held the ropes and Goldstein continued the count to eight. Then as Griffith moved out the bell sounded to end the round. That was Paret's first and last big moment of the third and rubber bout between the two.

Griffith had won the first fight and title by knocking out Paret in the 13th round at Miami Beach, Fla., last April 1. Then Paret regained the crown on a split, controversial decision at the Garden last Sept. 30.

Since then Paret had one fight. He absorbed a fearful beating from the NBA middleweight champion Gene Fullmer at Las Vegas last Dec. 9.

The odds favored Griffith, the challenger, at 4-1, and one of the chief reasons was the shallacking Paret took from the brawny Fullmer.

Griffith became the 11th former welterweight champion to regain the crown. He weighed the lightest since he hit the big time.

The officials had Griffith ahead by the following scores: Goldstein 7-3-1, Judge Tony Rossi 8-3, and Judge Frank Forbes 9-2. The Associated Press had Griffith ahead 7-3-1.

A crowd of 7,600 paid $27,000 for the televised bout. Paret collected $50,000 guarantee. Griffith received about $17,000. It was the fourth time Paret has been stopped. Fullmer knocked him out in the tenth round. Paret's record is 34-12-3. Griffith's record is 29-3.

LOCKWOOD TO START

Indian Baseballers Play Louisiana State Monday

THE BATTING STAR in Northeast's 7-6 victory over Mississippi State last Tuesday, all-GSC outfielder John Pace will try to collect a few more base hits Monday when the Indians meet LSU in Baton Rouge. Pace hit a single to bat in the winning run in the Tuesday victory and collected two other safties in the game. He's a sophomore from Haile.

Righthander Bobby Lockwood, who has pitched in both of Northeast State's baseball games this spring, is scheduled to make it three in a row Monday afternoon when the Indians face LSU in Baton Rouge.

Coach George Luffey has nominated Lockwood to start the Monday game, which begins at 3 p.m. in LSU's Alex Box Stadium.

Lockwood went the distance with a seven - hitter as Northeast lost its opener to Mississippi State, 3-1, last Monday. He came back the next afternoon with one and two-thirds innings of hitless work to take the victory as Northeast edged State, 7-6.

Lockwood, a junior from Spearsville, had a 2-4 record last spring but posted one of the better earned run averages in the Gulf States Conference, a 1.31 mark.

Outfielder John Pace was the batting star of the victory over State, driving in the winning run in the ninth. He is slated to start in left field, Bob Groves in center and Donnie Brunson in right.

Bo Dick Smith will be the Northeast catcher. Freshman Don Boniol will be at first, Eddie McGowan at second, all-GSC Phil Petras at short and freshman Charley Dykes at third.

McGowan has a slight leg injury and Petras is recovering from a pulled muscle but neither is expected to be slowed too much.

To back up Lockwood, Luffey will have lefties Jerry Godwin and Teddy Payne and either Charles Wheeler or Ed Quimby, both righthanders.

Others players expected to make the trip are catcher Gladden Hear second baseman Keith Prince, shortstop James Cromwell, third baseman Gary Fields and outfielder Don Senn.

Luffey's charges have four other games next week. They meet Delta State in two games Friday afternoon and play their first home games Saturday in a GSC twin bill with Southwestern.

LSU, defending Southeastern Conference champion, went into a Saturday afternoon game with Tulane with a 4-2 record. Coach Ray Didier's Tigers have an all-American hurler in senior Allen Smith and two other strong throwers in Fred Southerland of Monroe and footballer Lynn Amedee.

Sophomore Gene Achord, the left fielder, has been the Bengals' top hitter so far. Footballer Jimmy Field and Bobby Theriot usually join Achord in the outfield.

Jimmy Poche at first, Larry Edmonson at second, John Thomas at short and Tommy Demont at third will form the LSU infield with Frances Genusa of Monroe backing them up. Morris Summers will probably open behind the plate.

LSU opened its season by dropping a game to Loyola but rallied to beat Northwestern in one and Northern Illinois in two before blanking Tulane Friday, 4-0.

It was the Cubs' eighth Cactus League victory in 14 games.

Don Cardwell, a hard-throwing right-hander, went eight innings and received credit for his third spring victory without a defeat.

Lefty Dick Stigman fanned six innings for the Indians, striking out 10 and walking two. It was Stigman's throwing error that enabled Chicago to tie the game in the fourth.

Rookie outfielder Nels Mathews padded the Chicago advantage with a home run over the center field fence off reliever Art Kay in the eighth.

The Braves made only six hits off Pete Burnside, who pitched the first six innings, and Ray Rippelmeyer, who went the last three, but two were home runs by Frank Bolling and Mack Jones. Jones' was his sixth and came in the ninth with one on.

Starter and winner Ray Washburn and three relievers checked the Twins on five hits. Don Lee and Bruce Swango of the Twins were walloped for 14 by the Cards, including three by Minnie Minoso.

An error by Twins' shortstop Zoilo Versalles let in the go-ahead runs for St. Louis in the third inning. Center fielder Curt Flood of the Cards made a fence-climbing catch to rob Earl Battey of a homer in the second.

Red Sox Over Giants

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)—The Boston Red Sox survived home runs by Willie Mays and Felipe Alou and edged the San Francisco Giants, 5-4, in an exhibition game Saturday.

The Red Sox ended a three-game losing streak in the Cactus League by counting four runs in the third inning against rookie right-hander Gaylor Perry. There after they hung on behind the effective pitching of Bill Monbouquette and Mike Fornieles.

Carl Yastrzemski, Bob Tillman and Lu Clinton hammered singles behind a walk and the first of second baseman Charlie Hiller's two errors during the big Boston explosion. Pete Runnels' double and Frank Malzone's single had brought in the Sox first run in the first inning.

Alou proved a chief tormentor for Monbouquette, who surrendered all eight of the San Francisco hits during his six innings, cracking a single, homer and double.

Orioles Take Tigers

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Steve Barber, working out at Baltimore's spring camp on Army leave from Ft. Bragg, N.C., made his 1962 pitching debut a wining one Saturday as the Orioles rallied for three unearned seventh inning runs and beat Detoit 9-6.

The contest was the opener of a day-night Grapefruit League doubleheader.

A wild throw by the Tiger rookie left-hander Nicky Lolich set the stage for the Birds' three clinching tallies, driven across by Russ Snider and Jim Gentile. Their singles were the last of 14 Baltimore hits, three of which were struck by Earl Robinson.

Rocky Colavito and Jacke Wood clouted solo homers to help Frank Lary off to an early 3-1 lead. The Detroit veteran couldn't hold it, however, and his defense fell apart in critical moments.

Eight of the Tigers' nine hits came at the expense of Skinny Brown, before Barber, an 18-game winner last season, came on to restrict the Tigers to one bad-hop safety over the last three innings.

IN DORAL OPEN

Casper Fires 67, Forges Into Lead

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)— Returning to golf's money competition after a rest "that always does a man good," Bill Casper fired the finest round of the $50,000 Doral Country Club Open Saturday and forged to the front at the 36-hole halfway mark.

A 5-under-par 67 by the chubby Californian lifted him into the No. 1 spot with a total of 137 when the earlier leaders, Bobby Nichols and Jack Nicklaus, faltered after setting a hot first round pace.

Nichols soared to a 77 for 146 and Nicklaus posted a 74 for a 143.

A sharpshooting Florida native playing out of Illinois, Bob Goalby, fired a 69 to move up to second place, two strokes behind Casper.

Goalby said he missed five putts of around 10 feet "and you have to make 10-fo9t putts if you get any birdies on the big holes here." But he still registered three birdies and was never over par on any hole.

In a tie for third place at the day's end were Arnold Palmer and Tommy Bolt with 142s. Nicklaus and Rex Baxter were tied for fifth, as the only other players in the big field still standing better than par.

Casper, the 12th ranking money winner of the last 15 years—a period which the PGA calls the "modern era"—had been off the tour for five weeks, taking it easy at his San Diego home.

He returned to action here and in the first round posted a 2-under-par 70 despite gutsy winds that did crazy things to the golfers' shots.

Friday, he fired another 70 in even worse weather conditions, only to have that score wiped off the board when a rainstorm stopped play with more than half of the players still out.

Tied for seventh place with par scores of 144 were Paul Bondeson, Jim Ferree, Ted Kroll, Phil Rodgers and Tommy Jacobs.

The cutoff point for getting into Sunday's third round was 153. Ninety-four pros made this score or better.

Indian Baseballers Play Louisiana State Monday

Others players expected to make the trip are catcher Gladden Hear second baseman Keith Prince, shortstop James Cromwell, third baseman Gary Fields and outfielder Don Senn.

Luffey's charges have four other games next week. They meet Delta State in two games Friday afternoon and play their first home games Saturday in a GSC twin bill with Southwestern.

LSU opened its season by dropping a game to Loyola but rallied to beat Northwestern in one and Northern Illinois in two before blanking Tulane Friday, 4-0.

SECOND STRAIGHT YEAR

Bill Russell Named Outstanding Player

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Bill Russell, 6-10 defensive and rebounding wizard of the Boston Celtics, was named the most valuable player in the National Basketball Association for the second straight year Saturday.

Selection of Russell was made by a 27-man committee representing the United States Basketball Writers Association. The committee was composed of three writers in each of the nine NBA cities.

Orioles Take Tigers

The contest was the opener of a day-night Grapefruit League doubleheader.

A wild throw by the Tiger rookie left-hander Nicky Lolich set the stage for the Birds' three clinching tallies, driven across by Russ Snider and Jim Gentile. Their singles were the last of 14 Baltimore hits, three of which were struck by Earl Robinson.

Rocky Colavito and Jacke Wood clouted solo homers to help Frank Lary off to an early 3-1 lead. The Detroit veteran couldn't hold it, however, and his defense fell apart in critical moments.

Eight of the Tigers' nine hits came at the expense of Skinny Brown, before Barber, an 18-game winner last season, came on to restrict the Tigers to one bad-hop safety over the last three innings.

IN DORAL OPEN

Casper Fires 67, Forges Into Lead

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)— Returning to golf's money competition after a rest "that always does a man good," Bill Casper fired the finest round of the $50,000 Doral Country Club Open Saturday and forged to the front at the 36-hole halfway mark.

A 5-under-par 67 by the chubby Californian lifted him into the No. 1 spot with a total of 137 when the earlier leaders, Bobby Nichols and Jack Nicklaus, faltered after setting a hot first round pace.

Nichols soared to a 77 for 146 and Nicklaus posted a 74 for a 143.

A sharpshooting Florida native playing out of Illinois, Bob Goalby, fired a 69 to move up to second place, two strokes behind Casper.

Goalby said he missed five putts of around 10 feet "and you have to make 10-fo9t putts if you get any birdies on the big holes here." But he still registered three birdies and was never over par on any hole.

In a tie for third place at the day's end were Arnold Palmer and Tommy Bolt with 142s. Nicklaus and Rex Baxter were tied for fifth, as the only other players in the big field still standing better than par.

Casper, the 12th ranking money winner of the last 15 years—a period which the PGA calls the "modern era"—had been off the tour for five weeks, taking it easy at his San Diego home.

He returned to action here and in the first round posted a 2-under-par 70 despite gutsy winds that did crazy things to the golfers' shots.

Friday, he fired another 70 in even worse weather conditions, only to have that score wiped off the board when a rainstorm stopped play with more than half of the players still out.

Tied for seventh place with par scores of 144 were Paul Bondeson, Jim Ferree, Ted Kroll, Phil Rodgers and Tommy Jacobs.

The cutoff point for getting into Sunday's third round was 153. Ninety-four pros made this score or better.

Major casualties were Bob Rosburg, the year's fourth highest money winner; Jack Fleck, former U.S. Open champion; Joe Campbell, winner of this year's tournament at Baton Rouge; Stan Leonard, eight-time Canadian PGA champion; Johnny Pott, the sixth highest money winner of 1961, and Al Balding.

A trio of Murrah pitchers lead by starter Jim Griffin limited the Louisianans to a pair of homers as their only hits.

Trailing 2-0 into the bottom of the second Rams stickers Pete Perot and Barry Simpson clubbed back to back homers for Bastrop's only safeties.

Murrah banged eight hits off four Ram pitchers and the visitors aided the cause with six miscues afield.

In afternoon battle for third place between two Jackson teams, Provine beat Central 6-5.

Louisiana players carted off their share of the tournament awards. Bastrop's Floyd Murry, who pitched a 10 inning shutout in the Ram's 1-0 win over Central Friday was selected as the tournaments' outstanding pitcher. Teammate Ricky Head was the outstanding infielder with his flawless play in four games.

In the afternoon consolation game Ouachita downed West Monroe in a free swinging 12-11 contest. The win gave the Lions their first win of the tournament after three losses to Jackson teams.

Lefthander Lynn Causey and Billy Darden were co-heroes of the Lions come from behind win.

Causey gave Ouachita a three lead in the bottom of the first on a homer with two men on base.

The Rebels exploded in the top of the fifth with six runs to take a 9-4 advantage.

Bill Duncan and Dicky Worthy walked on Lion starter Dennis Warner. Wayne Hardwick singled and Fred Newton followed with a double scoring two runs. Roy Holloway relieved Warner at this point.

Roger Bell hit a sacrifice fly to plate another Rebel run and Ronnie Morgan clubbed one over the fence with a mate aboard to give the Rebels an 8-4 lead.

Shortstop Reggie Pleasant followed Morgan and sent another ball out of the park.

Ouachita went into the bottom of the sixth down 11-6. Boyd and Wally Rugg walked. Chuck Rugg doubled to score Boyd and Butch Oglesbee singled to tally Wally Rugg. Lynn Causey gained first on an error and Chuck Rugg came across the plate. Billy Darden then put the Lions in the lead with a three run homer.

Intra-Squad Bill At Ole Miss Sees Blues Beat Reds

UNIVERSITY, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Perry Lee Dunn scored one touchdown and passed for another to lead the Blues to a 30-0 victory over the Reds Saturday in the annual game climaxing spring football training at the University of Mississippi.

After a scoreless first period, Dunn climaxed an 8-play 75-yard drive by going over from the one in the second period. Wes Sullivan made the first of two conversions.

A few minutes later, Frank Kinard Jr., son of Blue coach Bruiser Kinard, raced 51 yards to set up a touchdown by Chuck Morris who ran over from one yard out.

Morris took the kickoff opening the second half and sped 75 yards to the Red 20. Dunn then heaved a touchdown pass to Louis Guy and Kinard converted.

Midway through the third period Sullivan booted a 33-yard field goal.

Sophomore John Champion wound up the scoring with a 9-yard scoot off tackle in the fourth period.

Bonnier-Bianchi Easy Victors In Endurance Race

By JACK HAND

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Joakim Bonnier, a bearded Swede, and Lucien Bianchi, a red-haired mechanic from Brussels, drove a 12-cylinder Ferrari to an easy victory Saturday in the Sebring 12-hour endurance race after a disqualification sidelined the favored team of Britain's Stirling Moss and Scotland's Innes Ireland.

Bonnier, 32, had won many grand prix races in Europe but the 23-year-old Bianchi never had scored in an important international test. They assumed the lead with 4½ hours to go and won by approximately 52 miles.

Mexico's daring Rodriguez brothers, Pedro and Ricardo, finally had to call it quits after two Ferraris failed to last in this gruelling grind over the turns on an abandoned World War II bomber training base.

Pressure Driving Maris To Extremes In Behavior

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—Roger Maris is a troubled young man, torn between the demands of press and public and his own preference for a quiet, family life.

Constant perssure is driving him to extremes of behavior in the relations with visiting newsmen. He faces serious problems conforming to the popular image of a national figure.

Writers who travel constantly with the New York Yankees insist he has not changed since he set the record with 61 home runs. Others report a boorish "no interview" attitude that antagonizes visitors.

In many ways there is a similarity between Maris' reaction to fame and fortune and the response of a starlet suddenly thrust into the spotlight as a box office smash. Often the new star is not equipped temperamentally to cope with the situation.

Maris never has been a glad hander or outgoing personality during his baseball career. His theory has been "let's get the work done and then get home and forget it." The only trouble is this—You can't go home and forget when you are being hailed as the new Babe Ruth.

Since he hit No. 61, Maris has been besieged by people who want him to endorse products, sign autographs, appear at banquets. Most of all he has been over-run by people asking, "Will you hit 62 in '62?" At the age of 27, it can be difficult to handle the obligations that go with fame, even if you are being paid $70,000.

Maris started spring training by co-starring with Mickey Mantle in a movie, shot at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. After he ended his holdout he was handicapped by a sore muscle that kept him out of the line-up. In recent days he has been feuding with the visiting press.

Perhaps "feud" isn't really the world for it. Maris simply refu-ses to be interviewed.

"I will say hello and shake hands and smile but no interviews," he told one writer who never had been overly critical of him.

"You fellows write what you want no matter what I say so what's the use of talking?" he said.

"This is the first time I have seen you since last fall," the reporter answered. "What did I do to you. What happened? People are going to get the wrong impression of you."

"I am sorry if some people might get hurt but that's the way it is," he said, continuing the no-interview interview. "Every ball player built up as a red neck, stays a red neck the rest of his career. Some people write bad things about me without even talking to me.

"Now they don't even ask about my ability. They go into personal things. They rip me if I talk or if I don't talk. So I'm not going to say anything."

With these words, he left for a taped interview with a visiting television man who, presumably, could not alter the tape to antagonize Maris.

Bastrop Edged In Championship

JACKSON, Miss. (Special) — Host Murrah's Mustangs took advantage of power hitting and lose defensive play by Bastrop's Rams for a 9-2 victory in the championship of the Murrah Invitational Baseball Tournament here last night.

With the score tied at two apiece going into the fourth Murrah scored three runs after two men were out on three Bastrop errors.

A trio of Murrah pitchers lead by starter Jim Griffin limited the Louisianians to a pair of homers as their only hits.

Trailing 2-0 into the bottom of the second Rams stickers Pete Perot and Barry Simpson clubbed back to back homers for Bastrop's only safeties.

Murrah banged eight hits off four Ram pitchers and the visitors aided the cause with six miscues afield.

In afternoon battle for third place between two Jackson teams, Provine beat Central 6-5.

Louisiana players carted off their share of the tournament awards. Bastrop's Floyd Murry, who pitched a 10 inning shutout in the Ram's 1-0 win over Central Friday was selected as the tournaments' outstanding pitcher. Teammate Ricky Head was the outstanding infielder with his flawless play in four games.

The Sportsmanship Award was won by Ouachita's jack of all trades Lynn Causey.

Pelican staters making the 20 player all tournament team were Scott Rawls, Floyd Murry, Ricky Head, and Perot of Bastrop; Bill Duncan of West Monroe and Chuck Rugg of Ouachita.

In the afternoon consolation game Ouachita downed West Monroe in a free swinging 12-11 contest. The win gave the Lions their first win of the tournament after three losses to Jackson teams.

West Monroe finished out of the money at 0-4.

Lefthander Lynn Causey and Billy Darden were co-heroes of the Lions come from behind win.

Causey gave Ouachita a three lead in the bottom of the first on a homer with two men on base.

The Rebels exploded in the top of the fifth with six runs to take a 9-4 advantage.

Bill Duncan and Dicky Worthy walked on Lion starter Dennis Warner. Wayne Hardwick singled and Fred Newton followed with a double scoring two runs. Roy Holloway relieved Warner at this point.

Roger Bell hit a sacrifice fly to plate another Rebel run and Ronnie Morgan clubbed one over the fence with a mate aboard to give the Rebels an 8-4 lead.

Shortstop Reggie Pleasant followed Morgan and sent another ball out of the park.

Ouachita went into the bottom of the sixth down 11-6. Boyd and Wally Rugg walked. Chuck Rugg doubled to score Boyd and Butch Oglesbee singled to tally Wally Rugg. Lynn Causey gained first on an error and Chuck Rugg came across the plate. Billy Darden then put the Lions in the lead with a three run homer.

Causey, who relieved Holloway in the top of the inning, handcuffed the Rebels the rest of the way and picked up the 12-11 win.

Bastrop defeated Murrah 9-8 during the afternoon in the third round robin to move into the finals.

The Rams jumped off to a 9-0 lead through the top of the fifth and Murrah fought uphill socring eight runs in the last three innings.

Murrah had men on second and third bases in the bottom of the seventh when Johnny Reeves popped up to Rams third baseman Ricky Head to end the game.

Intra-Squad Bill At Ole Miss Sees Blues Beat Reds

UNIVERSITY, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Perry Lee Dunn scored one touchdown and passed for another to lead the Blues to a 30-0 victory over the Reds Saturday in the annual game climaxing spring football training at the University of Mississippi.

After a scoreless first period, Dunn climaxed an 8-play 75-yard drive by going over from the one in the second period. Wes Sullivan made the first of two conversions.

A few minutes later, Frank Kinard Jr., son of Blue coach Bruiser Kinard, raced 51 yards to set up a touchdown by Chuck Morris who ran over from one yard out.

Morris took the kickoff opening the second half and sped 75 yards to the Red 20. Dunn then heaved a touchdown pass to Louis Guy and Kinard converted.

Midway through the third period Sullivan booted a 38 - yard field goal.

Sophomore John Champion wound up the scoring with a 9-yard sprint off tackle in the fourth period.

Bonnier-Bianchi Easy Victors In Endurance Race

By JACK HAND

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Joakim Bonnier, a bearded Swede, and Lucien Bianchi, a red-haired mechanic from Brussels, drove a 12-cylinder Ferrari to an easy victory Saturday in the Sebring 12-hour endurance race after a disqualification sidelined the favored team of Britain's Stirling Moss and Scotland's Innes Ireland.

Bonnier, 32, had won many grand prix races in Europe but the 23-year-old Bianchi never had scored in an important international test. They assumed the lead with 4½ hours to go and won by approximately 52 miles.

Mexico's daring Rodriguez brothers, Pedro and Ricardo, finally had to call it quits after two Ferraris failed to last in this gruelling grind over the turns on an abandoned World War II bomber training base.

WANTED: DAVIS ISLAND

The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service wants to buy Davis Island in the Mississippi River near Tallulah to convert it into a game refuge, but negotiations with land owners have been unsuccessful so far.

This was confirmed to us Friday by W. L. Towns, the assistant regional director of the Fish & Wildlife Service at Atlanta, Ga.

For those who are not familiar with the island, it is composed of 20,000 acres of lush hunting territory located in the Mississippi River — 80 per cent in Mississippi and 20 per cent in Louisiana.

The island, named after Jefferson Davis who once had a home there, is the rave of deer hunters, who have killed some of the largest bucks in Louisiana and Mississippi on the island.

Towns explained that the federal agency has looked at the island as a potential refuge for a long period of time, but until recently there was not enough money available to buy it.

With funds from the sale of duck stamps and from appropriations made by Congress to buy wetland territories, the government is now in a position to buy the island.

Towns said the Fish & Wildlife Service wants the island to convert it into a refuge, principally for Canada geese. By doing so, the service hopes to pull the big honkers down from Illinois and Missouri.

Duck hunters know that Louisiana sees very few Canada geese anymore.

Towns also pointed out that the purchase of Davis Island has been designated as the No. 1 priority by the Mississippi Flyway Council, which is composed of wildlife representatives from each of the states located in the Mississippi Flyway.

Richard Yancey, the assistant director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, told us that Louisiana has declined to go along with the proposed purchase.

While the Mississippi Director John Camp was unavailable for comment, a spokesman for the Mississippi Game & Fish Commission at Jackson said he didn't think the Mississippi group had endorsed the purchase. But he was not sure.

Whether the Louisiana and Mississippi commissions endorse or oppose the purchase is not as important as the positions taken by the individual property owners on the island.

It's really up to them and from what Towns said the property owners who have been contacted have not agreed to sell. We doubt that they will, since there are no more Davis Islands.

Towns said the island could be opened to deer hunting if the government bought it and he said there was a possibility of opening it to waterfowl hunting also. He added that it takes a number of years to build up a goose flock to stand hunting pressure.

While it could be ideal to convert this choice piece of wildlife country into a refuge, there have been at least two strong arguments presented that we are inclined to go along with.

A biologist pointed out to us that he doubted that Davis Island as a goose refuge could pull the big honkers 500 miles down the Mississippi River from the famous Horseshoe Lake in Illinois, which is a principal attraction for Canada geese.

But the best argument against the purchase is the apparent need for the federal government, if it is to purchase wetlands for waterfowl, to buy nesting grounds in the Dakotas for waterfowl. Louisiana has enough territory for waterfowl. All the Pelican State, like any other state, needs is the continuation of waterfowl production and a season to hunt.

We think the vast majority of hunters would rather see the government spend its money to develop nesting grounds and let Illinois and Missouri keep the Canada geese.

We'll take the mallards, if the government will spend its money where it's needed most — on nesting grounds and not Davis Island.

OUTDOOR EVENTS

There are two outdoor events coming up this week that sportsmen will be interested in.

On Tuesday night, at 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Hotel, two spokesmen of the Ouachita River Valley Association will outline the programs of their association.

Grayson Guthrie, the association president, of Monroe and H. K. Thatcher, the association executive vice-president, of Camden, Ark. are scheduled to be the special guests of the club.

Incidentally, Col. Warren S. Everett, chief Vicksburg engineer, of the U. S. Corps of Engineers declined an invitation to speak to the club on the 9 - foot channel project. He also declined to send a representative.

His reason was because the location of the Jonesville lock and dam is still undecided as far as the public is concerned.

Other than the remarks of Guthrie and Thatcher, the club meeting will feature an outdoor film, plus reports on the convention held last weekend at Alexandria and the pollution committee. Archers have a special invitation to attend the meeting.

The second event this week is the North Louisiana Retriever Club trial on the OZO Plantation five miles south of Monroe. The trial will open on Friday and run through Sunday.

Sportsmen, particularly duck and dove hunters, will get a chance to see some fine dogs in action. Four stakes are scheduled:

Derby, for dogs under two years of age; Qualifying, for dogs over two but with limited field trial experience; Amateur, for all age dogs run by an amateur handler; and the Open, for all age dogs run by an amateur or a professional.

The schedule is as follows: Qualifying, Friday, 8 a.m., Derby following the Qualifying; the Open, Saturday, 8 a.m., and the Amateur, on completion of Open, probably Sunday.

Biggest catch of the week and one of the biggest ever in this area was made by Russell Etheridge of Winnsboro. Russell, fishing in a pond on his father's farm near Winnsboro, landed a bass that went one ounce over eight pounds — 8-lbs., 1-oz. He caught it on a Red Worm.

Russell's catch came a few weeks ahead of the annual fishing contests, but he is going to record the big fish with the Louisiana Outdoor Writers Association.

If you catch a big one, let us know and we'll provide you with a report to fill out in the statewide effort by the LOWA.

On the fishing scene, bream in Black Bayou have begun to bite. Black Bayou fishermen having good luck this week included Chief Brittan, specs, and Johnny Danna and Sam Wilson on bass.

A local angler, Robert Thompson, landed a bass at Bussey that weighed five and three - quarter pounds. He caught the bass on March 17 — the same day that Russell landed his big one.

Bussey has been real good for bass and spec. Mrs. and Mrs. E. D. Massey and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Pennington caught the limit of spec there. Others were Clyde Mullin and Vernon Morgan, 40 spec, Billy Johnson and J. E. Johnson, 40 spec, and Kay Sivils and Faye Harrington, 23 spec and three bass.

Duke Yates Jr. has been catching bass at Bussey on the Blue Worms while getting the limit of bass were H. Grant, O. L. Russ, Claude Reynolds, Frank Freeman, E. P. Scott, B. R. and W. R. Gunter, Mrs. W. R. Griffin, Mrs. John Warren, Ben Thomas, J. H. Norris, Mrs. M. R. Ping, L. H. Brown, H. J. Pierce and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Harrison.

From Winnsboro, Mrs. W. A. Butler Jr. and Mrs. Ed Short caught limit of chinkapins at Lake St. John. Roy Montgomery, fishing with a Silver Spoon, landed 21 barfish at St. John.

At Saline Lake near Winnfield, George Williams of Vivian got the limit of bass on the Mitch Mac. Curtis Mitchell and Walt Durham landed the limit also.

From Lake Providence, James Harold Kruze caught eight bass on the Hell Diver in Lake Providence. W. P. Rushing landed six that weighed 17 pounds. Jim Henry Gilfoil landed three.

And here's another big bass. Leonard Kennedy landed one that weighed 7¼ pounds. He was fishing with a Hell Diver.

Mrs. Bill Cooper landed 14 white perch at Gassaway.

Houk Defends Maris, Says Yanks Not Split

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Manager Ralph Houk of the New York Yankees, speaking slowly and deliberately, defended his homer hitting outfielder, Roger Maris, Saturday and also denied reports the world champions were split into anti-Maris and pro-Maris groups.

"Maris is a team player, a good family man and a good man on this baseball club and I think he will bat in 141 runs again this season. Roger is A-1 as far as the players and I are concerned," he emphasized.

Maris has been feuding with various members of the press and Thursday refused to pose with Rogers Hornsby, Hall of Fame player who now is a coach with the New York Mets of the National League. Maris reportedly refused because Hornsby last fall said that the outfielder was not a good hitter even though he stroked 61 home runs.

"Let Hornsby take care of his ball club and I'll take care of mine," said Houk. "I'm sorry that Hornsby called Maris a busher (after the posing incident) and said he was not a good hitter.

"In my book any man who hits .267, drives in 140 runs and hits 61 home runs is a good hitter." Actually, Maris hit .269 last season and drove in 142 runs.

Houk said he had called the press conference without talking with Maris and added "that perhaps I took this thing too lightly at first."

Maris' only comment was that "I don't think Hornsby is so hot either."

Cathedral High Announces Next Football Slate

NATCHEZ, Miss (Special) — Coach Donald Alonzo, athletic director of the Cathedral High School, announces the 1962 Greenie football schedule and the opening of spring gridiron workouts.

The Greenies, who were runner-up to championship Liberty in the Tangiphoa Conference last season, will begin their spring work outs on April 15, according to Coach Alonzo, who was voted the "Coach of the Year" in the conference last season after his successful year.

Alonzo announced the school was adding Sicily Island, La., Tigers, a non-conference opponent, to their 10-game schedule for 1962. During the 1961 campaign the Green Wave played only nine games.

The new slate includes eight Tangipahoa Conference opponents. The opening game is slated for September 7 with the only other non-conference foe, the highly rated Vidalia La., Vikings, who last year defeated the Greenies and ten other teams in this area to annex the district championship and went on to play in the semi-finals of the state championship in Louisiana class B, losing only to Plain Dealing.

The Vidalia contest here will be the first of five home games to be played by the Greenies in 1962.

The complete schedule follows:

WANTED: DAVIS ISLAND

The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service wants to buy Davis Island in the Mississippi River near Tallulah to convert it into a game refuge, but negotiations with land owners have been unsuccessful so far.

This was confirmed to us Friday by W. L. Towns, the assistant regional director of the Fish & Wildlife Service at Atlanta, Ga.

For those who are not familiar with the island, it is composed of 20,000 acres of lush hunting territory located in the Mississippi River — 80 per cent in Mississippi and 20 per cent in Louisiana.

The island, named after Jefferson Davis who once had a home there, is the rave of deer hunters, who have killed some of the largest bucks in Louisiana and Mississippi on the island.

Towns explained that the federal agency has looked at the island as a potential refuge for a long period of time, but until recently there was not enough money available to buy it.

With funds from the sale of duck stamps and from appropriations made by Congress to buy wetland territories, the government is now in a position to buy the island.

Towns said the Fish & Wildlife Service wants the island to convert it into a refuge, principally for Canada geese. By doing so, the service hopes to pull the big honkers down from Illinois and Missouri.

Duck hunters know that Louisiana sees very few Canada geese anymore.

Towns also pointed out that the purchase of Davis Island has been designated as the No. 1 priority by the Mississippi Flyway Council, which is composed of wildlife representatives from each of the states located in the Mississippi Flyway.

Richard Yancey, the assistant director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, told us that Louisiana has declined to go along with the proposed purchase.

While the Mississippi Director John Camp was unavailable for comment, a spokesman for the Mississippi Game & Fish Commission at Jackson said he didn't think the Mississippi group had endorsed the purchase. But he was not sure.

Whether the Louisiana and Mississippi commissions endorse or oppose the purchase is not as important as the positions taken by the individual property owners on the island.

It's really up to them and from what Towns said the property owners who have been contacted have not agreed to sell. We doubt that they will, since there are no more Davis Islands.

Towns said the island could be opened to deer hunting if the government bought it and he said there was a possibility of opening it to waterfowl hunting also. He added that it takes a number of years to build up a goose flock to stand hunting pressure.

While it could be ideal to convert this choice piece of wildlife country into a refuge, there have been at least two strong arguments presented that we are inclined to go along with.

A biologist pointed out to us that he doubted that Davis Island as a goose refuge could pull the big honkers 500 miles down the Mississippi River from the famous Horseshoe Lake in Illinois, which is a principal attraction for Canada geese.

But the best argument against the purchase is the apparent need for the federal government, if it is to purchase wetlands for waterfowl, to buy nesting grounds in the Dakotas for waterfowl. Louisiana has enough territory for waterfowl. All the Pelican State, like any other state, needs is the continuation of waterfowl production and a season to hunt.

We think the vast majority of hunters would rather see the government spend its money to develop nesting grounds and let Illinois and Missouri keep the Canada geese.

We'll take the mallards, if the government will spend its money where it's needed most — on nesting grounds and not Davis Island.

OUTDOOR EVENTS

There are two outdoor events coming up this week that sportsmen will be interested in.

On Tuesday night, at 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Hotel, two spokesmen of the Ouachita River Valley Association will outline the programs of their association.

Grayson Guthrie, the association president, of Monroe and H. K. Thatcher, the association executive vice-president, of Camden, Ark. are scheduled to be the special guests of the club.

Incidentally, Col. Warren S. Everett, chief Vicksburg engineer, of the U. S. Corps of Engineers declined an invitation to speak to the club on the 9 - foot channel project. He also declined to send a representative.

His reason was because the location of the Jonesville lock and dam is still undecided as far as the public is concerned.

Other than the remarks of Guthrie and Thatcher, the club meeting will feature an outdoor film, plus reports on the convention held last weekend at Alexandria and the pollution committee. Archers have a special invitation to attend the meeting.

The second event this week is the North Louisiana Retriever Club trial on the OZO Plantation five miles south of Monroe. The trial will open on Friday and run through Sunday.

Sportsmen, particularly duck and dove hunters, will get a chance to see some fine dogs in action. Four stakes are scheduled:

Derby, for dogs under two years of age; Qualifying, for dogs over two but with limited field trial experience; Amateur, for all age dogs run by an amateur handler; and the Open, for all age dogs run by an amateur or a professional.

The schedule is as follows: Qualifying, Friday, 8 a.m., Derby following the Qualifying; the Open, Saturday, 8 a.m., and the Amateur, on completion of Open, probably Sunday.

IN 1960 Campaign

Klein Says JFK Aided By Secret

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's former press secretary said Saturday that Nixon's desire to keep the secret of Cuban invasion plans caused him to be "clubbed" by President Kennedy in the 1960 campaign.

Herbert G. Klein, press secretary for Nixon during the 1960 presidential campaign and now editor of the San Diego Union, said Nixon had wanted to make Cuban intervention a campaign issue but did not do so for security reason.

When Kennedy came out for Cuban intervention, Klein said, "the effect was that in a crucial period of the campaign Mr. Nixon was being clubbed with his own weapon. And, because he had a strong sense of his responsibility to protect security, he had no choice but to argue against Mr. Kennedy—and thus against a policy he previously originated himself."

He called it "a story we of the Nixon staff couldn't tell during the 1960 campaign."

"It is the story of the Cuban issue," he said, "which the former vice president has discussed briefly in his new book, 'Six Crises,' and which was disputed this past week by the President."

Klein said four members of Nixon's staff knew refugees were being trained for an assault upon Cuba.

"Frequently we debated among ourselves the handling of the Cuban issue within security bounds," Klein said. "We heard the rumor that the Kennedy staff feared the beach assault would take place before the election. We suspected this was the reason why, on Oct. 20, Mr. Kennedy proposed direct intervention.

"For the vice president and his staff, the angriest moments of the campaign took place on Oct. 20 on the eve of the fourth television debate between Nixon and Kennedy. We were in New York when Mr. Kennedy, late in the day, made a proposal which directly outlined the exact program which was being carried out—and which we had, for security reasons, kept secret.

"Here is what we thought had happened:

"First: On July 23 Allen Dulles, then head of the Central Intelligence Agency, and Mr. Kennedy had concurred in announcing that he had been briefed in depth, with particular emphasis on Cuba and Africa. Nothing was withheld, the two told reporters. And we knew that this was in accord with orders given Mr. Dulles by President Eisenhower.

"Second: Nixon had captured the initiative on the Cuban issue with his Miami statement urging a quarantine against Castro. And, in the best coordinated part of the campaign, the administration had followed with quick orders putting this into effect.

"It seemed obvious to us that Mr. Kennedy was striking back after realizing he was losing points at a crucial point of the campaign, was striking back with secret material he had been given at the Dulles briefing. The White House was queried and we were told Mr. Kennedy had been informed about the troop training. Others told us President Eisenhower was angry over the disclosure.

"In the light of what I know of happenings at that time, I was, of course, surprised last week at Mr. Dulles' statement which corroborates President Kennedy's position that he wasn't told about the troop training."

U.S. Seeking Solution To Laos Regime

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — W. Averell Harriman began a series of meetings with leaders of Laos Saturday in an attempt to find a solution to the political crisis in this Asian kingdom.

A few minutes after arriving from Thailand, the assistant U. S. secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs conferred with King Savang Vathana at the royal palace. They talked for two hours.

Then Harriman was the luncheon guest of Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, the deputy premier and pro-western strongman of the royal government who is resisting U. S. pressure to form a coalition government.

Phoumi told reporters a few moments after Harriman's arrival that an understanding could be reached with the U. S. official on the formation of a coalition cabinet in which the three Laotian factions— pro-Western, neutralist and pro-Communist would be represented. But he expressed hope that Harriman "will be ready to give new suggestions."

The United States, fearful that if the present crisis drags on longer the pro-Communist faction will eventually gain, has been pressuring the royal government to enter a coalition under neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma. But Phoumi has resisted, claiming Souvana is dominated by his half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong, the pro-Communist.

Harriman will resume his talks Sunday and is scheduled to depart later in the day.

Phoumi told reporters, "we do not fully agree to Souvanna," when asked if he was ready to change his position.

"We do not have to change our position because we and the United States are both fighting communism," he added.

Premier Prince Boun Oum tentatively agreed to a coalition with Souvanna as premier last year. But later his royal government insisted Souvanna was not really neutral, but pro-Communist. And Souvanna, a former premier, is reported ready to quit trying to form a regime acceptable to both sides in the cold war.

State Solon Appointment Questioned

BATON ROUGE (AP) — State Sen. W. J. Cleveland directed attention Saturday to what he said was the danger of a court challenge in the 1962 legislature because Gov. Jimmie Davis appointed one House member.

The Crowley senator, Senate finance chairman, voiced his personal belief executive appointments of lawmakers were wrong.

According to the state Constitution, "should a vacancy occur in either house, the governor shall order an election to fill such vacancy for the remainder of the term."

Cleveland, strong supporter of both the late Earl K. Long and Davis, referred to Davis' appointment of Mrs. John Lewis to succeed her husband, Rep. Lewis of Beauregard Parish, who died several months ago.

When Davis named Mrs. Lewis he emphasized a gubernatorial precedent had been set for such steps in former regimes.

Davis said he was acting "in accordance with the wishes of the majority of the people of Beauregard Parish."

What Davis apparently meant was that in a special election Mrs. Lewis would be selected by the people anyway.

The governor did call elections to fill other legislative vacancies.

Cleveland said he felt it was wrong when former Gov. Robert Kennon appointed Rep. Risley Triche of Assumption Parish in 1955, when Earl K. Long appointed Mrs. Mary Smith Gleason of Webster Parish in 1959, and when Davis named Mrs. Lewis.

The senator said he wanted to emphasize this point. "I believe if any major controversy in the House is decided by one vote, with Mrs. Lewis casting her vote, a court challenge on constitutional grounds could be made."

Long Opposes Giving Cubans U.S. Surpluses

WASHINGTON (Special) — Sen Russell B. Long (D-La.) said today he will oppose any attempt to give U.S. food surpluses to the Cuban people.

He denounced as "pretty silly" a statement by George McGovern, administrator of the Food for Peace Program, to ship surplus food to Cuba where food shortages forced Dictator Fidel Castro to issue ration books to all citizens this week.

Long said in a prepared radio speech there is no way to keep the food donations from being used to promote Castro's regime. "Castro will tell them it shows that he has standing and can do things for them and it tends to help intrench and support Communism, Long stated:"

He added: "I am sorry it has got to be that way, but I do not think we ought to try to make Communism more palatable and more desirable for the people.

"I think we ought to let them suffer under it to realize what a bad break they got when they got Castro in there—"

He indicated that the Russians should be the ones to supply needed food in Cuba, because that is the country the Cubans 'are playing ball with."

On the poll tax issue now before the Senate, Long said, "He will support passage of a constitutional amendment to abolish the voting tax in federal elections.

Long recalled that his father, Huey Long, had led the fight in Louisiana to abolish the poll tax. He said the tax is "outdated."

The Senator stated that passage of the constitutional amendment by Congress would mean that it would be put to a vote in the 50 states and would require approval by 38 of them to be come effective. This procedure, he said, would permit the states to pass on the proposal.

He pointed out that the amendment is ratified would still leave states the power to impose a poll tax on elections for Governor and most other state and local offices. He said he is hopeful no filibuster develops to prevent passage in the Senate.

Soviet, West To Negotiate Some Issues

GENEVA (AP) — Russia and the West were reported Saturday preparing to negotiate several limited accords designed to reduce the risk of nuclear war.

Qualified informants said each side is expected to come up at the 17-nation disarmament talks here next week—possibly Tuesday—with various firm proposals ranging from action to stop the spread of weapons to barring the use of outer space for war purposes.

Agreement on some of these measures—which would not affect basic strategic postures of East or West—could dispel part of the gloom that has been created by big power disagreements on other key issues, including the problems of Berlin and banning nuclear tests.

Progress in these areas in certain circumstances also could brighten prospects of a summit meeting in April or May.

There were firm reports that the Western powers have set out to persuade France to take up her vacant seat at the conference table here. Some Western statesmen were portrayed as hopeful French President Charles de Gaulle soon will change his mind about staying out of the talks, which he considers mistakenly organized.

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk has arranged tentatively to fly back to Washington Monday or Tuesday and it seemed that only some sudden switch by Premier Khrushchev in the next 48 hours would cause Rusk to change his plans.

Few Western authorities would bet on the chances of any sort of shift in Moscow's tough position but it was noted that Soviet negotiators, when they do give ground, retreat only at the last possible minute.

Rusk may be expected to report to President Kennedy in Washington along these broad lines:

1. He and Britain's Lord Home have repeatedly stressed to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko the resolve of the West to stand fast on their vital rights in Berlin.

2. At the same time they have emphasized to the Russians the readiness of the West to settle the crisis gripping the divided city. Secret talks still are going on, with the Russians giving no sign that they want to break off.

3. The eight middle-road, or uncommitted, nations attending the 11-day-old disarmament conference are showing increasing awareness of the factors which led the United States to slate a series of nuclear tests in the atmosphere next month.

4. The disarmament conference as a whole, after some procedural snarls, finally seems ready to move along reasonly organized negotiating tracks.

Editor Attending Briefing Session

Jack Gates, executive editor of the News-Star—World, is in Washington to attend a foreign relations briefing conference.

The conference, third in a series of special briefings for newsmen throughout the nation, will begin Monday morning.

Gates is expected to return to Monroe either Thursday or Friday.

POWER IN ANTARCTIC

IQ
What's your child's physical IQ?

Chances are it doesn't measure up. The fact is that almost half of our youngsters today lack the strength and agility to pass a simple physical achievement test.

The remedy? More emphasis on vigorous physical activity. At least 15 minutes of every daily physical education period devoted to vigorous body-building exercise.

What to do? At your next PTA meeting, urge the adoption of a program that will give all youngsters a chance to develop their bodies.

It could be the program of The President's Council on Youth Fitness—or a similar one—easy to administer at little cost to your school. Act!

IN 1960 Campaign

Klein Says JFK Aided By Secret

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's former press secretary said Saturday that Nixon's desire to keep the secret of Cuban invasion plans caused him to be "clubbed" by President Kennedy in the 1960 campaign.

Herbert G. Klein, press secretary for Nixon during the 1960 presidential campaign and now editor of the San Diego Union, said Nixon had wanted to make Cuban intervention a campaign issue but did not do so for security reason.

When Kennedy came out for Cuban intervention, Klein said, "the effect was that in a crucial period of the campaign Mr. Nixon was being clubbed with his own weapon. And, because he had a strong sense of his responsibility to protect security, he had no choice but to argue against Mr. Kennedy—and thus against a policy he previously originated himself."

He called it "a story we of the Nixon staff couldn't tell during the 1960 campaign."

"It is the story of the Cuban issue," he said, "which the former vice president has discussed briefly in his new book, 'Six Crises,' and which was disputed this past week by the President."

Klein said four members of Nixon's staff knew refugees were being trained for an assault upon Cuba.

"Frequently we debated among ourselves the handling of the Cuban issue within security bounds," Klein said. "We heard the rumor that the Kennedy staff feared the beach assault would take place before the election. We suspected this was the reason why, on Oct. 20, Mr. Kennedy proposed direct intervention.

"For the vice president and his staff, the angriest moments of the campaign took place on Oct. 20 on the eve of the fourth television debate (between Nixon and Kennedy). We were in New York when Mr. Kennedy, late in the day, made a proposal which directly outlined the exact program which was being carried out—and which we had, for security reasons, kept secret.

"Here is what we thought had happened:

"First: On July 23 Allen Dulles, then head of the Central Intelligence Agency, and Mr. Kennedy had concurred in announcing that he had been briefed in depth, with particular emphasis on Cuba and Africa. Nothing was withheld, the two told reporters. And we knew that this was in accord with orders given Mr. Dulles by President Eisenhower.

"Second: Nixon had captured the initiative on the Cuban issue with his Miami statement urging a quarantine against Castro. And, in the best coordinated part of the campaign, the administration had followed with quick orders putting this into effect.

"It seemed obvious to us that Mr. Kennedy was striking back after realizing he was losing points at a crucial point of the campaign, was striking back with secret material he had been given at the Dulles briefing. The White House was queried and we were told Mr. Kennedy had been informed about the troop training. Others told us President Eisenhower was angry over the disclosure.

"In the light of what I know of happenings at that time, I was, of course, surprised last week at Mr. Dulles' statement which corroborates President Kennedy's position that he wasn't told about the troop training."

U.S. Seeking Solution To Laos Regime

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — W. Averell Harriman began a series of meetings with leaders of Laos Saturday in an attempt to find a solution to the political crisis in this Asian kingdom.

A few minutes after arriving from Thailand, the assistant U. S. secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs conferred with King Savang Vathana at the royal palace. They talked for two hours.

Then Harriman was the luncheon guest of Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, the deputy premier and prowestern strongman of the royal government who is resisting U. S. pressure to form a coalition government.

Phoumi told reporters a few moments after Harriman's arrival that an understanding could be reached with the U. S. official on the formation of a coalition cabinet in which the three Laotian factions— pro-Western, neutralist and pro-Communist would be represented. But he expressed hope that Harriman "will be ready to give new suggestions."

The United States, fearful that if the present crisis drags on longer the pro-Communist faction will eventually gain, has been pressuring the royal government to enter a coalition under neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma. But Phoumi has resisted, claiming Souvana is dominated by his half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong, the pro-Communist.

Harriman will resume his talks Sunday and is scheduled to depart later in the day.

Phoumi told reporters, "we do not fully agree to Souvanna," when asked if he was ready to change his position.

"We do not have to change our position because we and the United States are both fighting communism," he added.

Premier Prince Boun Oum tentatively agreed to a coalition with Souvanna as premier last year. But later his royal government insisted Souvanna was not really neutral, but pro-Communist. And Souvanna, a former premier, is reported ready to quit trying to form a regime acceptable to both sides in the cold war.

State Solon Appointment Questioned

BATON ROUGE (AP) — State Sen. W. J. Cleveland directed attention Saturday to what he said was the danger of a court challenge in the 1962 legislature because Gov. Jimmie Davis appointed one House member.

The Crowley senator, Senate finance chairman, voiced his personal belief executive appointments of lawmakers were wrong.

According to the state Constitution, "should a vacancy occur in either house, the governor shall order an election to fill such vacancy for the remainder of the term."

Cleveland, strong supporter of both the late Earl K. Long and Davis, referred to Davis' appointment of Mrs. John Lewis to succeed her husband, Rep. Lewis of Beauregard Parish, who died several months ago.

When Davis named Mrs. Lewis he emphasized a gubernatorial precedent had been set for such steps in former regimes.

Davis said he was acting "in accordance with the wishes of the majority of the people of Beauregard Parish."

What Davis apparently meant was that in a special election Mrs. Lewis would be selected by the people anyway.

The governor did call elections to fill other legislative vacancies.

Cleveland said he felt it was wrong when former Gov. Robert Kennon appointed Rep. Risley Triche of Assumption Parish in 1955, when Earl K. Long appointed Mrs. Mary Smith Gleason of Webster Parish in 1959, and when Davis named Mrs. Lewis.

The senator said he wanted to emphasize this point: "I believe if any major controversy in the House is decided by one vote, with Mrs. Lewis casting her vote, a court challenge on constitutional grounds could be made."

Long Opposes Giving Cubans U.S. Surpluses

WASHINGTON (Special)— Sen. Russell B. Long (D) La. said today he will oppose any attempt to give U.S. food surpluses to the Cuban people.

He denounced as "pretty silly" a statement by George McGovern, administrator of the Food for Peace Program, to ship surplus food to Cuba where food shortages forced Dictator Fidel Castro to issue ration books to all citizens this week.

Long said in a prepared radio speech there is no way to keep the food donations from being used to promote Castro's regime. "Castro will tell them it shows that he has standing and can do things for them and it tends to help intrench and support Communism, Long stated:"

He added: "I am sorry it has got to be that way, but I do not think we ought to try to make Communism more palatable and more desirable for the people.

"I think we ought to let them suffer under it to realize what a bad break they got when they got Castro in there—"

He indicated that the Russians should be the ones to supply needed food in Cuba, because that is the country the Cubans 'are playing ball with."

On the poll tax issue now before the Senate, Long said, "He will support passage of a constitutional amendment to abolish the voting tax in federal elections.

Long recalled that his father, Huey Long, had led the fight in Louisiana to abolish the poll tax. He said the tax is "outdated."

The Senator stated that passage of the constitutional amendment by Congress would mean that it would be put to a vote in the 50 states and would require approval by 38 of them to be come effective. This procedure, he said, would permit the states to pass on the proposal.

He pointed out that the amendment is ratified would still leave states the power to impose a poll tax on elections for Governor and most other state and local offices. He said he is hopeful no filibuster develops to prevent passage in the Senate.

Soviet, West To Negotiate Some Issues

GENEVA (AP) — Russia and the West were reported Saturday preparing to negotiate several limited accords designed to reduce the risk of nuclear war.

Qualified informants said each side is expected to come up at the 17-nation disarmament talks here next week—possibly Tuesday—with various firm propoposals ranging from action to stop the spread of weapons to barring the use of outer space for war purposes.

Agreement on some of these measures—which would not affect basic strategic postures of East or West—could dispel part of the gloom that has been created by big power disagreements on other key issues, including the problems of Berlin and banning nuclear tests.

Progress in these areas in certain circumstances also could brighten prospects of a summit meeting in April or May.

There were firm reports that the Western powers have set out to persuade France to take up her vacant seat at the conference table here. Some Western statesmen were portrayed as hopeful French President Charles de Gaulle soon will change his mind about staying out of the talks, which he considers mistakenly organized.

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk has arranged tentatively to fly back to Washington Monday or Tuesday and it seemed that only some sudden switch by Premier Khrushchev in the next 48 hours would cause Rusk to change his plans.

Few Western authorities would bet on the chances of any sort of shift in Moscow's tough position but it was noted that Soviet negotiators, when they do give ground, retreat only at the last possible minute.

Rusk may be expected to report to President Kennedy in Washington along these broad lines:

1. He and Britain's Lord Home have repeatedly stressed to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko the resolve of the West to stand fast on their vital rights in Berlin.

2. At the same time they have emphasized to the Russians the readiness of the West to settle the crisis gripping the divided city. Secret talks still are going on, with the Russians giving no sign that they want to break off.

3. The eight middle-road, or uncommitted, nations attending the 11-day-old disarmament conference are showing increasing awareness of the factors which led the United States to slate a series of nuclear tests in the atmosphere next month.

4. The disarmament conference as a whole, after some procedural snarls, finally seems ready to move along reasonly organized negotiating tracks.

Editor Attending Briefing Session

Jack Gates, executive editor of the News-Star—World, is in Washington to attend a foreign relations briefing conference.

The conference, third in a series of special briefings for newsmen throughout the nation, will begin Monday morning.

Gates is expected to return to Monroe either Thursday or Friday.

Marilyn Joan Magruder, Mr. Pickard Wed In First Presbyterian Church

In a double ring ceremony solemnized at 3 p.m. Saturday, March 24 in the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe, Miss Marilyn Joan Magruder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Deville Magruder, Oakwood Drive, became the bride of John Copeland Pickard Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. John C. Pickard of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Dr. W. H. McFadden performed the ceremony before a large standard of white gladioli and white Majestic daisies, against a background of four seven-branched candelabra holding white tapers. Two arrangements of Louisiana magnolia foliage banked either side of the steps leading to the altar.

A concert of traditional nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Ruby McIlvaine, organist, who also accompanied Davis Bingham as he sang "Zueignung," (Devotion) by Richard Strauss.

Given in marraige by her father the bride wore a princess silhouette gown of white peau de soie, styled with long pointed sleeves and bateau neckline scalloped in Rosepoint lace. Appliques of reembroidered Rosepoint lace and pearl beads accented the bodice and skirt, which terminated in a full court train from a cluster of self - fabric roses. Her fingertip tiered veil of imported illusion was held in place by a pillbox of peau de soie and lace, richly embroidered with tiny seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white bridal roses and lily of the valley.

MAID OF HONOR

Miss Leah Jill Magruder was maid of honor and only attendant for her sister. She wore a ballerina length gown of sunset gold peau de soie, styled with scoop neckline, fitted bodice and bell shaped skirt with side - swept drape and Obi sash panels in back. Completing her costume were matching gold slippers and whimsey headdress. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses with variegated miniature ivy.

Benjamin M. Pickard, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Don D. Magruder, brother of the bride; Phillip Eastman, Oklahoma City; C. David Barrett of Ryan, Okla., and Richard Grider, Monroe.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Magruder was wearing a slim - skirted gown with softly draped tunic of mint green peau de soie with matching slippers. Her headdress was a whimsey of matching fabric rose and tulle and her corsage was of yellow roses. Mrs. Pickard, mother of the bridegroom, wore a faun-colored embroidered silk taffeta sheath with matching jacket, beige kid gloves and matching silk shoes. Her corsage was also of yellow roses

RECEPTION

Following the exchange of vows a reception was held in the Reception Hall of the church. Centering the punch table was an antique angelabra holding white stock and Majestic daisies, flanked by a pair of antique candelabra matching the container A memory candle in a hurricane globe graced the bride's book table where Mrs. John Pierpont and Mrs. R. B. Bailey registered guests.

Mrs. George Thomas Walker served the cake, assisted by Mrs. C. S. Foster, Mrs. B. Frank Maxwell presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Jack W. McDowell poured coffee. Tea girls were Miss Judy Ladner, Miss Sandra Brown, Miss Diane Dunn and Miss Ellen Walker and rice bags were distributed by Miss Marilyn Maxwell, Miss Carolyn Maxwell, Miss Martha Maxwell and Miss Susan Dunn. John Cale, at the piano, provided background music throughout the reception.

MEXICO TRIP

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Mexico City, Acapulco and Cuernavaco, Mexico, the bride donned a yellow two piece wool suit, featuring a pencil slim skirt and long sleeved overblouse. She wore black kid accessories, white gloves and white veil whimsey with a corsage of white Japhet orchids. The couple will establish a home in Oklahoma City.

The bride was graduated from Neville High School and Louisiana State University, where she received her B. A. degree. She is a member of Kappa Delta sorority. Mr. Pickard graduated from Culver Military Academy, Oklahoma University, Oklahoma City University and also attended the Indiana University Graduate School

Chic French

When leather gloves are marked lavable, that's simply French for washable. The French are as practical as they are chic!

On Dit'

by Denise

Hey, there, readers with the wanderlust. . .Have you considered the wonders at our doorstep? Monroe is strategically situated in the center of a circle of towns interesting to visit and near enough for a week-end trip. One does not need a long summer vacation to sample the delights of Hot Springs, New Orleans, Dallas.

At this time of year thoughts turn to an even closer spot of endless charm, Natchez with its annual Pilgrimage attended by thousands of visitors from every state and many foreign countries. Thirty homes built between 1790 and 1850 are open for the Pilgrimage, which began March 3 and will continue through April 1. To complete tours to all the houses requires three days, as there are two tours of five houses each day, but even to spend the day in the city on the bluff is to gain an appreciation of the town's delights.

Your reporter visited Natchez last weekend. Our party was fortunate in having reservations for Saturday night at Stanton Hall. This, one was of the most palatial homes in Natchez, is owned by the Pilgrimage Garden Club, and is open throughout the year as well as during March. The imposing entrance opens into a wide center hall extending through the house, with double parlors and music room on the right; library, stairs and dining room on the left. Hand-carved mantels of Carrara marble, enormous gold - leaf mirrors, bronze chandeliers, brought by chartered ship from Europe in 1851, are still in place. Garden club members have furnished the house with exquisite antique furniture.

Upstairs, spacious bedrooms are available for overnight guests throughout the year. We slept in beautiful old four - post beds in rooms furnished with handsome antiques. Morning coffee is served guests in their rooms.

Evening entertainment during the month of Pilgrimage consists of two entirely different types of programs. On Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday nights, "Highway to Heaven", a program of Negro spirituals is presented at Beulah Baptist Church.

On Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, the brilliant Confederate pageant is seen at City Auditorium. Scenes of the Old South are depicted by Natchez citizens of all ages, beautifully costumed in authentic dress of the period. The evening closes with the presentations of the king and queen and their Confederate court. Last Saturday night the royalty of Natchez Garden Club, King HUGH STAHLMAN III and Queen MARY DAIGUE GADBOIS, yielded place for the remainder of the month to the Pilgrimage club king and queen, N. LESLIE CARPENTER and MARTHA BAHIN HOOTSELL. (Martha, incidentally, is niece of Monroe's own ELIZABETH ABINGTON.)

Houses which were on tour last weekend included, on Saturday afternoon; Rosalie, The Parsonage, Lansdowne, Mistletoe, and Mount Repose. Rosalie, which was built in 1820, is now the state shrine of Mississippi's Daughters of the American Revolution. This house was used as headquarters of the Union Army during the War between the States, and General Grant's bedroom is pointed out by the hostesses. The ground - level playroom features an unusual collection of dolls and toys of the antebellum period. In the dining room is displayed rose - banded Rose du Barry china, each piece with a different design. The set is almost entirely complete, from soup tureen to egg cups.

Still in the possession fo the builder's descendants, Lansdowne is a classically simple plantation house, beautifully furnished with original pieces as well as treasures added through the years. In the drawing room are seen gold-leaf cornices, the original French handblocked wallpaper, Aubusson rug and French rosewood furniture. Double doors open into the banquet hall with its matched mahogany sideboard, table, serving table, and twenty-four chairs.

In the front bedroom at LANSDOWNE is a set of Mallard hand-carved rosewood, the bed ornately carved in a grape and flower motif. There are a cheval mirror, enormous rosewood armoire, and a "duchesse" dressing table with marble top and carved legs.

Les formal, but completely charming is Mistletoe, built in 1807 in Mississippi colonial style and utilizing cypress flooring and panelling, as well as other native woods. One enters through a double door surmounted with fanlight into a hall extending through the house to a similar door which gives onto the old back gallery, now enclosed as a family room. Parlor and library, panelled in natural cypress, are to the left, with bedrooms to the right of the hall. An old early American settle stands in the corner near the fireplace in the front bedroom. An unusual painted cornice tops the Hepplewhite bed.

The Parsonage is a raised brick building, with a wide flight of steps mounting to a gallery commanding a view of the Mississippi and Louisiana beyond. The center entrance hall is connected by double doors with a wider hall which is furnished as a library. Bedrooms are to the right of the entrance, parlor to the left. Sliding doors open from parlor to dining room with its oval black walnut table and 200 piece set of Sevres china in Rose Pompadour design.

Very early American pieces are seen in the back bedroom. A pair of quaint twin beds utilize pegs and rope instead of springs. Other furnishings include chests dating from 1780, a simple mahogany armoire, and a square - pegged cradle.

Serene and lovely as its name, Mount Repose stands in the Pine Ridge neighborhood on a small rise facing a grove of gnarled live oaks. Long galleries extend across both stories of the center section, which is flanked by one - storied wings. Most historic heirloom to be seen here is a cherry desk which belonged to an early member of the family who defended Aaron Burr. Papers connected with the famous trial were stored in this desk . . . . White china, gold - banded and marked with the name of the house, was used at Mount Repose in early years. A number of pieces which disappeared during the War between the States were later discovered in a New Orleans pawnshop.

On Sunday morning's tour we visited The Elms, Hawthorne, Longwood, Glouscester, and Connelly's Tavern. Built in 1782, the Elms was a square structure surrounded by wide galleries on both floors. A beautiful wrought iron spiral stairway connected the galleries. In 1856 an annex was constructed, enclosing the stairs and adding the house an old - fashioned parlor downstairs and a master bedroom and dressing room above. Gardens at the Elms are particularly interesting, incorporating a summer house and ruined Spanish arch as well as many varieties of flowers and shrubs.

Longwood, a wierd and ghostly edifice, is one to delight the children. Construction was halted at the outbreak of the War Between the States, and with the exception of the first floor, the house was never completed. On the upper floors, one may follow the architect's plans and examine the carefully, built brick niches, designed to hold statuary in the rotunda and on stair landings. Arched fireplaces, planned for more than thirty rooms, have been bricked up.

No exact date has been set for erection of Hawthorne, whose galleries, fan - lighted doors and sloping roof - line echo traditional plantation architecture. One enters through an exquuisitely panelled front door, surrounded by side and fan lights of blown glass, to find doors at each side duplicating those at front and back of the hall. Old-time candle shelves provide for extra illumination at each fan light. Living room is to the left; dining room at the right, with bedrooms behind. The master bedrooms feature a massive half - testered rosewood bed with matching dresser and armoire. A dainty walnut four - post bed with matching bureau is used in a child's bedroom, along with an unusual washstand, only piece of its kind in Natchez.

Towering Corinthian columns uphold the classic portico of Gloucester, built prior to 1803. Unusual architectural features are the octagonal extremeties of the house and twin entrances at each end of the portico. These open into hallways with graceful stairways. Connecting these halls and running parallel to the portico is a corridor opening into each with an arch. The library is behind this corridor.

A large drawing room occupies the Western end of the house. Items of particular interest in this room include the black African marble mantel piece, topped by a wonderful old French mirror. At the opposite end of the house is the large octagonal dining room, with its crystal chandelier and collection of Sheffield silver. We particularly noted a silver berry bowl with Bristol blue liner. Many fine paintings are noted throughout this house.

Thus is merely a sampling there are four more tours, each as fascinating as these two. Let us not lag behind those who come from afar to see interesting sights we have slighted because of their very nearness. At evening pageants, we heard welcomes extended to CLARE WILLIAMSON, vice - chairman of the Republican national committee from St. Petersburg, Florida, students from Miss McGehee's school in New Orleans, and a busload of West Coast Garden Club members on a spring tour of the South.

For our poem today, Archibald Mac Leish's lines, based on a phrase of Apollinaire

Our history is grave noble and tragic
We trusted the look of the sun on the green leaves
We built our towns of stone with enduring ornaments
We worked the hard flint for basins of water
We believed in the feel of the earth under us
We planted corn grapes apple-trees rhubarb
Nevertheless we knew others had died
Everything we have done has been faithful and dangerous
We fought at the dikes in the bright sun for the pride of it
We beat drums and marched with music and laughter
Our history is grave noble and tragic
Many of us have died and are not remembered
Many cities are gone and their channels broken
We have lived a long time in this land and with honor

Pickard of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Dr. W. H. McFadden performed the ceremony before a large standard of white gladioli and white Majestic daisies, against a background of four seven-branched candelabra holding white tapers. Two arrangements of Louisiana magnolia foliage banked either side of the steps leading to the altar.

A concert of traditional nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Ruby McIlvaine, organist, who also accompanied Davis Bingham as he sang "Zueignung," (Devotion) by Richard Strauss.

Given in marraige by her father the bride wore a princess silhouette gown of white peau de soie, styled with long pointed sleeves and bateau neckline scalloped in Rosepoint lace. Appliques of reembroidered Rosepoint lace and pearl beads accented the bodice and skirt, which terminated in a full court train from a cluster of self - fabric roses. Her fingertip tiered veil of imported illusion was held in place by a pillbox of peau de soie and lace, richly embroidered with tiny seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white bridal roses and lily of the valley.

MAID OF HONOR

Miss Leah Jill Magruder was maid of honor and only attendant for her sister. She wore a ballerina length gown of sunset gold peau de soie, styled with scoop neckline, fitted bodice and bell shaped skirt with side - swept drape and Obi sash panels in back. Completing her costume were matching gold slippers and whimsey headdress. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses with variegated miniature ivy.

Benjamin M. Pickard, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Don D. Magruder, brother of the bride; Phillip Eastman, Oklahoma City; C. David Barrett of Ryan, Okla., and Richard Grider, Monroe.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Magruder was wearing a slim - skirted gown with softly draped tunic of mint green peau de soie with matching slippers. Her headdress was a whimsey of matching fabric rose and tulle and her corsage was of yellow roses. Mrs. Pickard, mother of the bridegroom, wore a faun-colored embroidered silk taffeta sheath with matching jacket, beige kid gloves and matching silk shoes. Her corsage was also of yellow roses.

RECEPTION

Following the exchange of vows a reception was held in the Reception Hall of the church. Centering the punch table was an antique angelabra holding white stock and Majestic daisies, flanked by a pair of antique candelabra matching the container. A memory candle in a hurricane globe graced the bride's book table where Mrs. John Pierpont and Mrs. R. B. Bailey registered guests.

Mrs. George Thomas Walker served the cake, assisted by Mrs. C. S. Foster. Mrs. B. Frank Maxwell presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Jack W. McDowell poured coffee. Tea girls were Miss Judy Ladner, Miss Sandra Brown, Miss Diane Dunn and Miss Ellen Walker and rice bags were distributed by Miss Marilyn Maxwell, Miss Carolyn Maxwell, Miss Martha Maxwell and Miss Susan Dunn. John Cale, at the piano, provided background music throughout the reception.

MEXICO TRIP

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Mexico City, Acapulco and Cuernavaco, Mexico, the bride donned a yellow two piece wool suit, featuring a pencil slim skirt and long sleeved overblouse. She wore black kid accessories, white gloves and white veil whimsey with a corsage of white Japhet orchids. The couple will establish a home in Oklahoma City.

The bride was graduated from Neville High School and Louisiana State University, where she received her B. A. degree. She is a member of Kappa Delta sorority. Mr. Pickard graduated from Culver Military Academy, Oklahoma University, Oklahoma City University and also attended the Indiana University Graduate School.

Hey, there, readers with the wanderlust. . .Have you considered the wonders at our doorstep? Monroe is strategically situated in the center of a circle of towns interesting to visit and near enough for a week-end trip. One does not need a long summer vacation to sample the delights of Hot Springs, New Orleans, Dallas.

At this time of year thoughts turn to an even closer spot of endless charm, Natchez with its annual Pilgrimage attended by thousands of visitors from every state and many foreign countries. Thirty homes built between 1790 and 1850 are open for the Pilgrimage, which began March 3 and will continue through April 1. To complete tours to all the houses requires three days, as there are two tours of five houses each day, but even to spend the day in the city on the bluff is to gain an appreciation of the town's delights.

Your reporter visited Natchez last weekend. Our party was fortunate in having reservations for Saturday night at Stanton Hall. This, one was of the most palatial homes in Natchez, is owned by the Pilgrimage Garden Club, and is open throughout the year as well as during March. The imposing entrance opens into a wide center hall extending through the house, with double parlors and music room on the right; library, stairs and dining room on the left. Hand-carved mantels of Carrara marble, enormous gold - leaf mirrors, bronze chandeliers, brought by chartered ship from Europe in 1851, are still in place. Garden club members have furnished the house with exquisite antique furniture.

Upstairs, spacious bedrooms are available for overnight guests throughout the year. We slept in beautiful old four - post beds in rooms furnished with handsome antiques. Morning coffee is served guests in their rooms.

Evening entertainment during the month of Pilgrimage consists of two entirely different types of programs. On Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday nights, "Highway to Heaven", a program of Negro spiritiuals is presented at Beulah Baptist Church.

On Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, the brilliant Confederate pageant is seen at City Auditorium. Scenes of the Old South are depicted by Natchez citizens of all ages, beautifully costumed in authentic dress of the period. The evening closes with the presentations of the king and queen and their Confederate court. Last Saturday night the royalty of Natchez Garden Club, King HUGH STAHLMAN III and Queen MARY DAIGUE GADBOIS, yielded place for the remainder of the month to the Pilgrimage club king and queen, N. LESLIE CARPENTER and MARTHA BAHIN HOOTSELL. (Martha, incidentally, is niece of Monroe's own ELIZABETH ABINGTON.)

Houses which were on tour last weekend included, on Saturday afternoon; Rosalie, The Parsonage, Lansdowne, Mistletoe, and Mount Repose. Rosalie, which was built in 1820, is now the state shrine of Mississippi's Daughters of the American Revolution. This house was used as headquarters of the Union Army during the War between the States, and General Grant's bedroom is pointed out by the hostesses. The ground - level playroom features an unusual collection of dolls and toys of the antebellum period. In the dining room is displayed rose - banded Rose du Barry china, each piece with a different design. The set is almost entirely complete, from soup tureen to egg cups.

Still in the possession fo the builder's descendants, Lansdowne is a classically simple plantation house, beautifully furnished with original pieces as well as treasures added through the years. In the drawing room are seen gold-leaf cornices, the original French handblocked wallpaper, Aubusson rug and French rosewood furniture. Double doors open into the banquet hall with its matched mahogany sideboard, table, serving table, and twenty-four chairs.

In the front bedroom at LANSDOWNE is a set of Mallard hand-carved rosewood, the bed ornately carved in a grape and flower motif. There are a cheval mirror, enormous rosewood armoire, and a "duchesse" dressing table with marble top and carved legs.

Les formal, but completely charming is Mistletoe, built in 1807 in Mississippi colonial style and utilizing cypress flooring and panelling, as well as other native woods. One enters through a double door surmounted with fanlight into a hall extending through the house to a similar door which gives onto the old back gallery, now enclosed as a family room. Parlor and library, panelled in natural cypress, are to the left, with bedrooms to the right of the hall. An old early American settle stands in the corner near the fireplace in the front bedroom. An unusual painted cornice tops the Hepplewhite bed.

The Parsonage is a raised brick building, with a wide flight of steps mounting to a gallery commanding a view of the Mississippi and Louisiana beyond. The center entrance hall is connected by double doors with a wider hall which is furnished as a library. Bedrooms are to the right of the entrance, parlor to the left. Sliding doors open from parlor to dining room with its oval black walnut table and 200 piece set of Sevres china in Rose Pompadour design.

Very early American pieces are seen in the back bedroom. A pair of quaint twin beds utilize pegs and rope instead of springs. Other furnishings include chests dating from 1780, a simple mahogany armoire, and a square - pegged cradle.

Serene and lovely as its name, Mount Repose stands in the Pine Ridge neighborhood on a small rise facing a grove of gnarled live oaks. Long galleries extend across both stories of the center section, which is flanked by one - storied wings. Most historic heirloom to be seen here is a cherry desk which belonged to an early member of the family who defended Aaron Burr. Papers connected with the famous trial were stored in this desk . . . . White china, gold - banded and marked with the name of the house, was used at Mount Repose in early years. A number of pieces which disappeared during the War between the States were later discovered in a New Orleans pawnshop.

On Sunday morning's tour we visited The Elms, Hawthorne, Longwood, Glouscester, and Connelly's Tavern. Built in 1782, the Elms was a square structure surrounded by wide galleries on both floors. A beautiful wrought iron spiral stairway connected the galleries. In 1856 an annex was constructed, enclosing the stairs and adding the house an old - fashioned parlor downstairs and a master bedroom and dressing room above. Gardens at the Elms are particularly interesting, incorporating a summer house and ruined Spanish arch as well as many varieties of flowers and shrubs.

Longwood, a wierd and ghostly edifice, is one to delight the children. Construction was halted at the outbreak of the War Between the States, and with the exception of the first floor, the house was never completed. On the upper floors, one may follow the architect's plans and examine the carefully, built brick niches, designed to hold statuary in the rotunda and on stair landings. Arched fireplaces, planned for more than thirty rooms, have been bricked up.

No exact date has been set for erection of Hawthorne, whose galleries, fan - lighted doors and sloping roof - line echo traditional plantation architecture. One enters through an exquuisitely panelled front door, surrounded by side and fan lights of blown glass, to find doors at each side duplicating those at front and back of the hall. Old-time candle shelves provide for extra illumination at each fanlight. Living room is to the left, dining room at the right, with bedrooms behind. The master bedrooms feature a massive half - testered rosewood bed with matching dresser and armoire. A dainty walnut four - post bed with matching bureau is used in a child's bedroom, along with an unusual washstand, only piece of its kind in Natchez.

Towering Corinthian columns uphold the classic portico of Gloucester, built prior to 1803. Unusual architectural features are the octagonal extremeties of the house and twin entrances at each end of the portico. These open into hallways with graceful stairways. Connecting these halls and running parallel to the portico is a corridor opening into each with an arch. The library is behind this corridor.

A large drawing room occupies the Western end of the house. Items of particular interest in this room include the black African marble mantel piece, topped by a wonderful old French mirror. At the opposite end of the house is the large octagonal dining room, with its crystal chandelier and collection of Sheffield silver. We particularly noted a silver berry bowl with Bristol blue liner. Many fine paintings are noted throughout this house.

This is merely a sampling: there are four more tours, each as fascinating as these two. Let us not lag behind those who come from afar to see interesting sights we have slighted because of their very nearness. At evening pageants, we heard welcomes extended to CLARE WILLIAMSON, vice - chairman of the Republican national committee from St. Petersburg, Florida; students from Miss McGehee's school in New Orleans; and a busload of West Coast Garden Club members on a spring tour of the South.

For our peom today, Archibald Mac Leish's lines, based on a phrase of Apollinaire:

Our history is grave noble and tragic
We trusted the look of the sun on the green leaves
We built our towns of stone with enduring ornaments
We worked the hard flint for basins of water
We believed in the feel of the earth under us
We planted corn grapes apple-trees rhubarb
Nevertheless we knew others had died
Everything we have done has been faithful and dangerous
We fought at the dikes in the bright sun for the pride of it
We beat drums and marched with music and laughter
Our history is grave noble and tragic
Many of us have died and are not remembered
Many cities are gone and their channels broken
We have lived a long time in this land and with honor

Martin-Rose Vows Read In Candlelight

In a candlelight ceremony at the New Prospect Baptist Church near Pioneer, Miss Barbara Ann Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Rose Sr., of Pioneer became the bride of James Barron Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Martin of Lake Providence.

The double ring ceremony was performed on March 3 at 4:30 p.m. by the Rev. I. J. Blackmon, grandfather of the bride.

Tall baskets of white gladioli and carnations flanked by candelabra holding white candles formed a background for the ceremony. White satin bows marked family pews.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. J. H. Chapman, who accompanied David Chapman as he sang "Just For You Dear," and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a ballerina length gown of white peau de soie with long sleeves forming petal points over her wrists. The fitted bodice was overlaid with Chantilly lace and her fingertip veil of English illusion was held in place by a crown of pearls and lace. Her bouquet was a white hybrid orchid, encircled with stephanotis and lily of the valley.

Miss Martha Rose attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a gown of blue chiffon with a band of blue satin at the waistline. Her headdress was a circlet of matching blue velvet with a tiny nose veil and she wore satin shoes in matching shade and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Serving as best man was Bert Copes of Lake Providence. Ushers were John Russell Ross and Tony White of Pioneer.

Candles were lighted by Misses Virginia and Dian Rose, nieces of the bride from Biloxi, Miss. They wore identical dresses of pink and blue with flower bandeaux for headdresses and wrist corsages of carnations.

The bride's mother wore an aqua lace sheath with matching accessories and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Martin, mother of the bridegroom, wore a beige ensemble with an orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. An arrangement of white gladioli and carnations centered the bride's table, which was covered with a Maderia cloth. Mrs. O. N. Hamilton, sister of the bridegroom, served the cake and Mrs. Robert C. Rose Jr., sister - in - law of the bride, presided at the punch bowl. Miss Sue Crow was at the bride's book.

When the couple left on a wedding trip the bride was wearing a navy blue ensemble and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Donaldsonville where Mr. Martin is employed.

Greeting spring with a flowered bonnet will put winter completely behind you and a new season of gay, good looks before you.

The popular "more hat" look is a "must" for spring. Cloches, toques, bretons, rollers and cartwheels, big-brimmed or small-brimmed, are lavishly trimmed with lovely flowers in all the bright colors and shapes of the lush spring garden.

Choose your favorite flowers and colors by the hatful: red, pink, or yellow roses, white gardenias, blue bachelor buttons, red poppies, carnation, lily-of-the-valley, dahlias and daisies, lilacs and wisteria. Or, if you like them all, the multi-flowered hats give you the best of everything.

Even if the March winds are still blowing, a glamorous new flowered hats puts "spring" in your step, chic in your wardrobe and an eye-catching bouquet of flattery on your head.

Martin-Rose Vows Read In Candlelight

In a candlelight ceremony at the New Prospect Baptist Church near Pioneer, Miss Barbara Ann Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Rose Sr., of Pioneer became the bride of James Barron Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Martin of Lake Providence.

The double ring ceremony was performed on March 3 at 4:30 p.m. by the Rev. I. J. Blackmon, grandfather of the bride.

Tall baskets of white gladioli and carnations flanked by candelabra holding white candles formed a background for the ceremony. White satin bows marked family pews.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. J. H. Chapman, who accompanied David Chapman as he sang "Just For You Dear," and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a ballerina length gown of white peau de soie with long sleeves forming petal points over her wrists. The fitted bodice was overlaid with Chantilly lace and her fingertip veil of English illusion was held in place by a crown of pearls and lace. Her bouquet was a white hybrid orchid, encircled with stephanotis and lily of the valley.

Miss Martha Rose attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a gown of blue chiffon with a band of blue satin at the waistline. Her headdress was a circlet of matching blue velvet with a tiny nose veil and she wore satin shoes in matching shade and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Serving as best man was Bert Copes of Lake Providence. Ushers were John Russell Ross and Tony White of Pioneer.

Candles were lighted by Misses Virginia and Dian Rose, nieces of the bride from Biloxi, Miss. They wore identical dresses of pink and blue with flower bandeaux for headdresses and wrist corsages of carnations.

The bride's mother wore an aqua lace sheath with matching accessories and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Martin, mother of the bridegroom, wore a beige ensemble with an orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. An arrangement of white gladioli and carnations centered the bride's table, which was covered with a Maderia cloth. Mrs. O. N. Hamilton, sister of the bridegroom, served the cake and Mrs. Robert C. Rose Jr., sister - in - law of the bride, presided at the punch bowl. Miss Sue Crow was at the bride's book.

When the couple left on a wedding trip the bride was wearing a navy blue ensemble and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Donaldsonville where Mr. Martin is employed.

Mrs. Martin is a graduate of Pioneer High School and attended Louisiana Tech at Ruston. Mr. Martin is a graduate of Monticello High School and Northeast Louisiana State College in Monroe.

Monroe residents among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Busby, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Busby, Mr. and Mrs. Reid Heflin, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Causey, and Miss Toma Gross, Northeast Louisiana State College.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Ceramics Featured At Flower Exhibit

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Mrs. G. C. Porter, president of Twilight Garden Club of Monroe, and an expert ceramic artist brought the show to the T.V. and Garden Center last week. It featured ceramics made by the members of the club as well as her own works of art.

This proved to be a most interesting show — one that we have all been looking forward to for a long time. It seems that more and more people — all ages, are becoming interested in this art. Mrs. Porter said that she first became interested in it while living in Mississippi.

She went to the City Recreation Center for her first lessons. Later she had her own shop here in Monroe and taught ceramic art. She now lives in Sterlington and still works with ceramics as a hobby. She said it was a wonderful family hobby since all ages find it so interesting.

ARRANGEMENTS

Five lovely arrangements were made by members of the club, using their own ceramic containers and accessories. The first one that Mrs. Porter showed was made by Mrs. Melba Dean. She used a lovely tan or rusty amber glazed compote for her dried arrangement of clipped palm, sea oats, golden straw flowers and wood roses. For accessories she used two tan ceramic frogs perched at the foot of the container. It would be very lovely for the den.

A low tan bowl with a satin finish was the container used by Mrs. Elizabeth Whittington for her arrangement of white roses in a horizontal line. It is very appropriate for the dinner table. Green foliage (rose) was used as a filler. The color combination was lovely.

A low square shaped ceramic bowl, satin finish of tan color was used for the large vertical arrangement of dried materials by Mrs. Maxine Adams. This arrangement contained dried aspidestra leaves, cattails, dock, and pampas grass in a soft copper tone. The focal area was made of gold into deep brown straw flowers accented by deep brown glycerinized leaves.

A ceramic rooster and hen were placed to one side of this arrangement as accessories. These were finished in a brown stain resembling wood. Mrs. Porter made these. Mrs. Adams made another arrangement in a low ginger tan colored ceramic bowl that she had made. This was a horizontal line design made by placing clipped palm, sea oats, small cattails, and embryo palm for the line. One side was filled in with golden straw flowers at the focal area. The other side in this area was filled in with three lovely wood roses. This was a free standing design which could be used on the coffee table or the patio table.

Mrs. Wiley Moseley used a log round which had been stained a lovely brown and waxed to feature her driftwood arrangement and ceramic squirrel.

This was a vertical design. The wood was enhanced by tall brown cattails and dock. The dark brown squirrel perching at the foot of the wood was holding an acorn. Acorns and dried oak leaves were placed around him, tying him into the focal area, just lovely for the den or family room. This is the type arrangement of which we never tire. Mrs. Porter mentioned that Mrs. Moseley had modeled this squirrel free handed from the clay. This requires talent which makes this type of ceramic more precious.

Other ceramics featured were: A large rooster finished in a soft brown stain, a pair of beautiful peacocks — light green into tan with the feathers edged in gold, a black compote (oriental type); a cylinder vase of gold marbelized finish; a lovely large Japanese figurine (Quan Yen) white glaze finish, could be used alone as an oriental conversational piece or used with flowering branches on a large coffee table; lovely wall plaque (embossed design) featuring the magnolia with green leaves; a tea pot with hand painted roses, and a personalized ash tray featuring a pipe (characteristic of the person whose name was written in gold on the tray). There were others that I have failed to tell about, but, I find the space is giving out. I only hope that you did see the show. This is certainly one of our most interesting shows and we hope to have Mrs. Porter come again. Maybe she will show us next time just how they made these lovely ceramics.

This week Lafayette Ruffin, a student of horticulture and flower arranging from Tech at Ruston, will bring a flower arranging program to us.

EXTENSION NEWS

Busy Season For Gardener

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

These next few weeks will be a busy time for you, Mrs. Gardner, for there are ever so many jobs if you want to enrich your garden for summer and fall.

One important thing to do now is to mulch shrubs in the landscape. The mulch tends to keep the soil around the plants cool and will also conserve moisture. Well mulched plants will require far less watering in the summer. Pine straw is one of the best mulches and is not expensive. Use a layer three to four inches thick and spread it out at least a foot beyond the branches. If mulch becomes packed, loosen the mulch so it will absorb water.

Sawdust is another cheap mulch but you should use extra nitrogen because the sawdust uses nitrogen of the soil in the process of decomposition.

POSSIBLE ANSWER

If you need color perhaps a bed or coleus or salvia may be the answer. They are both quite showy.

If you have a shady area use caladiums for enrichment. They can be bought in a variety of colors, but do not mix several colors. Each group should be separate and distinct although you use several colors. If you are undecided about the color the old standby, white and green (candidum), is excellent. If you want pink there are ever so many. Lord Derby is a favorite, real light pink with small green veins. Other pink with more green showing are Miss Chicago, Dr. Grover and Mrs. W. B. Holdeman.

Edith Mead is a beautiful green leaf with red veins. If a cool green is the color, then select Sea Gulls.

There are ever so many reds from bright red to dark. Among the popular ones is Exposition, bright red veins with a great deal green coloring around edges. Red Ensign and Anglias Poecile are other favorite reds.

If you are planning to use caladiums it is time to make a visit to your nurseryman to place your order, so that you will be sure to get the color you want.

CLOTHING LEADERS

Don't forget your leader training meeting Tuesday at 9:30 at the Extension Auditorium in West Monroe. You will get the latest information on "Sewing New Fabrics." Be sure that your club is represented.

DEMONSTRATION

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, want to learn to graft camellias come to the meeting on Friday, March 30th at the Agriculture Building, West Monroe. There will be two demonstrations given by Warren Meadows, horticulturist from LSU Agricultural Extension. The afternoon session will begin at 2, and the later one at 7 p.m.

COUNTING CALORIES

Are you, Mrs. Homemaker, one of those who are counting calories. If so, let's look at a few things that you seldom think contain so many calories. Six large green olives or three jumbo size have 30 calories, six large ripe have 40, one sweet pickle 3¼ inch in diameter and 2¾ inches long has 20 calories, one cup of popcorn with one teaspoon of fat contains 90 calories. Count those jellybeans, 10 give you 65 calories. A one-ounce mint patty has 110 calories.

Better watch those dressings on your salad. One tablespoon of French dressing adds 60; one tablespoon mayonnaise adds 110. For a low caloric dressing try adding seasoning to tomato juice or that old standby, lemon juice.

When planning your kitchen, Mrs. Homemaker, start at the sink because this is the area that is most often used. All meal preparation begins and ends here. In deciding where the sink should be, consider the location of doors, windows. The sink location must have good light, both natural and artificial. On each side be sure there is at least 30 inches of counter space. Remember to check the height too. Ideally you can put both hands, palms flat in the bottom of the sink without stooping over. This will give a more comfortable working area and save strain on your back.

Sinks are making news today. You will find new shapes and a variety of sizes to answer every need. They are round, square or rectangular, shallow or deep — with double or single bowls, even triple bowls.

They're designed to turn corners, pretty too. Many are made of stain proof porcelain enamel or modern stainless steel.

A THOUGHT

We should not manage our life like a child ironing, putting a new wrinkle in for every one we smooth out.

SEW SIMPLE
By Eunice Farmer

Our Tailor Trix winner this week is Mrs. Florence Remer, Detroit, Mich., who made this sensible suggestion.

"After reading of the terrific number of accidents caused in homes by people who trip and fall because of the two corners of the bed spread which lie on the floor at the foot, (my husband almost became one of these casualties), I proceeded to do something about it.

CUSTOM FIT

"To make a regular bed spread fit the foot of the bed, place the spread on the bed upside down. Grasp one bottom corner and lift until the side and the foot overlaps hang straight to the floor, then pin securely from the corner of the mattress to the floor. Now move to the other corner and do the same.

"Remove the spread and replace it right side up to be sure of the "boxy" effect. Now stitch the corners and cut off excess. The end results will be greater than you expected. It cuts bed making time in half, and also makes a neat appearance."

"Dear Mrs. Farmer:

"I have some material with a border print which I would like to make up in a flared type smock for my little girls. How can I cut this out so that the border will look right?"

Mrs. W.B.R.

BORDER PRINT

Dear Mrs. W.B.R.:

You will have to find a pattern with a gathered or pleated skirt instead because the hem line will have to be "straight" in order to use a border print. It is impossible to have the border straight with a curved hem line.

"Dear Eunice:

"A friend of mine brought me some raw silk from Europe and since I am not familiar with this type of fabric, I hesitate to attempt to make it up. Does it have to be shrunk, and is there any special handling necessary?"

Mrs. J.E. O'C.

UNDERLINE SILK

Dear Mrs. J.E. O'C.:

Usually silk does not have to be shrunk. Be careful when pressing it however, water usually spots it. If it is pure silk, don't use a steam iron on it because of the danger of water-spotting. Instead, you can press it with a fairly hot iron.

Most of these fabrics need a complete underlining for added body. This is cut exactly the same as the garment itself, and basted to each section separately, in other words, you will have two layers of each section instead of one. Underlining could be of a very light weight silk, such as China silk, or a fine batiste, or regular sheath lining which is a combination cotton and acetate.

"Dear Eunice:

"I have just finished a suit with drop shoulders and it looks so big on me. I am wondering if I should use shoulder pads or move the sleeves up?"

Mrs. B.W.

DROP SHOULDERS

Dear Mrs. B.W.:

This is the "new" look and you will get used to it the more often you see it. It does feel odd at first, and shoulder pads don't help the appearance.

You can't just move the sleeves UP. If you don't want the drop shoulders, you must re-cut your garment. Use a pattern with a regular set-in-sleeve and cut the armhole from this pattern. Be sure and place the pattern you are using, over the other pattern, matching the CENTER FRONT AND THE SHOULDER SEAMS.

Now you can safely cut the armhole only. Now you will also be able to use the sleeve pattern that comes with your new pattern. You will notice the cap of the sleeve is shaped entirely different in a dropped shoulder garment from one with a standard width shoulder. Good luck!

Dear Fans:

On a recent trip to New York, I was intrigued with a darling satin cocktail hat that one of the gals was wearing. She then told me she had made it in a few hours. It can be made of any color and would be very appropriate for any season of the year. If you would like free instructions for this little hat, please send a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Sew Simple, in care of Monroe Morning World.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Bamboos Graceful

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The graceful bamboos are always admired by gardeners, but not often planted because of the reputation that bamboos have for spreading rapidly into large groves. The hardiest and commonest kind in gardens of the cooler parts of the South is arundinaria japonica.

This graceful tall evergreen is winter hardy as far north as Washington and can be seen in some of the plantings around the government buildings there.

TIPS

If you want to grow bamboos, there are some kinds that do not spread at all but grow in tight clumps that keep increasing by inching out each year.

Some of the best of these non-spreaders are varieties of the fernleaf bamboo (bambusa multiplex). The ordinary fernleaf bamboo has green leaves and grows to about 15 feet in height. The variety called Alphonse Karr will grow to as much as 30 feet tall and has green and yellow striped canes that are very attractive. Then the Fruitland Nursery at Augusta, Georgia offers an especially fine variety which they call Bambusa multiplex "No. 2." This one is compact and has wide leaves and grows into a dense bush.

Bamboos are mostly used as attractive groves or clumps of delicate evergreen in the landscape. They also make delicate and handsome screens and there is one especially handsome pygmy bamboo that is a fine ground cover. This one, Sasa pygmaes, grows only about 12 to 15 inches tall and has very wide leaves. In time, a ground cover of this little bamboo will kill out most everything else in its area and need little care except feeding. There are plantings of it in some of the public gardens in the lower south, and it is winter hardy at the University of North Carolina, and on the Biltmore Estate at Asheville.

If you have a low, moist space, bamboos will thrive in it. They can, of course, be grown almost anywhere, but they develop rapidly into mature plants where there is a good supply of moisture. Along boundary lines between lots, people frequently plant bamboo as an especially delicate and beautiful screen. The kind most often met with is the spreading arundinaria japonica we mentioned at first.

It takes some years for this plant to spread into your property, and it can be kept down by just mowing over it. The clump varieties will not spread at all, however, and make a splendid fence of canes that is pleasing to look at.

There are many kinds of spreading bamboo which we have not discussed in this column. At the Barbour-Lathrop Gardens of the U. S. Department of Agriculture south of Savannah, and at Mc Ilhenny Gardens in South Louisiana, you can see all sorts of bamboos including the giant timber bamboo, the golden bamboos and the purple bamboos. Since bamboo will produce more pulp for paper even than our southern pine trees, it may well be grown commercially one day in the south for this purpose.

Bard Paintings Presented To Festival Theater

NEW YORK (AP) — A collection of paintings and sculpture pertaining to the bard has been presented to the American Shakespeare Festival Theater and Academy by the Folger Shakespeare Library of Washington.

The gift includes 42 pictures of scenes from plays, with roles as portrayed by Ellen Terry, Sir Henry Irving, Edwin Booth and David Garrick. Another item is a marble bust of Shakespeare which was made for the 1851 London Exhibition on orders of the Prince Consort.

Wood Areas Are Arrayed In Flowers

By DWIGHT S. HALL
LSU Horticulture Specialist

Our native Louisiana woodlands are quick to tell us it is spring.

The new growth of trees is edged and laced with prized dogwood, red maple, crataegus or Haus, redbud, silver bell, native plum, fringe tree and finally locust, all covering our roadsides and woodlands shouting out the glory of spring.

We should take time to look at spring. She comes every year, but her glory is quick to pass away, and man is one of her major destructive factors.

FLOWERING TREES

Our native flowering trees have much to offer in our home landscapes, yet all too often we completely destroy a plant in the transfer from its assumingly easy woodland culture to our home grounds.

The showy dogwood which may be planted in April is a difficult plant to transplant from its native habitat. Its shallow and extensive root system thrives in loose, loamy, well-drained soil.

Root damage, exposure to extreme sun and undesirable soil and drainage, result in thousands of native dogwood being lost in the transfer from the wild to home grounds.

One should obtain dogwood from nursery grown stock rather than destroy its beauty in our native woodlands. Nursery dogwood has been cultivated and adapted to home grounds' conditions and chances for survival are many times greater than the native material.

Red bud is a much easier plant to transplant from the wild. One should choose small trees and provide a wooded condition for the red bud on the home grounds. Red bud combined with dogwood or pine makes an excellent display in the landscape.

SOUND OF PROFIT

NEW YORK (AP) — The national company of "The Sound of Music" reports a gross of $4,243,673 during its first year on tour.

The troupe, starring Florence Henderson, opened in Detroit Feb. 27, 1961, has visited 12 cities including its current stand, Chicago.

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

QUESTION: Are Christians cursed if they don't bring their tithe to the church? Malachi said that Israel would be judged if they robbed God of tithes and offerings.

K. T.

ANSWER: Those who refuse to share with God miss a wonderful blessing. Hence, those who do not tithe, bring upon themselves a self-inflicted judgement.

The blessing of tithing, to me, is spiritual. God said in Malachi: "Bring ye all the tithe into the storehouse . . . and prove me now herewith, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

There are some who teach that tithing is financailly profitable, and personally, I have never found it unprofitable. But I believe that the 'blessings' referred to are spiritual enrichment and blessing. Happy is the man who has met his obligations — particularly to God, to whom we are all greatly indebted.

The 'curse' you ask about, in my opinion, would be spiritual impoverishment. The person who puts material gain above spiritual enrichment has brought a curse on himself — by his poor sense of values.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Mrs. G. C. Porter, president of Twilight Garden Club of Monroe, and an expert ceramic artist brought the show to the T.V. and Garden Center last week. It featured ceramics made by the members of the club as well as her own works of art.

This proved to be a most interesting show — one that we have all been looking forward to for a long time. It seems that more and more people — all ages, are becoming interested in this art. Mrs. Porter said that she first became interested in it while living in Mississippi.

She went to the City Recreation Center for her first lessons. Later she had her own shop here in Monroe and taught ceramic art. She now lives in Sterlington and still works with ceramics as a hobby. She said it was a wonderful family hobby since all ages find it so interesting.

ARRANGEMENTS

Five lovely arrangements were made by members of the club, using their own ceramic containers and accessories. The first one that Mrs. Porter showed was made by Mrs. Melba Dean. She used a lovely tan or rusty amber glazed compote for her dried arrangement of clipped palm, sea oats, golden straw flowers and wood roses. For accessories she used two tan ceramic frogs perched at the foot of the container. It would be very lovely for the den.

A low tan bowl with a satin finish was the container used by Mrs. Elizabeth Whittington for her arrangement of white roses in a horizontal line. It is very appropriate for the dinner table. Green foliage (rose) was used as a filler. The color combination was lovely.

A low square shaped ceramic bowl, satin finish of tan color was used for the large vertical arrangement of dried materials by Mrs. Maxine Adams. This arrangement contained dried aspidestra leaves, cattails, dock, and pampas grass in a soft copper tone. The focal area was made of gold into deep brown straw flowers accented by deep brown glycerinized leaves.

A ceramic rooster and hen were placed to one side of this arrangement as accessories. These were finished in a brown stain resembling wood. Mrs. Porter made these. Mrs. Adams made another arrangement in a low ginger tan colored ceramic bowl that she had made. This was a horizontal line design made by placing clipped palm, sea oats, small cattails, and embryo palm for the line. One side was filled in with golden straw flowers at the focal area. The other side in this area was filled in with three lovely wood roses. This was a free standing design which could be used on the coffee table or the patio table.

Mrs. Wiley Moseley used a log round which had been stained a lovely brown and waxed to feature her driftwood arrangement and ceramic squirrel.

This was a vertical design. The wood was enhanced by tall brown cattails and dock. The dark brown squirrel perching at the foot of the wood was holding an acorn. Acorns and dried oak leaves were placed around him, tying him into the focal area, just lovely for the den or family room. This is the type arrangement of which we never tire. Mrs. Porter mentioned that Mrs. Moseley had modeled this squirrel free handed from the clay. This requires talent which makes this type of ceramic more precious.

Other ceramics featured were: A large rooster finished in a soft brown stain; a pair of beautiful peacocks — light green into tan with the feathers edged in gold; a black compote (oriental type); a cylinder vase of gold marbelized finish; a lovely large Japanese figurine (Quan Yen) white glaze finish, could be used alone as an oriental conversational piece or used with flowering branches on a large coffee table; lovely wall plaque (embossed design) featuring the magnolia with green leaves; a tea pot with hand painted roses, and a personalized ash tray featuring a pipe (characteristic of the person whose name was written in gold on the tray). There were others that I have failed to tell about, but, I find the space is giving out. I only hope that you did see the show. This is certainly one of our most interesting shows and we hope to have Mrs. Porter come again. Maybe she will show us next time just how they made these lovely ceramics.

This week Lafayette Ruffin, a student of horticulture and flower arranging from Tech at Ruston, will bring a flower arranging program to us.

EXTENSION NEWS

Busy Season For Gardener

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

These next few weeks will be a busy time for you, Mrs. Gardner, for there are ever so many jobs if you want to enrich your garden for summer and fall.

One important thing to do now is to mulch shrubs in the landscape. The mulch tends to keep the soil around the plants cool and will also conserve moisture. Well mulched plants will require far less watering in the summer. Pine straw is one of the best mulches and is not expensive. Use a layer three to four inches thick and spread it out at least a foot beyond the branches. If mulch becomes packed, loosen the mulch so it will absorb water.

Sawdust is another cheap mulch, but you should use extra nitrogen because the sawdust uses nitrogen of the soil in the process of decomposition.

POSSIBLE ANSWER

If you need color perhaps a bed or coleus or salvia may be the answer. They are both quite showy.

If you have a shady area use caladiums for enrichment. They can be bought in a variety of colors, but do not mix several colors. Each group should be separate and distinct although you use several colors. If you are undecided about the color the old standby, white and green (candidum), is excellent. If you want pink there are ever so many. Lord Derby is a favorite, real light pink with small green veins. Other pink with more green showing are Miss Chicago, Dr. Grover and Mrs. W. B. Holdeman.

Edith Mead is a beautiful green leaf with red veins. If a cool green is the color, then select Sea Gulls.

There are ever so many reds from bright red to dark. Among the popular ones is Exposition, bright red veins with a great deal green coloring around edges. Red Ensign and Anglias Poecile are other favorite reds.

If you are planning to use caladiums it is time to make a visit to your nurseryman to place your order, so that you will be sure to get the color you want.

CLOTHING LEADERS

Don't forget your leader training meeting Tuesday at 9:30 at the Extension Auditorium in West Monroe. You will get the latest information on "Sewing New Fabrics." Be sure that your club is represented.

DEMONSTRATION

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, want to learn to graft camellias come to the meeting on Friday, March 30th at the Agriculture Building, West Monroe. There will be two demonstrations given by Warren Meadows, horticulturist from LSU Agricultural Extension. The afternoon session will begin at 2, and the later one at 7 p.m.

COUNTING CALORIES

Are you, Mrs. Homemaker, one of those who are counting calories. If so, let's look at a few things that you seldom think contain so many calories. Six large green olives or three jumbo size have 30 calories, six large ripe have 40, one sweet pickle ¾ inch in diameter and 2¾ inches long has 20 calories, one cup of popcorn with one teaspoon of fat contains 90 calories. Count those jellybeans, 10 give you 65 calories. A one-ounce mint patty has 110 calories.

Better watch those dressings on your salad. One tablespoon of French dressing adds 60; one tablespoon mayonnaise adds 110. For a low caloric dressing try adding seasoning to tomato juice or that old standby, lemon juice.

When planning your kitchen, Mrs. Homemaker, start at the sink because this is the area that is most often used. All meal preparation begins and ends here. In deciding where the sink should be, consider the location of doors, windows. The sink location must have good light, both natural and artificial. On each side be sure there is at least 30 inches of counter space. Remember to check the height too. Ideally you can put both hands, palms flat in the bottom of the sink without stooping over. This will give a more comfortable working area and save strain on your back.

Sinks are making news today. You will find new shapes and a variety of sizes to answer every need. They are round, square or rectangular, shallow or deep — with double or single bowls, even triple bowls.

They're designed to turn corners, pretty too. Many are made of stain proof porcelain enamel or modern stainless steel.

A THOUGHT

We should not manage our life like a child ironing, putting a new wrinkle in for every one we smooth out.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Bamboos Graceful

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The graceful bamboos are always admired by gardeners, but not often planted because of the reputation that bamboos have for spreading rapidly into large groves. The hardiest and commonest kind in gardens of the cooler parts of the South is arundinaria japonica.

This graceful tall evergreen is winter hardy as far north as Washington and can be seen in some of the plantings around the government buildings there.

TIPS

If you want to grow bamboos, there are some kinds that do not spread at all but grow in tight clumps that keep increasing by inching out each year.

Some of the best of these non-spreaders are varieties of the fernleaf bamboo (bambusa multiplex). The ordinary fernleaf bamboo has green leaves and grows to about 15 feet in height. The variety called Alphonse Karr will grow to as much as 30 feet tall and has green and yellow striped canes that are very attractive. Then the Fruitland Nursery at Augusta, Georgia offers an especially fine variety which they call Bambusa multiplex "No. 2." This one is compact and has wide leaves and grows into a dense bush.

Bamboos are mostly used as attractive groves or clumps of delicate evergreen in the landscape. They also make delicate and handsome screens and there is one especially handsome pygmy bamboo that is a fine ground cover. This one, Sasa pygmaes, grows only about 12 to 15 inches tall and has very wide leaves. In time, a ground cover of this little bamboo will kill out most everything else in its area and need little care except feeding. There are plantings of it in some of the public gardens in the lower south, and it is winter hardy at the University of North Carolina, and on the Biltmore Estate at Asheville.

If you have a low, moist space, bamboos will thrive in it. They can, of course, be grown almost anywhere, but they develop rapidly into mature plants where there is a good supply of moisture. Along boundary lines between lots, people frequently plant bamboo as an especially delicate and beautiful screen. The kind most often met with is the spreading arundinaria japonica we mentioned at first.

It takes some years for this plant to spread into your property, and it can be kept down by just mowing over it. The clump varieties will not spread at all, however, and make a splendid fence of canes that is pleasing to look at.

There are many kinds of spreading bamboo which we have not discussed in this column. At the Barbour-Lathrop Gardens of the U. S. Department of Agriculture south of Savannah, and at Mc Ilhenny Gardens in South Louisiana, you can see all sorts of bamboos including the giant timber bamboo, the golden bamboos and the purple bamboos. Since bamboo will produce more pulp for paper even than our southern pine trees, it may well be grown commercially one day in the south for this purpose.

Bard Paintings Presented To Festival Theater

NEW YORK (AP) — A collection of paintings and sculpture pertaining to the bard has been presented to the American Shakespeare Festival Theater and Academy by the Folger Shakespeare Library of Washington.

The gift includes 42 pictures of scenes from plays, with roles as portrayed by Ellen Terry, Sir Henry Irving, Edwin Booth and David Garrick. Another item is a marble bust of Shakespeare which was made for the 1851 London Exhibition on orders of the Prince Consort.

SEW SIMPLE

By Eunice Farmer

Our Tailor Trix winner this week is Mrs. Florence Remer, Detroit, Mich., who made this sensible suggestion.

"After reading of the terrific number of accidents caused in homes by people who trip and fall because of the two corners of the bed spread which lie on the floor at the foot, (my husband almost became one of these casualties), I proceeded to do something about it.

CUSTOM FIT

"To make a regular bed spread fit the foot of the bed, place the spread on the bed upside down. Grasp one bottom corner and lift until the side and the foot overlaps hang straight to the floor, then pin securely from the corner of the mattress to the floor. Now move to the other corner and do the same.

"Remove the spread and replace it right side up to be sure of the "boxy" effect. Now stitch the corners and cut off excess. The end results will be greater than you expected. It cuts bed making time in half, and also makes a neat appearance."

"Dear Mrs. Farmer:

"I have some material with a border print which I would like to make up in a flared type smock for my little girls. How can I cut this out so that the border will look right?"

Mrs. W.B.R.

BORDER PRINT

Dear Mrs. W.B.R.:

You will have to find a pattern with a gathered or pleated skirt instead because the hem line will have to be "straight" in order to use a border print. It is impossible to have the border straight with a curved hem line.

"Dear Eunice:

"A friend of mine brought me some raw silk from Europe and since I am not familiar with this type of fabric, I hesitate to attempt to make it up. Does it have to be shrunk, and is there any special handling necessary?"

Mrs. J.E. O'C.

UNDERLINE SILK

Dear Mrs. J.E. O'C.:

Usually silk does not have to be shrunk. Be careful when pressing it however, water usually spots it. If it is pure silk, don't use a steam iron on it because of the danger of water-spotting. Instead, you can press it with a fairly hot iron.

Most of these fabrics need a complete underlining for added body. This is cut exactly the same as the garment itself, and basted to each section separately, in other words, you will have two layers of each section instead of one. Underlining could be of a very light weight silk, such as China silk, or a fine batiste, or regular sheath lining which is a combination cotton and acetate.

"Dear Eunice:

"I have just finished a suit with drop shoulders and it looks so big on me. I am wondering if I should use shoulder pads or move the sleeves up?"

Mrs. B.W.

DROP SHOULDERS

Dear Mrs. B.W.:

This is the "new" look and you will get used to it the more often you see it. It does feel odd at first, and shoulder pads don't help the appearance.

You can't just move the sleeves UP. If you don't want the drop shoulders, you must re-cut your garment. Use a pattern with a regular set-in-sleeve and cut the armhole from this pattern. Be sure and place the pattern you are using, over the other pattern, matching the CENTER FRONT AND THE SHOULDER SEAMS.

Now you can safely cut the armhole only. Now you will also be able to use the sleeve pattern that comes with your new pattern. You will notice the cap of the sleeve is shaped entirely different in a dropped shoulder garment from one with a standard width shoulder. Good luck!

Dear Fans:

On a recent trip to New York, I was intrigued with a darling satin cocktail hat that one of the gals was wearing. She then told me she had made it in a few hours. It can be made of any color and would be very appropriate for any season of the year. If you would like free instructions for this little hat, please send a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Sew Simple, in care of Monroe Morning World.

Wood Areas Are Arrayed In Flowers

By DWIGHT S. HALL
LSU Horticulture Specialist

Our native Louisiana woodlands are quick to tell us it is spring.

The new growth of trees is edged and laced with prized dogwood, red maple, crataegus or Haus, redbud, silver bell, native plum, fringe tree and finally locust, all covering our roadsides and woodlands shouting out the glory of spring.

We should take time to look at spring. She comes every year, but her glory is quick to pass away, and man is one of her major destructive factors.

FLOWERING TREES

Our native flowering trees have much to offer in our home landscapes, yet all too often we completely destroy a plant in the transfer from its assumingly easy woodland culture to our home grounds.

The showy dogwood which may be planted in April is a difficult plant to transplant from its native habitat. Its shallow and extensive root system thrives in loose, loamy, well-drained soil.

Root damage, exposure to extreme sun and undesirable soil and drainage, result in thousands of native dogwood being lost in the transfer from the wild to home grounds.

One should obtain dogwood from nursery grown stock rather than destroy its beauty in our native woodlands. Nursery dogwood has been cultivated and adapted to home grounds' conditions and chances for survival are many times greater than the native material.

Red bud is a much easier plant to transplant from the wild. One should choose small trees and provide a wooded condition for the red bud on the home grounds. Red bud combined with dogwood or pine makes an excellent display in the landscape.

SOUND OF PROFIT

NEW YORK (AP) — The national company of "The Sound of Music" reports a gross of $4,243,673 during its first year on tour.

The troupe, starring Florence Henderson, opened in Detroit Feb. 27, 1961, has visited 12 cities including its current stand, Chicago.

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

QUESTION: Are Christians cursed if they don't bring their tithe to the church? Malachi said that Israel would be judged if they robbed God of tithes and offerings.

K. T.

ANSWER: Those who refuse to share with God miss a wonderful blessing. Hence, those who do not tithe, bring upon themselves a self-inflicted judgement.

The blessing of tithing, to me, is spiritual. God said in Malachi; "Bring ye all the tithe into the storehouse . . . and prove me now herewith, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

There are some who teach that tithing is financailly profitable, and personally, I have never found it unprofitable. But I believe that the 'blessings' referred to are spiritual enrichment and blessing. Happy is the man who has met his obligations — particularly to God, to whom we are all greatly indebted.

The 'curse' you ask about, in my opinion, would be spiritual impoverishment. The person who puts material gain above spiritual enrichment has brought a curse on himself — by his poor sense of values.

COLLEGE COMPETITION

NEW YORK (AP) — Another playwriting competition for college drama students has been launched, this by an off-Broadway group called Penny Productions.

The prize for the winning author is to be an expense-paid trip to New York to see production of the work. Deadline for entries is Aug. 31.

Ouachita Parish Cancer Crusade Leaders Named

Division chairmen have been named to direct over 1200 volunteer workers in the 1962 Cancer Crusade in Ouachita Parish in April, according to Dr. N. R. Spencer, president of the Ouachita Cancer Society.

They include the following:

James Harbuck, Monroe business; Mrs. Eva Beckett, Monroe residential; Leslie Hamm, West Monroe business; Mrs. Joyce Smith, West Monroe residential; and Charles Drennan, Sterlington.

"Our chairmen, who work on a voluntary basis, will direct over 1200 crusaders, all volunteers, in a house-to-house and business-to-business campaign," Dr. Spencer said.

The drive will be held April 9. Parish co-chairmen are M. D. Tarver and Sam Hanna.

Chairmen are making plans now for the drive, but Dr. Spencer pointed out that the biggest job in the campaign is obtaining volunteer workers — people to make soliciations.

"If anyone wishes to help us in this vital undertaking, then we urge them to contact the Cancer Society office in Monroe," Dr Spencer stated.

April is Cancer Month in America. Funds collected on the local level are spent on local victims, as well as research at Tulane and LSU and other universities.

Cuba Residents Complain About Food Rationing

HAVANA (AP) — Cubans are complaining about the food rationing that went into effect last Monday.

The Communist newspaper Hoy published Saturday a number of complaints from citizens who charged inept operation of the system, which drastically cuts the Cuban intake of meat, butter, milk, vegetables and other items. Each Cuban, for example, is allotted an eighth of a pound of butter a month, one small glass of milk a day and three-quarters of a pound of beef a week.

The complainers demanded an end to such irregularities as chickens delivered to the wrong stores or rotting for lack of refrigeration. Other complainers said their neighborhood stores had not received their allotment of beans.

Under the rationing plan, Cubans must shop in their own neighborhood and have ration books stamped showing their purchases.

Hoy also published what apparently is the first case of black marketeering.

It said three Cubans in Pinar del Rio Province were caught by a neighborhood vigilante group loading nearly 300 pounds of beef onto a truck.

MAYOR JOHN HOLLAND

Mississippi Mayor Plans Address Here

Mayor John Holland of Vicksburg, Miss., will speak here Monday night before a special dinner meeting of the Monroe Jaycees.

Mayor Halland is a former president of the Vicksburg and Mississippi Jaycees, and former National Vice President. He is recognized as one of the country's outstanding young mayors.

Highlight of the Monday night meeting, starting at 7 p.m. at the Paragon Club, will be recognition of the area's Outstanding Young Teacher.

Project chairman Dude Rogers said he expects about eight teachers in the area to be nominated for the award. He said judging would be "done by an out-of-town panel."

Dinner Chairman David Russell said Mayor W. L. Howard would introduce Mayor Holland. Mayor Howard will be one of several dozen former Jaycees, or "Exhausted Roosters," to be present at the dinner.

Russell said a historical presentation on the Monroe Jaycee organization would be made during the dinner. He said "all or most of the past officers will be named, and some of the bigger projects of those past years would be brought up.

GREAT DAY FOR SPOUSES

NEW YORK (AP) — Three husband-wife teams are involved in production of "Great Day in the Morning" for Broadway.

J. D. Cannon, spouse of playwright Alice Cannon, is a member of the cast. The leading role is being handled by Colleen Dewhurst, wife of co-producer George C. Scott. In two other parts are Thomas Carlin and his wife, Frances Sternhagen.

Ouachita Parish Cancer Crusade Leaders Named

Division chairmen have been named to direct over 1200 volunteer workers in the 1962 Cancer Crusade in Ouachita Parish in April, according to Dr. N. R. Spencer, president of the Ouachita Cancer Society.

They include the following:

James Harbuck, Monroe business; Mrs. Eva Beckett, Monroe residential; Leslie Hamm, West Monroe business; Mrs. Joyce Smith, West Monroe residential; and Charles Drennan, Sterlington.

"Our chairmen, who work on a voluntary basis, will direct over 1200 crusaders, all volunteers, in a house-to-house and business-to-business campaign," Dr. Spencer said.

The drive will be held April 9. Parish co-chairmen are M. D. Tarver and Sam Hanna.

Chairmen are making plans now for the drive, but Dr. Spencer pointed out that the biggest job in the campaign is obtaining volunteer workers — people to make soliciations.

"If anyone wishes to help us in this vital undertaking, then we urge them to contact the Cancer Society office in Monroe," Dr. Spencer stated.

April is Cancer Month in America. Funds collected on the local level are spent on local victims, as well as research at Tulane and LSU and other universities.

Cuba Residents Complain About Food Rationing

HAVANA (AP) — Cubans are complaining about the food rationing that went into effect last Monday.

The Communist newspaper Hoy published Saturday a number of complaints from citizens who charged inept operation of the system, which drastically cuts the Cuban intake of meat, butter, milk, vegetables and other items. Each Cuban, for example, is allotted an eighth of a pound of butter a month, one small glass of milk a day and three-quarters of a pound of beef a week.

The complainers demanded an end to such irregularities as chickens delivered to the wrong stores or rotting for lack of refrigeration. Other complainers said their neighborhood stores had not received their allotment of beans.

Under the rationing plan, Cubans must shop in their own neighborhood and have ration books stamped showing their purchases.

Hoy also published what apparently is the first case of black marketeering.

It said three Cubans in Pinar del Rio Province were caught by a neighborhood vigilante group loading nearly 300 pounds of beef onto a truck.

WORLD AFFAIRS

JFK, Ike Visit At Palm Springs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)— President Kennedy and former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, chatting in the pleasant setting of a country club cottage, discussed international affairs for the greater part of an hour Saturday.

Kennedy and his immediate predecessor got together late Saturday morning in Eisenhower's vacation cottage at the Eldorado Country Club in nearby Palm Desert.

The chief executive drove the four miles to Eisenhower's California style stone and wood residence from his weekend retreat, singer Bing Crosby's home in the Silver Spur Ranch area.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger reported afterward that Kennedy and Eisenhower engaged in "a general discussion of the situation around the world." Kennedy, he added, had brought Eisenhower "up to date on a number of matters."

Salinger did not elucidate except to say the talks concentrated basically on international affairs.

The face-to-face meeting of Kennedy and Eisenhower, the country's most prominent Republican, was evidently more congenial than a long-range exchange between Kennedy's traveling party and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Nixon, who lost to Kennedy in 1960, is now seeking the GOP nomination to oppose Democrat Edmund G. (Pat) Brown's bid for re-election as governor of California, took critical note of Kennedy's presence. The President arrived Friday, accompanied by his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, and Nixon was quoted as saying:

"We welcome them. In November we're going to show these carpetbaggers a thing or two."

Asked for comment, Salinger tartly observed:

"I would just say I don't know of anybody in the United States, no matter what state he resides in, who considers the President of the United States a carpetbagger wherever he is."

Kennedy and Eisenhower huddled for about 45 minutes before Eisenhower invited Salinger and Maj. Gen. C. V. Clifton, Kennedy's military aide, inside to show them his winter quarters. The cottage is about the same size, perhaps a little larger, and more elaborately designed on the exterior than Crosby's ranch type house.

This was the fourth Kennedy-Eisenhower meeting since inauguration day. They conferred at Camp David in the Maryland mountains after the disastrous Cuban invasion attempt last April, again at the White House on the occasion of Japanese Prime Minister Hyato Ikeda's visit in June and met briefly amid the sadness of House Speaker Sam Rayburn's funeral in November.

"Well, President Kennedy," Eisenhower said with a broad smile as he walked from his cottage to welcome the chief executive. Kennedy shook hands warmly, presented Clifton and Salinger and called over Gerald Behn, head of the White House Secret Service detail. Eisenhower had known Behn as an agent.

The former president introduced Freeman Gosden, "Amos" of the old Amos and Andy radio show. Gosden also stays at Eldorado and golfs with Eisenhower.

Mrs. Eisenhower was there but didn't join the group.

"She's in bed," Eisenhower told White House reporters. "She decided to stay out of the crowd."

Eisenhower said he caught a touch of flu on his recent trip to Mexico and got in a little hunting but no fishing. Since returning last weekend, he had played only two 9-hole rounds of golf but hoped to go 18 this afternoon.

Earlier, when Kennedy and Eisenhower strolled out to the patio facing Eldorado's 11th fairway to have their pictures taken, Kennedy gestured toward the swarm of newsmen and photographers and remarked "there are a lot of familiar faces." Eisenhower waved and called a few by name.

Eisenhower, wearing a sporty jacket and grey slacks, bade Kennedy farewell at the curb with a salute.

No other appointments were listed for Kennedy's weekend in the sunny comfort of California's desert resort country. His only announced business was to approve the allotment of $10 million in disaster relief funds to New Jersey's storm-struck seashore communities and $1 million to flood-damaged sections of Idaho.

Salinger said actor and Mrs. Peter Lawford—she is one of Kennedy's sisters — arrived Friday night to stay next door at the home of composer Jimmy Van Heusen, which also was turned over to the family for the weekend.

He said Kennedy plans to swim in Crosby's heated pool.

55 Airlines Now Serving U.S. Public

NEW YORK (UPI)—The nation's travelers are served by 55 U.S. scheduled airlines that send 7,900 airplanes and helicopters over more than 500,000 miles of domestic and foreign routes.

Of the 55 lines, 13 are local service airlines, which link small and intermediate-sized cities with major transportation points. In 1961, they flew an estimated 6.4 million passengers 1.3 billion passenger miles in service to 600 communities.

There are but three certificated scheduled helicopter carriers — Chicago Helicopter Airways, Los Angeles Airways and New York Airways. They carried 445,000 passengers in 1961.

The domestic trunk airlines flew 44.2 million passengers more than 29.5 billion passenger miles last year, while the U.S. Flag International Airlines carried 5.4 million passengers 8.5 billion passenger miles.

These statistics are contained in an explanation of "What Is An Airline?" issued by the Air Transport Association of America, the national trade and service association of the regularly scheduled U.S. airlines.

Under Civil Aeronautics Board regulations, a scheduled airline operator must meet a number of rigorous tests before it can be certificated, including:

—It must demonstrate it is "fit, willing and able," including financially responsible to provide transportation "properly" and that its services are needed for public convenience.

—It must serve every city designated on its routes, even those points that do not prove to be economically remunerative. It can not suspend service to any city without CAB approval.

—It must provide regular service and publish flight schedules and tariffs. These must be filed with the CAB, which can reject them.

—It must carry U.S. mail.

In the field of safety, every scheduled airline must abide by a set of Federal Aviation Agency requirements, including maintenance of a complete dispatch system involving communications, weather, navigation and airport conditions and no plane may take off without authority from a dispatch office.

Officials Hail Performance Of Nuclear Vessel

YORKTOWN, Va. (AP) — The world's first nuclear-powered cargo-passenger ship, the NS Savannah, rounded out its first day of sea trials Saturday with officials hailing the performance of the reactor.

The reactor was brought to 60 per cent power Friday afternoon and was held at that level through the night. John Robb, Atomic Energy Commission-Maritime Administration joint group engineer, reported by radio that the reactor would continue to be held at that level for a steady endurance test.

He described the reactor's performance as excellent.

Full-power tests are not scheduled until a five-day sea trial period set to begin April 2. At full power the reactor is expected to produce about 20,000-shaft horsepower.

The Savannah was authorized by Congress as a joint AEC-Maritime Administration undertaking.

Boy, 10, Takes Stump For Dad

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—It is rare when a political candidate has praise for the speech of an opponent. But such was the case Saturday when a 10-year-old schoolboy took the stump for his father.

The youngster, George Wallace Jr., told a rally in Montgomery that voters should vote for his father for governor because "he's an honest, law-abiding man."

One of Wallace's opponents for governor, State Sen. Ryan Degraffenried, said the elder Wallace deserved praise for sending the boy to pinchhit for him.

Walker Speech Will Be Heard In Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The segregationist capital Citizens Council will sponsor a recorded speech Monday night by one of its former bitter enemies—Edwin A. Walker.

Walker, when he was a major general in the U. S. Army, commanded troops which President Eisenhower sent to enforce court-ordered integration at Little Rock Central High School in 1957.

At that time, he was the object of much wrath from segregationist forces.

Amis Guthridge, president of the Citizens Council, said that Walker has since said that the invasion was illegal and unconstitutional and that he regretted it.

The speech, to be broadcast, was made by Walker in Jackson, Miss., on Dec. 29, 1961.

Guthridge said the Citizens' Council approved of Walker's attempt to "prepare our boys under his command in Germany to know the menace of the atheistic, Communist enemy." He said the council voted unanimously to sponsor Walker's speech against Communism.

Walker was relieved of his command in Germany after allegedly feeding his troops right-wing propaganda. Since then he has resigned from the Army and embarked on a private anti-Communist crusade.

DEPLORES UNDUE FEARS

AMA Reports On Radiation Findings

CHICAGO (UPI) — Americans must not be "scared to death" by radiation, the American Medical Association said Saturday.

Neither can they afford to ignore its possible effect on health, the AMA said.

The AMA said that physicians and physicists recently have drawn new guide lines that "give a somewhat less leaden hue to life with the atom than the gloomy prophecies of a decade ago."

"The one axiom that seems to stand up in all the radiation furor is this," the AMA said. "Excessive exposure to ionizing radiation (or to almost anything else) is dangerous. Used in moderation, radiation (or almost anything else) is not dangerous."

The doctors' organization said it conducted a "definitive study" of the possible effect of radiation on health because the United States is preparing to resume nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

"As far as medicine and science are concerned, while we can't afford to ignore radiation, neither can we allow ourselves to be scared to death by it," the AMA said.

The AMA statement said that a "threshold theory" appeared to be gaining ground in a scientific dispute over whether radiation-induced damage to genes eventually will change the shape of the human race.

Scientific "purists," the AMA said, maintain that any radiation, no matter how little or how much, is damaging to the genes.

"An equally eminent group maintains that up to a certain point radiation produces no noticeable effects; that there is a 'threshold' and only after the level of radiation crosses this threshold does it become dangerous," the AMA said.

"Although proof is lacking either way—it will take studies of several generations to produce any meaningful statistics — the threshold theory appears to be gaining," it said.

The AMA study quoted Dr. George R. Meneely, director of scientific assembly for the AMA, as saying: "If radiation has no threshold, then it is the only noxious substance known to man that doesn't. When a supposed hazard is so small as to be undetectable you can hardly say there is a hazard."

Available saudies showed, the AMA said, that massive doses of radiation increases the likelihood of leukemia, bone tumors, cancer of the thyroid and also can cause more miscarriages and more children to be born with congential defects.

Scientists do not know the "range of radiation doses that can produce these effects," the AMA said.

"The best that can be said at the moment is that substantial exposure produces some increase (in hazards)," the AMA said, "but at lower levels, such as diagnostic X-ray, there is no objective evidence of harm to man."

Federal Agents Raid 'Bank' Of Rackets Group

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents raided the "bank" of a multimillion-dollar numbers racket here Saturday night, the FBI reported.

Four men and a woman were arrested and "a large amount of cash and considerable quantity of gambling paraphernalia" were seized, the FBI said.

"Tonight's arrests climaxed an intensive three-month investigation by the FBI, and smashed a large-scale numbers racket which had been flourishing in the northern Virginia and the District of Columbia areas," a spokesman for the agency said.

The four men were charged under a new federal law which prohibits interstate transportation in aid of racketeering. The FBI spokesman said the woman would be charged with the same violation.

The men also were charged under District of Columbia laws which prohibit operation of a lottery and possession of number slips.

The men arrested were identified by the FBI as Langhorne Carter Rorer, 36, and John Chaney Wright, 45, both of nearby Alexandria, Va.; and Thomas Clifford Keiningham, 48, and Donold Jessie Strong, 30, both of Washington.

WORLD AFFAIRS

JFK, Ike Visit At Palm Springs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—President Kennedy and former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, chatting in the pleasant setting of a country club cottage, discussed international affairs for the greater part of an hour Saturday.

Kennedy and his immediate predecessor got together late Saturday morning in Eisenhower's vacation cottage at the Eldorado Country Club in nearby Palm Desert.

The chief executive drove the four miles to Eisenhower's California style stone and wood residence from his weekend retreat, singer Bing Crosby's home in the Silver Spur Ranch area.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger reported afterward that Kennedy and Eisenhower engaged in "a general discussion of the situation around the world." Kennedy, he added, had brought Eisenhower "up to date on a number of matters."

Salinger did not elucidate except to say the talks concentrated basically on international affairs.

The face-to-face meeting of Kennedy and Eisenhower, the country's most prominent Republican, was evidently more congenial than a long-range exchange between Kennedy's traveling party and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Nixon, who lost to Kennedy in 1960, is now seeking the GOP nomination to oppose Democrat Edmund G. (Pat) Brown's bid for re-election as governor of California, took critical note of Kennedy's presence. The President arrived Friday, accompanied by his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, and Nixon was quoted as saying:

"We welcome them. In November we're going to show these carpetbaggers a thing or two."

Asked for comment, Salinger tartly observed:

"I would just say I don't know of anybody in the United States, no matter what state he resides in, who considers the President of the United States a carpetbagger wherever he is."

Kennedy and Eisenhower huddled for about 45 minutes before Eisenhower invited Salinger and Maj. Gen. C. V. Clifton, Kennedy's military aide, inside to show them his winter quarters. The cottage is about the same size, perhaps a little larger, and more elaborately designed on the exterior than Crosby's ranch type house.

This was the fourth Kennedy-Eisenhower meeting since inauguration day. They conferred at Camp David in the Maryland mountains after the disastrous Cuban invasion attempt last April, again at the White House on the occasion of Japanese Prime Minister Hyato Ikeda's visit in June and met briefly amid the sadness of House Speaker Sam Rayburn's funeral in November.

"Well, President Kennedy," Eisenhower said with a broad smile as he walked from his cottage to welcome the chief executive. Kennedy shook hands warmly, presented Clifton and Salinger and called over Gerald Behn, head of the White House Secret Service detail. Eisenhower had known Behn as an agent.

The former president introduced Freeman Gosden, "Amos" of the old Amos and Andy radio show. Gosden also stays at Eldorado and golfs with Eisenhower.

Mrs. Eisenhower was there but didn't join the group.

"She's in bed," Eisenhower told White House reporters. "She decided to stay out of the crowd."

Eisenhower said he caught a touch of flu on his recent trip to Mexico and got in a little hunting but no fishing. Since returning last weekend, he had played only two 9-hole rounds of golf but hoped to go 18 this afternoon.

Earlier, when Kennedy and Eisenhower strolled out to the patio facing Eldorado's 11th fairway to have their pictures taken, Kennedy gestured toward the swarm of newsmen and photographers and remarked "there are a lot of familiar faces." Eisenhower waved and called a few by name.

Eisenhower, wearing a sporty jacket and grey slacks, bade Kennedy farewell at the curb with a salute.

No other appointments were listed for Kennedy's weekend in the sunny comfort of California's desert resort country. His only announced business was to approve the allotment of $10 million in disaster relief funds to New Jersey's storm-struck seashore communities and $1 million to flood-damaged sections of Idaho.

Salinger said actor and Mrs. Peter Lawford—she is one of Kennedy's sisters — arrived Friday night to stay next door at the home of composer Jimmy Van Heusen, which also was turned over to the family for the weekend.

He said Kennedy plans to swim in Crosby's heated pool.

55 Airlines Now Serving U.S. Public

NEW YORK (UPI)—The nation's travelers are served by 55 U.S. scheduled airlines that send 1,900 airplanes and helicopters over more than 500,000 miles of domestic and foreign routes.

Of the 55 lines, 13 are local service airlines, which link small and intermediate-sized cities with major transportation points. In 1961, they flew an estimated 6.4 million passengers 1.3 billion passenger miles in service to 600 communities.

There are but three certificated scheduled helicopter carriers — Chicago Helicopter Airways, Los Angeles Airways and New York Airways. They carried 445,000 passengers in 1961.

The domestic trunk airlines flew 44.2 million passengers more than 29.5 billion passenger miles last year, while the U.S. Flag International Airlines carried 5.4 million passengers 8.5 billion passenger miles.

These statistics are contained in an explanation of "What Is An Airline?" issued by the Air Transport Association of America, the national trade and service association of the regularly scheduled U.S. airlines.

Under Civil Aeronautics Board regulations, a scheduled airline operator must meet a number of rigorous tests before it can be certificated, including:

—It must demonstrate it is "fit, willing and able," including financially responsible to provide transportation "properly" and that its services are needed for public convenience.

—It must serve every city designated on its routes, even those points that do not prove to be economically remunerative. It can not suspend service to any city without CAB approval.

—It must provide regular service and publish flight schedules and tariffs. These must be filed with the CAB, which can reject them.

—It must carry U.S. mail.

In the field of safety, every scheduled airline must abide by a set of Federal Aviation Agency requirements, including maintenance of a complete dispatch system involving communications, weather, navigation and airport conditions and no plane may take off without authority from a dispatch office.

Officials Hail Performance Of Nuclear Vessel

YORKTOWN, Va. (AP) — The world's first nuclear-powered cargo-passenger ship, the NS Savannah, rounded out its first day of sea trials Saturday with officials hailing the performance of the reactor.

The reactor was brought to 60 per cent power Friday afternoon and was held at that level through the night. John Robb, Atomic Energy Commission-Maritime Administration joint group engineer, reported by radio that the reactor would continue to be held at that level for a steady endurance test.

He described the reactor's performance as excellent.

Full-power tests are not scheduled until a five-day sea trial period set to begin April 2. At full power the reactor is expected to produce about 20,000-shaft horsepower.

The Savannah was authorized by Congress as a joint AEC-Maritime Administration undertaking.

Boy, 10, Takes Stump For Dad

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—It is rare when a political candidate has praise for the speech of an opponent. But such was the case Saturday when a 10-year-old schoolboy took the stump for his father.

The youngster, George Wallace Jr., told a rally in Montgomery that voters should vote for his father for governor because "he's an honest, law-abiding man."

One of Wallace's opponents for governor, State Sen. Ryan DeGraffenried, said the elder Wallace deserved praise for sending the boy to pinchhit for him.

Walker Speech Will Be Heard In Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The segregationist capital Citizens Council will sponsor a recorded speech Monday night by one of its former bitter enemies—Edwin A. Walker.

Walker, when he was a major general in the U. S. Army, commanded troops which President Eisenhower sent to enforce court-ordered integration at Little Rock Central High School in 1957.

At that time, he was the object of much wrath from segregationist forces.

Amis Guthridge, president of the Citizens Council, said that Walker has since said that the invasion was illegal and unconstitutional and that he regretted it.

The speech, to be broadcast, was made by Walker in Jackson, Miss., on Dec. 29, 1961.

Guthridge said the Citizens' Council approved of Walker's attempt to "prepare our boys under his command in Germany to know the menace of the atheistic, Communist enemy." He said the council voted unanimously to sponsor Walker's speech against Communism.

Walker was relieved of his command in Germany after allegedly feeding his troops right-wing propaganda. Since then he has resigned from the Army and embarked on a private anti-Communist crusade.

The four men were charged under a new federal law which prohibits interstate transportation in aid of racketeering. The FBI spokesman said the woman would be charged with the same violation.

The men also were charged under District of Columbia laws which prohibit operation of a lottery and possession of number slips.

The men arrested were identified by the FBI as Langhorne Carter Rorer, 36, and John Chaney Wright, 45, both of nearby Alexandria, Va.; and Thomas Clifford Keiningham, 48, and Donold Jessie Strong, 30, both of Washington.

W. D. CALHOUN

W. D. Calhoun Retires After Long Service

In 41 years of watching after refrigeration of produce for F. Strauss and Son, here, W. D. "Bill" Calhoun "never lost a box of apples or a lug of bananas because of a refrigeration failure."

He cited this remarkable record with the company when he stepped into retirement last week, to raise beef cattle on his 60-acre farm at Bosco, and fish and hunt.

Following a reception for him Thursday at the firm's headquarters where he was presented a number of gifts by fellow employees and salesmen, he recalled his early days with the company, which was organized in 1920. He was hired in February, 1921 by the late "Pap" Strauss, then president of the organization. Clifford Strauss, now president, and Abie Marx, a salesman, are the only members of the firm who were there when Calhoun started as a truck driver.

"When I started as a truck driver with a model T Ford, there were no highways, just dirt streets and all of our goods came in by rail. In those days I remember making delivery to a store on Lee Ave. where the truck got stuck in the mud. I called a wrecker and it got stuck. I finally got out somehow. There has been a big improvement in city streets since that time."

From truck driving, Calhoun's assignments extended to those of mechanic and refrigeration engineer, and he has seen many advances in refrigeration over the years. He was one of six employees when he started with the firm, there were over 300 employees when he retired at the age of 66. He is married.

He remembered another of his pioneering experiences:

"In around 1924, I was the first man in Monroe to make a home-made light plant. I took a Model A Ford motor and hooked it up with natural gas and a 74 kilowatt generator and made our own electricity for the Strauss plant. In that time you had to cut every corner to stay in business. We started off in the summer of 1921 with our first refrigeration plant. It had one gas engine and one ammonia compressor. Our plant was 10 ton capacity. At present time we have 100 - ton capacity, four ammonia compressors and have our own light plant with two 500 horsepower engines."

He is a Mason, a member of Western Star Lodge No. 24.

U.S. Testing May Include Large Bombs

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A high administration source said Saturday "there will be nothing halfway" about the series of U.S. nuclear tests scheduled to start in the Pacific late next month.

The source, who insisted on remaining anonymous, said the government's weaponeers will test for whatever information is needed.

The experiments are set to continue for two or three months in and around Christmas and Johnston Islands.

The statement was regarded as meaning the series may include detonation of the largest types of nuclear bombs and warheads already in the American arsenal. Although they will not include anything approaching the 58-megaton monster Russia fired last fall.

The statement also served as another warning to Soviet disarmament negotiators who have refused to move toward an inspected nuclear test ban treaty.

President Kennedy has said he would call off the series if such an agreement was signed before late April.

American authorities, while discounting the military value of Russia's super bombs, are especially concerned over advantages the Soviets may have gained by setting off extremely high altitude explosions and by testing new ICBM warheads.

The U.S. series therefore is expected to be concentrated in these fields, with most of the explosions equal to less than five megatons. (A megaton is equal to five million tons of tnt, 250 times the power of the Hiroshima bomb.)

With technological improvements, however, some of the ICBM warheads could creep up to seven or eight megatons. This would be half the power of the largest nuclear explosion ever set off by the United States — on March 1, 1954.

REDS PLAN SHEDS

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union disclosed Sunday it has decided to spend an additional 210 million rubles—$233 million—for construction of sheds of livestock. Premier Khrushchev has complained that thousands of farm animals have been dying because of lack of food and shelter.

IN MISSISSIPPI

Legislators Split On 3 Hot Issues

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Political tempers, growing shorter as the legislative session drags on, could explode this week on three controversial issues—congressional redistricting, liquor or separating the sheriff-tax collector office.

Lawmakers are sharply divided on each of these issues and emotional pleas are expected from both sides. However, these pleas usually are on the benefit of home folks because mostly legislators already have their minds made up.

The Senate passed a redistricting bill handily last week that combines the entire districts of Reps. Frank Smith and Jamie Whitten. A Delta proposed amendment to clip off three counties from Whitten's district failed.

When the bill reaches the House, however, supporters of the amendment claim they have enough votes to adopt the amendment but not to kill the bill.

The amendment would place Benton, Tippah and Union counties in Rep. Tom Abernethy's northeast district, sapping considerable voting strength of Whitten.

If the amendment passes, the tension would grow because the bill would go back to the Senate for concurrence on House changes. If the Senate failed to agree, the congressional primary could turn into a statewide race for all candidates.

The measure is expected to be set for special order Tuesday or Wednesday in attempt to dispose of it quickly. Gov. Ross Barnett has said he would go along with the legislature's decision on this matter.

A bill to legalize liquor on a local option basis could be brought up at any time because it is No. 2 on the general calendar. Proponents of the measure are waiting for the best chance for release.

Rep. Philip Bryant of Lafayette County, author of the bill, spoke hopefully in view of dim prospects. He said the bill merely makes the sale of liquor legal and would allow counties to vote dry and the dry forces to fix control and taxation measures on whisky.

The wet forces are hoping that several of the revenue bills approved by a special finance committee will fail and lawmakers will be forced to turn to liquor for additional finances to balance the budget.

However, these hopes were dimmed when a key revenue measure raising taxes on cigarettes passed.

Rep. Maurice Black of Carroll County, chairman of the constitution committee, said his group approved with little opposition a resolution to permit counties to strip sheriff's of tax collecting duties and let the law enforcement officers succeed themselves.

WITH CLEAN HANDS

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Each South Charleston garbage truck now carries a tank of water, soap and paper towels. City council made the arrangements after the garbage men complained that they had no chance to wash before eating lunch.

Opera Workshop Double-Bill At Tech Scheduled

RUSTON (Special) — Student members of the Louisiana Tech Opera Workshop will stage double - bill programs Tuesday and Thursday in Howard Auditorium at the college.

Two contrasting operas, "Gianni Schicchi" and "Trouble in Tahiti," constitute the twin attractions scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock each night. Each opera will run about 45 minutes.

Students cast in the Tahiti entertainment are Pat Wells of Ruston and Bill Hudson of Bossier City, with an ensemble composed of Pat Wilson, Shreveport; Dianne Strickland, Opelousas; Bankie Hollis, Ruston; Lee Davis, Midland, Tex.; Newton Horn, Tallulah, and Mike Spears, Farmerville.

In "Gianni Schicchi," Davis, Horn and Miss Hollis will enact important roles. In this cast also will be David Wylie, Ruston; Becky Clark Anderson, Wisner; June Maddux, Brookhaven, Miss.; Mary Beth Williams, Alexandria; Bud Thames, Mangham; Richard Moore, Ruston; John Enis, Junction City; Tom Head, Ruston; Nelson Tilton, Elizabeth; Bill Carpenter, Shreveport, and Ernest Green, Shreveport.

Accompanists for the operas are Doris Evans, Caseyville, Ill.; John Enis, Junction City, and Helen Tucker Wooldridge, Ruston, a graduate assistant in piano at Tech.

The musical director and conductor for "Gianni Schicchi" is James G. Smith, instructor of music, who is assisting Mary Elaine Wallace, director of the workshop. Mrs. Wallace is musical director and conductor of "Trouble in Tahiti" and is the stage director of both operas.

W. D. CALHOUN

W. D. Calhoun Retires After Long Service

In 41 years of watching after refrigeration of produce for F. Strauss and Son, here, W. D. "Bill" Calhoun "never lost a box of apples or a lug of bananas because of a refrigeration failure."

He cited this remarkable record with the company when he stepped into retirement last week, to raise beef cattle on his 60-acre farm at Bosco, and fish and hunt.

Following a reception for him Thursday at the firm's headquarters where he was presented a number of gifts by fellow employees and salesmen, he recalled his early days with the company, which was organized in 1920. He was hired in February, 1921 by the late "Pap" Strauss, then president of the organization. Clifford Strauss, now president, and Abie Marx, a salesman, are the only members of the firm who were there when Calhoun started as a truck driver.

'When I started as a truck driver with a model T Ford, there were no highways, just dirt streets and all of our goods came in by rail. In those days I remember making delivery to a store on Lee Ave. where the truck got stuck in the mud. I called a wrecker and it got stuck. I finally got out somehow. There has been a big improvement in city streets since that time."

From truck driving, Calhoun's assignments extended to those of mechanic and refrigeration engineer, and he has seen many advances in refrigeration over the years. He was one of six employees when he started with the firm, there were over 300 employees when he retired at the age of 66. He is married.

He remembered another of his pioneering experiences:

"In around 1924, I was the first man in Monroe to make a home-made light plant. I took a Model A Ford motor and hooked it up with natural gas and a 74 kilowatt generator and made our own electricity for the Strauss plant. In that time you had to cut every corner to stay in business. We started off in the summer of 1921 with our first refrigeration plant. It had one gas engine and one ammonia compressor. Our plant was 10 ton capacity. At present time we have 100 - ton capacity, four ammonia compressors and have our own light plant with two 500 horsepower engines."

Before starting with Strauss, Calhoun was working as a roughneck around the gas fields. He remembered that "Pap" Strauss acquainted him with his motto, "Success is a journey and not a destination."

He is a Mason, a member of Western Star Lodge No. 24.

U.S. Testing May Include Large Bombs

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A high administration source said Saturday "there will be nothing halfway" about the series of U.S. nuclear tests scheduled to start in the Pacific late next month.

The source, who insisted on remaining anonymous, said the government's weaponeers will test for whatever information is needed.

The experiments are set to continue for two or three months in and around Christmas and Johnston Islands.

The statement was regarded as meaning the series may include detonation of the largest types of nuclear bombs and warheads already in the American arsenal. Although they will not include anything approaching the 58-megaton monster Russia fired last fall.

The statement also served as another warning to Soviet disarmament negotiators who have refused to move toward an inspected nuclear test ban treaty.

President Kennedy has said he would call off the series if such an agreement was signed before late April.

American authorities, while discounting the military value of Russia's super bombs, are especially concerned over advantages the Soviets may have gained by setting off extremely high altitude explosions and by testing new ICBM warheads.

The U.S. series therefore is expected to be concentrated in these fields, with most of the explosions equal to less than five megatons. (A megaton is equal to five million tons of tnt, 250 times the power of the Hiroshima bomb.)

With technological improvements, however, some of the ICBM warheads could creep up to seven or eight megatons. This would be half the power of the largest nuclear explosion ever set off by the United States — on March 1, 1954.

REDS PLAN SHEDS

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union disclosed Sunday it has decided to spend an additional 210 million rubles—$233 million—for construction of sheds of livestock. Premier Khrushchev has complained that thousands of farm animals have been dying because of lack of food and shelter.

IN MISSISSIPPI

Legislators Split On 3 Hot Issues

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Political tempers, growing shorter as the legislative session drags on, could explode this week on three controversial issues—congressional redistricting, liquor or separating the sheriff-tax collector office.

Lawmakers are sharply divided on each of these issues and emotional pleas are expected from both sides. However, these pleas usually are on the benefit of home folks because mostly legislators already have their minds made up.

The Senate passed a redistricting bill handily last week that combines the entire districts of Reps. Frank Smith and Jamie Whitten. A Delta proposed amendment to clip off three counties from Whitten's district failed.

When the bill reaches the House, however, supporters of the amendment claim they have enough votes to adopt the amendment but not to kill the bill.

The amendment would place Benton, Tippah and Union counties in Rep. Tom Abernethy's northeast district, sapping considerable voting strength of Whitten.

If the amendment passes, the bill would go back to the Senate for concurrence on House changes. If the Senate failed to agree, the congressional primary could turn into a statewide race for all candidates.

The measure is expected to be set for special order Tuesday or Wednesday in attempt to dispose of it quickly. Gov. Ross Barnett has said he would go along with the legislature's decision on this matter.

A bill to legalize liquor on a local option basis could be brought up at any time because it is No. 2 on the general calendar. Proponents of the measure are waiting for the best chance for release.

Rep. Philip Bryant of Lafayette County, author of the bill, spoke hopefully in view of dim prospects. He said the bill merely makes the sale of liquor legal and would allow counties to vote dry and the dry forces to fix control and taxation measures on whisky.

The wet forces are hoping that several of the revenue bills approved by a special finance committee will fail and lawmakers will be forced to turn to liquor for additional finances to balance the budget.

However, these hopes were dimmed when a key revenue measure raising taxes on cigarettes passed.

Rep. Maurice Black of Carroll County, chairman of the constitution committee, said his group approved with little opposition a resolution to permit counties to strip sheriff's of tax collecting duties and let the law enforcement officers succeed themselves.

WITH CLEAN HANDS

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Each South Charleston garbage truck now carries a tank of water, soap and paper towels. City council made the arrangements after the garbage men complained that they had no chance to wash before eating lunch.

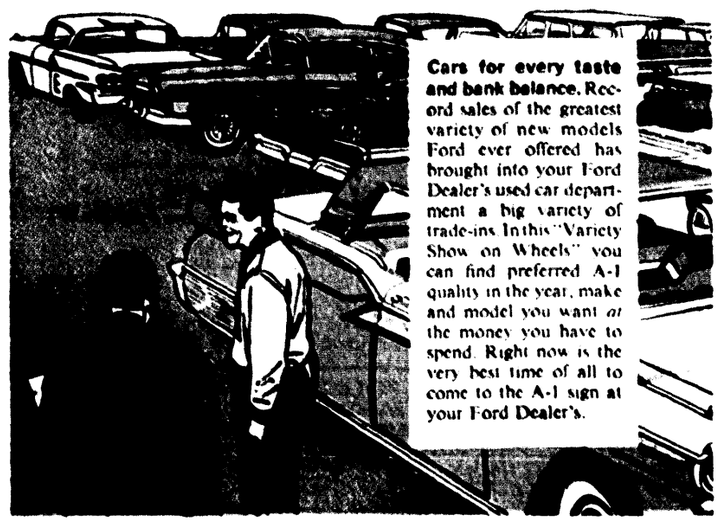
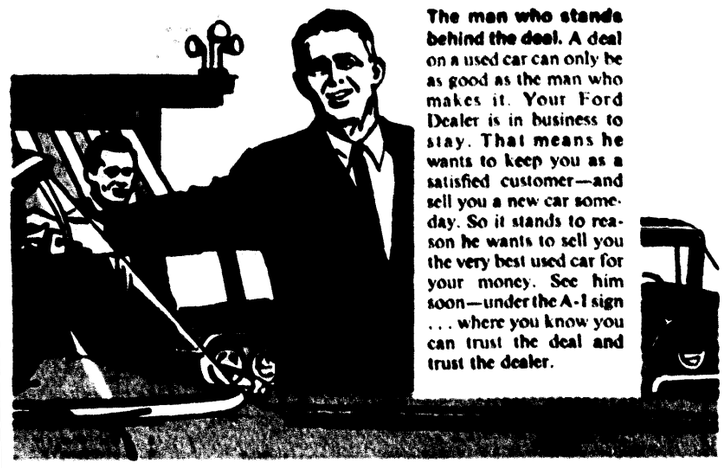
Why over 1,000,000 families a year buy at the Ford A-1 Used Car Sign!

It's this simple: all these families have found more car for their money under the A-1 sign. There is more quality in A-1 used cars because they are select used cars of demonstrated superiority . . . more value because your Ford Dealer is a volume dealer and must keep prices low . . . more choice because your Ford Dealer handles such a great variety of trade-ins . . . and more dependability in the deal because your Ford Dealer wants to treat you right—to keep you as a customer.

What an A-1 used car is—and is not. An A-1 Used Car is one which has demonstrated its superior quality to used car specialists. With an A-1 used car you are not likely to be buying someone else's problems. It has been inspected, road-tested and reconditioned if necessary . . . and it must be priced as an A-1 car value. This way A-1 stands for proven superiority in used cars—a unique form of used car "value protection."



Cars for every taste and bank balance. Record sales of the greatest variety of new models Ford ever offered has brought into your Ford Dealer's used car department a big variety of trade-ins. In this "Variety Show on Wheels" you can find preferred A-1 quality in the year, make and model you want at the money you have to spend. Right now is the very best time of all to come to the A-1 sign at your Ford Dealer's.



The man who stands behind the deal. A deal on a used car can only be as good as the man who makes it. Your Ford Dealer is in business to stay. That means he wants to keep you as a satisfied customer—and sell you a new car someday. So it stands to reason he wants to sell you the very best used car for your money. See him soon—under the A-1 sign . . . where you know you can trust the deal and trust the dealer.
